RELIEF CHORES — Troops carry ammunition to a gun emplacement at Bu Prang, near the Cambodian border, during a lull in combat. SAIGON (UPI) — Communist gunners failed for the second successive day today to shell the Bu Prang Special Forces camp and commanders on the scene said the lengthy seige appeared to have ended. They declared South Vietnam had won an important victory.

Farther north in the Central Highlands, six Americans and five South Vietnamese including a top government commander were killed when their helicopter was shot down over a battlefield.

The Bu Prang Special Forces camp, a hilltop outpost 112 miles northeast of Saigon, had been besieged since Oct. 28 by up to 5,000 North Vietnamese regulars who had pounded the camp with as many as 200 mortar and artillery rounds on some days.

"It looks like this thing is about over," one U.S. officer said. "This one was an ARVN (South Vietnamese Army) show, and for once they took the ball and ran. We consider it an important victory."

AIR STRIKES

Military sources placed Communist deaths in the 37-day battle at about 1,350, many of them as a result of massive air and artillery strikes. The Allies lost some 200 dead, including at least 12 Americans.

Many observers saw the battle as a test of South Vietnam's ability to fight alone without U.S. infantry support. The defenders were supported by American warplanes and artillery but this was in keeping with the "Vietnamization" plan, sources said.

With no Communist shells having been fired into Bu Prang through 8 p.m. today, the camp's 400 defenders were using the respite to rebuild the battered outpost and to dig deeper bunkers.

VIET VICTIM

The South Vietnamese officer killed in the helicopter crash was identified as Col. Nguyen Ba Lien, 36, who commanded 10,000 government troops as head of the 24th Special Tactical Zone. Informed government sources said the

SATURDAY SESSION

Hobby Farmer's Tax Break Safe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, hammering out a tax reform bill in a rare Saturday session, today rejected a proposal designed to crack down on businessmen who go into farming for the tax losses they can derive from it.

The proposal, offered by Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., as a substitute for a far less restrictive provision in the Senate's massive tax reform bill, was defeated 50-29.

Metcalf said his proposal would affect 14,000 well-to-do owners of "hobby farms" and raise $205 million for the government, compared to $20 million that would be raised from 3,000 persons under the Senate bill.

Hobby farmers use paper losses on their farms to offset profits from their non-farming businesses. The Metcalf proposal would have limited deductions for farm expenses to no more than $15,000 of non-farm losses.

DEADLINE FADES

The Senate hoped to complete action on tax reform today, a possibility that diminished as the debate waned on.

Republicans said the bill had become so generous in its tax cuts and its boost in Social Security benefits that it invited a veto by President Richard M. Nixon.

Democrats discounted the possibility of a veto, however.

Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., estimated the bill would cost about $9.95 billion more than when it came to the Senate floor last week.

The measure, which started out as the most extensive reform of the nation's tax laws in history, has become so laden with benefits some Republicans said it left Nixon no choice but to reject it.

"I wouldn't bet against it," said Republican Whip Robert P. Griffin of Michigan. Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., said the bill was so costly it virtually invited a national depression.

SECURITY BOOST

But over Nixon's objections and the Republicans' misgivings yesterday, the Senate voted 73 to 14 — with all the opposition coming from Republicans—to grant perhaps the biggest Social Security boost since the first checks (of $22.60 for a single person) were mailed in 1940.

Under the measure, all 25 million Americans on Social Security would receive an across-the-board 15 per cent

A TAXPAYER'S TWIST SHAKES APPEALS BOARD

Marin's Assessment Appeals Board, composed of veteran attorney Julius H. Selinger and real estate men James F. McConnell and Edward P. Morphy, normally acts with cool efficiency.

But yesterday, a property owner from Woodacre almost shook them out of their chairs at the Civic Center.

Walter E. Anderson of 17 Oakgrove Avenue demanded, not a lower assessment, but a $9,000 increase in the assessed value of his home.

County appraisers had set the value at $22,000. Anderson testified he had added a deck and improved landscaping and argued it should be raised to $31,000.

Assistant Assessor Herschel W. Johnson and his deputies said the improvements had added considerably to the home but he balked at the $31,000 figure. A value of $29,000 was recommended and the appeals board approved.

Anderson said he wanted a higher assessment because he planned to sell the home.

If that fails, he'll be faced with paying about $150 more in taxes next year as a result of his successful appeal.

$750,000 Offer For Courthouse

A Marin businessman wants to buy the Courthouse square in San Rafael for $750,000 cash, with full payment within nine months, County Administrator Alan Bruce disclosed yesterday.

Bruce and County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney will recommend to the board of supervisors Tuesday morning that a date be set for bid opening to receive the offer and any other bids, as required by law.

Maloney said the person who made the informal offer requested anonymity. Maloney said he does not know what the prospective buyer plans to do with the property.

An appraisal of the courthouse square four months ago showed that the property is currently worth about $750,000.

All bids would be accompanied by a deposit of 5 per cent of the amount bid. The rest of the purchase price must be paid to the county within nine months from the date of the bid award.

The county has failed to sell the downtown property, being abandoned in a shift of county offices to the new Civic Center, despite prolonged attempts.

Rolling Stones Play; Cars Don't Roll

COMBINED AP & UPI

TRACY—Thousands of young people converging on a rock concert in a remote hilly area near here created mammoth traffic jams today.

A free concert featuring the Rolling Stones and several other rock groups got under way at 10 a.m. at the Altamont Speedway with an estimated 40,000 persons able to be at the site off U.S. Highway 50.

As the concert got underway, eastbound traffic was backed up nearly 20 miles to the Alameda County prison farm at Santa Rita.

Even before daylight traffic had backed up eight miles in both directions. Then as the jam was seeming to clear up, concert-bound motorists began abandoning their cars on the shoulders and center strip of the highway — the only one in the area — and starting to walk to-the concert.

Radio reports from the site said a young woman went into labor at the concert. Her baby was delivered by medical personnel there.

Westbound traffic moved at near normal speeds as the crowd pulled into the speedway area as fast as the two-lane entrance permitted.

Promoters of the event expected 200,000 in the isolated area 50 miles east of San Francisco.

Site of the concert was settled upon only yesterday after hectic negotiations with the British rock group and American bands participating, Grateful Dead, Jefferson Airplane and others.

The eight-hour event at the 80-acre Altamont Speedway, 50 miles southeast of San Francisco, already had been dubbed "Woodstock West" in reference to the rock festival which attracted 300,000 in New York last summer.

The California Highway Patrol said it was unable to get its vehicles into the race track area.

"It's a free concert, not for profit," said the Rolling Stones' spokesman, John Jaymes. "It's a Christmas and Chanukah gift from the Stones and other groups to American youth."

Today's event was first set for Golden Gate Park in San Francisco and then Sears Point in Sonoma County before being shifted yesterday to its final site.

Thousands of rock fans started pouring into the speedway area last evening on foot, in cars, hitchhiking, by motorcycle, truck, and broken-down bus.

Sleep was difficult to obtain because of a motorcycle show at the speedway and the night-long sounds of construction to get ready for today's concert. Hundreds of youngsters pitched in as volunteers.

The show was to include such U.S. groups as the Grateful Dead; Jefferson Airplane; Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young and dozens of others.

Dick Carter, owner of the concert site, said he was donating the property "for the publicity and to prove I'm a good guy." He added: "Of course, if it works out, I'll probably be presenting my own paid rock concerts there in the future."

Jaymes discussed the "staggering logistics of shifting the concert site on short notice. At that very moment, he said, cargo helicopters were transporting to the new site 33,000 pounds of equipment—ranging from sound systems to lumber for the stage to 200 portable toilets. Some 400 private guards and workers also had to shift location.

Jaymes charged that the last-minute move from Sears Point would cost "at least $100,000." Negotiations between the Stones and Filmways, the Sears Point owner, broke down.

Captain Denies Ever Ordering A Massacre

NEW YORK (UPI)—Army Capt. Ernest Medina said yesterday he ordered his troops at My Lai to destroy and burn the village, kill the livestock and battle the Viet Cong. He said he never gave any orders to massacre women and children.

In a taped television interview with Mike Wallace, broadcast last night on CBS-TV's evening news with Walter Cronkite, Medina replied to a question concerning his alleged order to "level" My Lai by saying:

"The orders that I passed to my company was orders that I had received, instructions to destroy the village, burn the village, to kill the livestock and to engage the 48th V.C. battalion. I did not give any orders to massacre or shoot any women and children."

Medina said reliable intelligence sources informed him all women and children would be out of My Lai at the time of the attack. He said intelligence reports said that on March 16, 1968, the women and children would go "to market either at Song Tin or Quang Nai."

The 34-year-old native of New Mexico said he received his orders from Col. Frank Barker, task force commander, who died in a helicopter crash later in 1968.

In Washington, 1st Lt. Wiliam L. Calley Jr., the only man officially accused so far of murdering South Vietnamese villagers at My Lai last year, was advised to say nothing about his role in the alleged massacre when questioned yesterday by Pentagon investigators.

Calley's civilian lawyer, George Latimer, said he told the HILL-TO-HILL PEOPLE — By daybreak today, traffic was backed up for miles and thousands of people waited outside the Altamont speedway where the Rolling Stones and other famed rock groups opened an eight-hour concert before noon. Hub Officials, Merchants Spar Over License Fees

San Anselmo city officials defended the city council yesterday against charges that action in amending the proposed business license ordinance was improper.

The ordinance, opposed by at least 80 businessmen who have signed a petition against it, would set business license fees at $20 plus 30 cents per $1,000 of gross receipts.

The measure, subject of prolonged discussion by the council, was amended Dec. 2 at an adjourned session of the body. The original fee proposed was $20 plus 40 cents per $1,000 in gross receipts.

At that meeting, Mayor Woodrow V. Capurro and Councilman Robert M. Scott opposed taking any action, with Capurro saying that the meeting was intended to be a "work session" and that "if they (the businessmen) knew we were going to vote, there would be 100 persons out there."

Jack H. Feller Jr., a partner in a San Anselmo consulting firm, said few businessmen were present at the meeting because the council had indicated "no public participation in this session was to be expected or permitted."

Although billed as a "work session," the meeting was technically an adjourned meeting, which gives public bodies power to conduct any business that would normally be proper at a

ST. LOUIS GLITTERS FOR CHRISTMAS

'Chicago 7' Defense Gets Its Inning

By TONY FULLER

CHICAGO (UPI)—The prosecution completed presentation of its case against the "Chicago Seven" yesterday, on the trial's 50th day. The defense immediately asked for a directed acquittal.

Government presentation ended in the unconventional style which has been the hallmark of the trial.

The announcement by U.S. Attorney Thomas A. Foran that "the government rests" came after U.S. District Court Judge Julius J. Hoffman shut off cross-examination by the defense of the final witness. Hoffman finally told defense attorney Leonard Weinglass to sit down when he persisted in a line of questioning the judge deemed improper.

The judge dismissed the jury and asked defense attorneys if they had "anything to say." The defendants broke into laughter and chief defense attorney William Kunstler said, "Just a sigh of relief, your honor."

But Kunstler quickly added the motion for a directed verdict and said defense argument on the request would be "extensive."

"It will be only as extensive as I permit it to be," Hoffman replied.

Kunstler asked Hoffman if the defendants would be required to appear Monday, the date set for consideration of the motion.

"Yes, sir, I think it's important that they be here," the judge said, smiling. "After all, I may grant your motion."

Defendants Abbie Hoffman and Lee Weiner waved their hands in the air. "Ya, ya," Abbie Hoffman said. "We'll be waiting for that."

The judge, still smiling, walked out the door.

Earlier Hoffman quashed a defense subpoena of confidential records of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and a demand that FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover testify.

The subpoena demanded Hoover produce all FBI reports on the defendants and alleged coconspirators, including reports resulting from electronic surveillance, and the addresses of all agents and informers.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Schultz called the request "a fishing expedition . . . a fantastic request."

Kunstler said the FBI is "a huge federal agency with an army of informers and agents who have been utilized in every state against these defendants." He said the defense "can't possibly know the names" of agents whose testimony might help the defendants' case.

The government presented 54 witnesses in its effort to prove the defendants conspired to incite riots during the 1968 Democratic National Convention. The trial transcript already includes nearly 10,000 pages of material, which costs the government about $1 a page.

An additional $50,000 bill has been run up at the hotel where 14 jurors and alternates have been sequestered since late September. And pay for jurors, at $25 a day, adds $24,500 to costs.

Grand Jury Hears Murder Tale; Girl Fears Manson Witchcraft

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The strange story of "The Manson Family," whose members are prime suspects in the bizarre Sharon Tate murders, was described yesterday to a county grand jury by a pretty 21-year-old member. But Susan Atkins now fears a mystical spell will be cast on her by the group's hypnotic leader.

Miss Atkins appeared before the grand jury without being granted immunity from prosecution. She testified behind locked doors for two hours and 15 minutes, relating her earlier story of the "band in black" which she saw stab and shoot and kill actress Sharon Tate and four others in August.

Miss Atkins was asked how she felt about informing on the weird, nomadic cult whose members are accused in a total of eight senseless slayings.

"Dead," she replied before being escorted away by her attorney, Richard Caballero.

Caballero said later Miss Atkins fears her testimony may make her a "marked woman" through the black magic and mystical spells with which the leader of the "family" commune, hypnotic-eyed Charles Manson, 35, once held his followers.

"Charlie would, in effect, conjure up a vision detrimental to her in his mind and then transfer it to her mind and then she would know if she is marked," the attorney said.

Caballero persuaded the slim brunette to testify, hoping her information would aid her in escaping the death penalty. He said she cooperated fully with the 21 jurors, telling them "whatever they asked her about."

The prosectuion is seeking indictments in the Tate murders and, the murders of supermarket owner Leno La Bianca and his wife a night later in their exclusive Los Feliz District home.

In addition to Miss Atkins and Manson, who is now in jail in Independence (Inyo County), on auto theft charges, murder indictments are being sought against Charles Watson, 24; Patricia Krenwinkel, 21; Linda Kasabian, 20; Steve Brogan, 23, and Leslie Sankston, about 20.

Miss Atkins was among seven witnesses to appear before the grand jury. Also testifying was Terry Melcher, 27, son of Doris Day, who lived in the Benedict Canyon estate before Miss Tate and her husband, director Roman Polanski, rented it. Manson is said to have a grudge against Melcher because he thwarted a songwriting ambition of the bearded cultist.

Gwen Stone Art Work On Display

An exhibition of collages and sculpture by San Rafael artist Gwen Stone is now on display at the Newman Gallery, 2700 Dwight Way in Berkeley.

The sculpture consists of three pieces of hollow core polychromed plywood construction which have not been shown together previously. The largest six by nine feet, is called "Rasmusen Facade" for Mill Valley artist Henry Rasmusen, whose suggestion inspired the sculpture.

The collages are book linen and are of larger format than the artist's earlier work in the same medium. The show runs through December, with gallery hours from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. seven days a week.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Lodge Comes Home

PARIS (AP) — Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge left for home today after 10 months as head of the U.S. delegation at the deadlocked Vietnam peace talks.

Among those seeing him off were Philip Habib, his former deputy who now becomes acting head of the U.S. delegation, and Pham Dang Lam, head of the South Vietnamese delegation.

Russ Plan Car

MOSCOW (PA) — The Soviet Institute for Automobiles and Roads has set its sights on building the world's fastest car. The newspaper Pravda Ukrainy reported engineers are designing a car to reach the speed of sound, 742 miles an hour.

The vehicle will have gas turbine engines capable of delivering 5,500 horsepower. It will be about 30 feet long.

Because of the high speeds, the first tests are to be made using radio signals rather than a human being, chief engineer Vladimir K. Nikitin said.

Protest Sentence

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Vietnam war protester was sentenced to a lesson in American history yesterday as an alternative to a term in jail for his part in disorders at an antiwar rally last year.

Judge Robert A. Latrone ordered the 19-year-old offender, Willie Newsome, to visit a citizenship ceremony, the Pennsylvania Historical Society, Independence Hall and the Betsy Ross house. He also was told to attend three classes on constitutional law at Temple University and spend a day with the city archivist, then return to court with proof he had heeded the order.

Pig Bowl Sales

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Sponsors of the "Pig Bowl" between Ann Arbor police and Washtenaw County sheriff's deputies say they have sold 2,000 tickets.

The price for a ticket to the tackle game is $1.50 or a toy of equivalent value. Proceeds will go to needy children.

Censorship Lifted

NEW DELHI (AP) — Censors cut kissing and nude love scenes from movies in India, but the ban has beenlifte d for the 4th international film festival which opened a two-week run last night. The city's 11 movie houses are jammed, lines are long outside and scalpers report good business.

Moon Rocks Draw

NEW YORK (AP) — Three-quarters of an ounce of moon rock helped attract the greatest monthly attendance in the history of the American Museum of Natural History, 405,000 visitors, during November.

The rock was brought back by the Apollo 11's first men on the moon. It is on loan from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Russ Moon Hopes?

LACONIA, N.H. (AP) — Dr. Wernher von Braun says he is "convinced the Russians tried to beat us to the moon and lost."

The German-born rocket scientist, director of the Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala., made the comment in a speech before the Laconia Chamber of Commerce last night.

He did not detail the reasons for his conclusion.

Thai Peril Told

BANGKOK (AP) — Two divisions of Communist Chinese troops in northern Laos pose a direct threat to Thailand, the commander-in-chief of the Thai army said today.

Treaty Pledge

TOKYO (AP) — Government officials said today Japan will sign the nuclear nonproliferation treaty early next year if Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's Liberal-Democratic party wins the Dec. 27 general election.

Although Japan has been urged to sign, some members of Sato's party are opposed. They say they are concerned that unilateral inspections by an international group might hamper the development of nuclear power in Japan for peaceful uses.

Traffic Troubles

ROME (AP) — Rome's new traffic commissioner presented his constituents with a bittersweet Christmas present today.

For pedestrians he banned cars from the Trevi Fountain piazza of "Three Coins in the Fountain" fame. For drivers, Carlo Rosato promised heavy fines for rush hour parking violations and more towaways.

Rush hour parking is banned but thousands of motorists have obtained special permits from the city or arrange for a free-lance parking attendant to make a deal with the cop on the beat. The result is traffic chaos from dawn to dusk in the ancient city's streets.

Rosato's "turn of the screw," as the city's newspapers nicknamed it, will be in effect from Dec. 8 to the 24, but if successful, he said he may make the measures permanent.

Panther Scuffle

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Four members of the Black Panther party battled with eight policemen in a short, violent struggle outside the door of Police Chief C. M. Kelley's office yesterday afternoon.

The Panthers said they wanted to attend a news conference Kelley had called in his office. Kelley had issued orders that they were not to be admitted, so the eight officers barred their way, leading to the scuffle.

In the news conference, Chief Kelley repeated his denial that he had allowed confiscated firearms to be transferred to right-wing groups as the Panthers have charged.

Sunday Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sunday will be a working day for senators who sit on Sen. William Proxmire's financial institutions subcommittee.

Proxmire, D-Wis., called the unprecedented session yesterday after Republicans refused to allow his subcommittee to meet then. The GOP senators objected to a Friday session because the tax reform bill was under consideration.

The subcommittee will conduct a hearing on problems caused by mailing millions of unsolicited credit cards. "There is no other time open to us," Proxmire said.

Ships Tied Up

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A crew dispute between Matson Navigation Co. and the Marine Firemen's Union had 22 ships stalled today in the western states.

Two more vessels were tied up yesterday: the President Harding in Los Angeles and the Guam Bear in San Francisco.

The dispute involves the number of men Matson will hire aboard the unlicensed engineering departments of two container ships under construction in Baltimore.

Matson says six men in each ship will be sufficient. The union demands nine crewmen for each of the "super sophisticated" freighters.

Drug Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight manufacturers have been ordered by the Food and Drug Administration to recall about 40 million capsules of a widely used drug used to fight infection because of doubts about its effectiveness.

The FDA's action yesterday against the drug oxytetracycline may spark a controversy over whether all drugs of the same chemical compound are equally effective.

The decision followed up a complaint by Charles Pfizer Co., original patent holder of the drug, that equal doses of it now manufactured by other companies failed to produce the same blood levels as its version.

The FDA said it confirmed Pfizer's findings on the basis of its own studies.

Aid Bill Stalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will have to wait until next week to wind up action on the foreign aid bill because of a vanishing act by its chairman, Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark.

Fulbright, in no hurry to complete action on the measure, sent word yesterday he thought the committee should quit until Monday. When the chairman didn't show up, the committee gave up.

"We had about 15 minutes to go" to complete action on the bill, said Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt.

Star's Son Guilty

INDIO (UPI)—The 37-year-old son of the late actor John Barrymore yesterday pleaded no contest to a charge of possession of dangerous drugs, found in his car after an Aug. 4 accident. He will be sentenced Dec. 29.

James Healey, the attorney for John Drew Barrymore, changed an innocent plea before Superior Court Judge Karl Lynn Davis and requested the charge be reduced from a felony to a misdemeanor.

Davis said he would decide on the request before sentencing Barrymore. Under a felony possession charge, Barrymore could receive from one to 10 years in prison, but the sentence on a misdemeanor could not be more than one year in the county jail.

Battlewagon Role

BREMERTON, Wash. (UPI) — The retired U.S. battleship Missouri has been designated a public fallout shelter and stocked to accommodate 2.200 persons with food, water, medical supplies, sanitary equipment and radiological monitoring devices.

The Missouri lies in berth at the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard as part of the Navy's mothball fleet.

Reagan To Travel

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan will attend the Republican Governors' Conference at Hot Springs, Ark. Thursday through Saturday. Reagan is conference chairman.

He'll return to Sacramento on Dec. 14.

ST. LOUIS GLITTERS FOR CHRISTMAS

While the city's 85-foot Christmas tree glows in downtown St. Louis and the huge Gateway Arch gleams by reflected light in the background, a party of St. Louis citizens was arguing with Tacoma, Wash. boosters over who has the nation's tallest tree. The Westerners claimed to have a tree 100 feet tall. (UPI Telephoto)

'Chicago 7' Defense Gets Its Inning

By TONY FULLER

CHICAGO (UPI)—The prosecution completed presentation of its case against the "Chicago Seven" yesterday, on the trial's 50th day. The defense immediately asked for a directed acquittal.

Government presentation ended in the unconventional style which has been the hallmark of the trial.

The announcement by U.S. Attorney Thomas A. Foran that "the government rests" came after U.S. District Court Judge Julius J. Hoffman shut off cross-examination by the defense of the final witness. Hoffman finally told defense attorney Leonard Weinglass to sit down when he persisted in a line of questioning the judge deemed improper.

The judge dismissed the jury and asked defense attorneys if they had "anything to say." The defendants broke into laughter and chief defense attorney William Kunstler said, "Just a sigh of relief, your honor."

But Kunstler quickly added the motion for a directed verdict and said defense argument on the request would be "extensive."

"It will be only as extensive as I permit it to be," Hoffman replied.

Kunstler asked Hoffman if the defendants would be required to appear Monday, the date set for consideration of the motion.

"Yes, sir, I think it's important that they be here," the judge said, smiling. "After all, I may grant your motion."

Defendants Abbie Hoffman and Lee Weiner waved their hands in the air. "Ya, ya," Abbie Hoffman said. "We'll be waiting for that."

The judge, still smiling, walked out the door.

Earlier Hoffman quashed a defense subpoena of confidential records of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and a demand that FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover testify.

The subpoena demanded Hoover produce all FBI reports on the defendants and alleged coconspirators, including reports resulting from electronic surveillance, and the addresses of all agents and informers.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Schultz called the request "a fishing expedition . . . a fantastic request."

Kunstler said the FBI is "a huge federal agency with an army of informers and agents who have been utilized in every state against these defendants." He said the defense "can't possibly know the names" of agents whose testimony might help the defendants' case.

The government presented 54 witnesses in its effort to prove the defendants conspired to incite riots during the 1968 Democratic National Convention. The trial transcript already includes nearly 10,000 pages of material, which costs the government about $1 a page.

An additional $50,000 bill has been run up at the hotel where 14 jurors and alternates have been sequestered since late September. And pay for jurors, at $25 a day, adds $24,500 to costs.

Grand Jury Hears Murder Tale; Girl Fears Manson Witchcraft

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The strange story of "The Manson Family," whose members are prime suspects in the bizarre Sharon Tate murders, was described yesterday to a county grand jury by a pretty 21-year-old member. But Susan Atkins now fears a mystical spell will be cast on her by the group's hypnotic leader.

Miss Atkins appeared before the grand jury without being granted immunity from prosecution. She testified behind locked doors for two hours and 15 minutes, relating her earlier story of the "band in black" which she saw stab and shoot and kill actress Sharon Tate and four others in August.

Miss Atkins was asked how she felt about informing on the weird, nomadic cult whose members are accused in a total of eight senseless slayings.

"Dead," she replied before being escorted away by her attorney, Richard Caballero.

Caballero said later Miss Atkins fears her testimony may make her a "marked woman" through the black magic and mystical spells with which the leader of the "family" commune, hypnotic-eyed Charles Manson, 35, once held his followers.

"Charlie would, in effect, conjure up a vision detrimental to her in his mind and then transfer it to her mind and then she would know if she is marked," the attorney said.

Caballero persuaded the slim brunette to testify, hoping her information would aid her in escaping the death penalty. He said she cooperated fully with the 21 jurors, telling them "whatever they asked her about."

The prosectuion is seeking indictments in the Tate murders and, the murders of supermarket owner Leno La Bianca and his wife a night later in their exclusive Los Feliz District home.

In addition to Miss Atkins and Manson, who is now in jail in Independence (Inyo County), on auto theft charges, murder indictments are being sought against Charles Watson, 24; Patricia Krenwinkel, 21; Linda Kasabian, 20; Steve Brogan, 23, and Leslie Sankston, about 20.

Miss Atkins was among seven witnesses to appear before the grand jury. Also testifying was Terry Melcher, 27, son of Doris Day, who lived in the Benedict Canyon estate before Miss Tate and her husband, director Roman Polanski, rented it. Manson is said to have a grudge against Melcher because he thwarted a songwriting ambition of the bearded cultist.

Two Public Discussions Planned On Poverty War

Marin residents will have a chance to discuss programs and goals of the county's antipoverty program at two public meetings scheduled next week.

The programs are sponsored by the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council, according to EOC executive director, W. Robert Lomax Jr., to "give the people of Marin their best opportunity to influence the course of the war on poverty in this community."

The meeting for southern Marin will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Manzanita Center, 630 Drake Avenue, Marin City. A northern Marin meeting will be Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at 875 Grant Avenue in Novato.

Persons needing transportation to the Novato meeting may use a free bus which will leave from in front of the Courthouse in San Rafael at 7 p.m.

Sun Lamps Counteract Chemicals In Hair

MONTREAL (AP) — Experts say a daily two-minute session under an ultra-violet lamp will give new life to limp hair which has been abused with constant coloring, setting, teasing and spraying.

Five or 10 minutes of direct sunlight on the head and scalp each day is also a good conditioner.

Sonomans Set Guns-Butter Town Meeting

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — People for a Better Society, a Sonoma County group, has called a public meeting to plan a countywide "town meeting" to discuss the conflict between the nation's military and domestic needs.

The planning meeting will be at 2 p.m. Dec. 14 in the faculty cafeteria at Santa Rosa Junior College's Student Union Building.

The society is a "nonpartisan political action group," said its president, Jacques Levy of Santa Rosa. Its membership is more than 100, he said.

The aim of the town meeting, to be held early in January, is to draw up a list of specific local needs in such fields as education, health, housing, pollution control, transportation and recreation. This list, and the limited funds available for such needs, then will be contrasted to the amount of money spent on the armed forces.

The list will be forwarded to Washington, where a coalition of nationwide groups, from churches to labor unions, is planning a "national assembly" and lobbying drive in the next congressional session.

The average insured family has $21,080 of life insurance.

LONDON (AP) — U.S. Secretary of the Treasury David M. Kennedy met today with British Chancellor of the Exchequer Roy Jenkins for talks on gold and other financial questions.

Pleads Guilty To Amphetamine

Thomas Keynard Driskill, 20, of Novato, has pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of possessing marijuana July 29 in Mill Valley. A second charge of possessing marijuana at the same time was dismissed.

Judge Peter Allen Smith on Thursday ordered Driskill to appear in superior court Dec. 15 for setting of sentencing date on the felony conviction.

Driskill was arrested after he ran from police who were trying to arrest him on a traffic warrant. A search revealed the suspected weed and amphetamine, they said.

Two Public Discussions Planned On Poverty War

Marin residents will have a chance to discuss programs and goals of the county's antipoverty program at two public meetings scheduled next week.

The programs are sponsored by the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council, according to EOC executive director, W. Robert Lomax Jr., to "give the people of Marin their best opportunity to influence the course of the war on poverty in this community."

The meeting for southern Marin will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Manzanita Center, 630 Drake Avenue, Marin City. A northern Marin meeting will be Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at 875 Grant Avenue in Novato.

Persons needing transportation to the Novato meeting may use a free bus which will leave from in front of the Courthouse in San Rafael at 7 p.m.

Sun Lamps Counteract Chemicals In Hair

MONTREAL (AP) — Experts say a daily two-minute session under an ultra-violet lamp will give new life to limp hair which has been abused with constant coloring, setting, teasing and spraying.

Five or 10 minutes of direct sunlight on the head and scalp each day is also a good conditioner.

Sonomans Set Guns-Butter Town Meeting

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — People for a Better Society, a Sonoma County group, has called a public meeting to plan a countywide "town meeting" to discuss the conflict between the nation's military and domestic needs.

The planning meeting will be at 2 p.m. Dec. 14 in the faculty cafeteria at Santa Rosa Junior College's Student Union Building.

The society is a "nonpartisan political action group," said its president, Jacques Levy of Santa Rosa. Its membership is more than 100, he said.

The aim of the town meeting, to be held early in January, is to draw up a list of specific local needs in such fields as education, health, housing, pollution control, transportation and recreation. This list, and the limited funds available for such needs, then will be contrasted to the amount of money spent on the armed forces.

The list will be forwarded to Washington, where a coalition of nationwide groups, from churches to labor unions, is planning a "national assembly" and lobbying drive in the next congressional session.

The average insured family has $21,080 of life insurance.

ROCKET TRAIL IN MARIN SKY

Marin County residents, as well as others throughout Northern California and Nevada, were treated to a colorful spectacle about 5:45 p.m. yesterday when an intercontinental ballistic missile launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base roared into space. I/J photographer Jim Kean captured the rocket's journey through the Marin sky. Vandenberg officials said the twilight phenomenon was caused by exhaust from the rocket solidifying into ice above 3,000 feet. Sunlight illuminating the ice crystals made the missile's trail visible from the ground.

Road Mishaps Injure Four Motorists

Four persons, including a year-old baby, have been treated for minor injuries in separate accidents on Marin roads, according to California Highway Patrol reports.

Nancy Harris, 18, of 123 Esmeyer Drive, San Rafael, was treated at Marin General Hospital for minor scalp cuts.

According to the CHP, she was a passenger in a car driven by Anthony J. Bricca, 19, of Sylvan Lane, Ross, which was westbound on Kent Avenue at 11:40 a.m. yesterday when it collided at Bridge Road with a car driven by Janice C. Woolston, 18, of St. Isabelles School, Terra Linda.

Angela L. Horn, 12 months, a passenger in a car driven by her mother, Catherine D. Horn of 772 Ignacio Boulevard, Novato, was treated for facial cuts at Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital.

The Horn car was eastbound on Nave Drive at the Highway 101 offramp at 4:15 p.m. yesterday when it collided with a car driven by Robert G. Waldman, 49, of 445 Alameda de la Loma, Novato, which was traveling on the highway exit, the CHP reported.

Mountford J. Mardevich, 36, of 43 Bereas Drive, Kentfield, was treated for a scalp cut at Marin General Hospital. His car hit a center divider in front of Marin Catholic High School as he was westbound on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard at 2:20 a.m. today according to the CHP.

Grant F. Garl, 17, of 853 Tamalpais Avenue, Novato, was treated for a fractured shoulder and cut chin at Novato General Hospital. His southbound car skidded on a curve on the Petaluma-Point Reyes Road 1.5 miles south of Novato Boulevard at 11 p.m. yesterday, according to CHP reports.

One of Canada's outstanding collections of totem poles is displayed in British Columbia's Thunderbird Park in Victoria.

LSD Sale Count Is Reinstated

A charge of selling LSD—dropped last month against Frank Joseph Bonomolo, 22, of Petaluma, when the district attorney's office lost the evidence — was refiled yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

The district attorney's office reported that the alleged LSD, sold to a drug agent, had been located again.

Bonomolo again pleaded innocent to the charge of selling seven capsules and his case was set for preliminary hearing Jan. 9.

His younger brother, George Tipton Bonomolo, 19, is scheduled to go on trial the week of Dec. 15 in Marin Superior Court on a charge of selling marijuana.

Authorities have said the pair sold narcotics at their father's Novato service station.

Three Arrested On Drug Charges

Three persons were arrested on suspicion of possession of marijuana by Sausalito police early today, but details of the arrests were not available.

James Charles Erwin, 22, of 90 Hoag Street, San Rafael, and Joan Susan Barnett, 19, 72 The Alameda, San Anselmo, were arrested about 1 a.m. Neither was able to post $500 bail and will appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Judith Ann Thomas, 20, of 645 North San Pablo Road, San Rafael, was arrested about 3 a.m. She was unable to post $750 bail and will also appear Monday in court.

Whiplash Victim In Good Condition

WHIPLASH VICTIM 114-2

A 25-year-old Novato woman was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital, where she is recovering from a severe whiplash received Thursday in a San Francisco automobile accident.

Injured was Joan Seeback of 49 San Felipe Way. Details of the accident were unavailable.

victims also included an American colonel and two South Vietnamese majors.

The U.S. Command said the names of the American victims would not be released until their families had been notified.

Government spokesmen said the "Huey" chopper was shot down about 16 miles north-northeast of Kontum or 275 miles north-northeast of Saigon while observing an operation of the 42nd South Vietnamese Regiment and a Civilian Irregular Defense Group militia unit.

Lien was the government commander in the fighting at Hill 875 in October-November of 1967. That fight, the bloodiest of the war, cost the lives of more than 700 Americans and about 1,641 Communists west of Dak To, about 30 miles north of Kontum.

Lien also was the South Vietnamese commander during the 56-day siege at the Ben Het Special Forces camp earlier this year. That action left about 1,850 Communists dead.

He was one of the junior officers involved in the November 1963 coup which overthrew the late President Ngo Dinh Diem.

regular session.

"To take such action, in stealth, is demonstrative of the contempt the city council must have for their constituent, overburdened, businessmen-taxpayers," Feller charged. "Such action is certainly undemocratic, although it is probably legal."

City Mgr. Alfred C. Kaeppel, supported by City Atty. John G. Buresh, defended the city council's action. He said the ordinance was properly amended under adjourned meeting provisions and that first and final reading and adoption is set for Tuesday night's regular council session.

He said the ordinance does not require two readings, as is the usual procedure, because the measure is an emergency one, set to go into effect Jan. 1. That is when business license fees are regularly due.

Tuesday night's meeting is set for 8 p.m. in city hall.

Youth Convicted On Weed Charge

Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court found Mark W. Goldberg, 19, of Lagunitas, guilty yesterday of possessing marijuana Jan. 27 when arrested for shoplifting.

Hearing the case without a jury, the judge ruled, however, that Goldberg was innocent of a charge of possessing a pipe for smoking the marijuana.

He set sentencing for Jan. 26

The shoplifting charge dismissed earlier when Judge Wilson ruled that superior court had no jurisdiction over the misdemeanor offense.

Goldberg was arrested when owners of an antique shop in San Rafael complained to police. Officers said they found marijuana when searching him.

Two More Victims Of 'Death Squadrons'

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Two more bullet-riddled bodies found yesterday brought to 13 the unidentified presumed victims of Brazil's so-called death squadrons discovered in the past 48 hours.

The death squadrons, said to be composed of policemen who act as vigilantes in off-duty hours, are believed responsible for 500 killings in recent years. Their motto is "the best criminal is a dead criminal." Brazil has no death penalty except for terrorism.

26-year-old soldier not to discuss the subject during his appearance before a special board established to determine whether a low-level Army inquiry soon after the March 16, 1968, incident amounted to little more than a whitewash.

The investigating panel headed by Lt. Gen. William R. Peers, interrogated Calley in absolute secrecy for nearly three hours and the content of his testimony was not made public. When the questioning ended in mid-afternoon, Calley, accompanied by Maj. Kenneth Raby, his military attorney, flew back to Ft. Benning, Ga., without speaking to reporters.

Calley, a platoon leader in the My Lai engagement, has been ordered court-martialed on charges of premeditated murder of at least 109 civilians the day of the assault. His trial is expected to begin early next year at Fort Benning, where he is stationed.

Trio Selected To Help Pick Schools' Chief

A three-man subcommittee to establish criteria for selection of a permanent district superintendent was appointed yesterday by the Tamalpais High School District board.

At a special meeting, the board named Frank A. Cassou, district financial officer; Dr. Walter Lee, a district psychologist, and Duane F. Miller, a teacher at Sir Francis Drake High School to the committee. All are members of Next Stop Analysis, a 12-member committee including principals, teachers and board members, which has been working on procedures for choosing a superintendent.

The board also discussed who should be included on a screening committee to interview prospective candidates for the position and planned to hire three professional consultants to aid in the screening.

The text of a brochure to announce the position was approved at yesterday's meeting.

Licenses To Get Orange Stickers

One-by-two-inch orange stickers will be mailed to vehicle owners renewing their registrations for 1970, the Department of Motor Vehicles has announced.

Statewide distribution of gold-on-blue license plates will not be made this year, a DMV spokesman said.

Transition from the yellow-on-black plates is being geared to the rate of replacement of old cars by new and by licenses issued to cars that have come here from out of state, he explained.

Blue-on-gold plates may be obtained for a fee of three dollars beginning March 1, he added.

Deadline for registration renewal is Feb. 4.

Sale Of LSD Is Admitted

Terry Tsegelatos, 25, of San Francisco, admitted yesterday in Marin Superior Court that he sold LSD to a Fairfax policewoman on May 20, 1968.

A second charge of offering to sell her mescaline was dropped.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson set sentencing for Feb. 2.

Two Honored For Acting Abilities

Kathy Noyes and John Melvin, both seniors, were named best actress and actor last night at Marin Catholic High School for their performances in three one-act plays.

Lisa Purcell, a sophomore, and Dan Yarbough, a junior, were named best supporting actress and actor.

San Rafael High Club Visits Rock

The Indians occupying Alcatraz received a visit yesterday from members of the Interact Club of San Rafael High School, who carried clothing, food and coal.

The students collected the goods at school and stored them in a classroom.

Making the trip, called a "humanitarian effort" by the students, were Charles Parmele, club president; Paul Robinson, Richard Scatena, Dane Faber, Robert Aroyan, Richard Haenggi, and a faculty adviser, Richard Delgado.

The Interact Club is Rotary-sponsored.

Crash Injures Fairfax Woman

A 24-year-old Fairfax woman sustained minor injuries today in a two-car collision at the Hub intersection.

San Anselmo police reported that Kathleen M. Lakusky, of 124 Toyon Drive, was injured about 12:10 a.m. when a car driven by Adolf Hengesbach, 33, of 216 Humboldt Street, San Rafael, turned into a one-way lane accidentally, causing a head-on collision.

Miss Lukusky was treated for a cut lip and scalp at Marin General Hospital.

More Honors For Neil Armstrong

BEVERLY HILLS (UPI) — Astronaut Neil Armstrong, the first man on the moon, was presented with the Kitty Hawk Memorial Award yesterday at the annual Wright Brothers memorial banquet attended by some 800 aviation pioneers.

The occasion was the 66th anniversary of powered flight by man.

Armstrong accepted similar awards for "outstanding contributions to the advancement of flight" on behalf of his companions on the Apollo 11 flight, astronauts Edwin F. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins.

Overdose Victim Out Of Hospital

A 51-year-old Mill Valley man has been discharged from Marin General Hospital after being treated for an overdose of pills.

Jack Wesley Newman of 107 East Strawberry Drive was taken to the hospital Wednesday after park rangers found him unconscious in a car at Stinson Beach State Park. The rangers called sheriff's deputies, who said that Newman's car contained a half-empty liquor bottle and partially filled vials of pills.

Sound Equipment Taken From Auto

A car radio, stereo and an unspecified number of stereo tapes were reported stolen Thursday from Kathy M. Jack, 4 Miramar Drive, San Rafael.

She told sheriff's deputies the items, valued at $295, were taken from her car while it was parked at the Koch Luggage Co. in Corte Madera.

San Quentin Aide Stabbed On Job By An Inmate

A San Quentin Prison factory superintendent was stabbed in the back, though not seriously, with a pair of six-inch scissors yesterday.

Associate Warden James W. L. Park said David Kahl, 42, of 1418 Debra Drive, Petaluma, was standing at a work table in the clothing factory about 3:45 p.m. when stabbed with trimming scissors that had been taped wide open.

Park said that Kahl, a civilian employee at the prison, was treated first at San Quentin then released to his own doctor.

Prison officials are holding Harland L. Black, 23, a life termer convicted of kidnapping in Orange County, in connection with the stabbing. Black has been at the prison for just over a month.

Park said there was apparent motive for the stabbing.

Conviction of assault by a life termer carries a possible death penalty.

Jail, Fines For Drunken Driving

Three persons were sentenced for drunken driving yesterday by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court.

MOUNT TAMALPAIS CEMETERY
Natural Marin Beauty
for those who've loved our county

The beauty of Mount Tamalpais Cemetery is typically Marin. Here in a setting of soft, rolling hills and lovely vistas are Marin's native trees and shrubs, accented by beautiful lawns and flowers.

For over 90 years leading Marin families have chosen Mount Tamalpais as a final resting place. One good reason is the substantial endowment fund which assures the care and maintenance of this cemetery in the years ahead.

We invite your inspection of this peaceful site. Our staff is always ready to answer your questions and describe Mount Tamalpais facilities

ROCKET TRAIL IN MARIN SKY

Marin County residents, as well as others throughout Northern California and Nevada, were treated to a colorful spectacle about 5:45 p.m. yesterday when an intercontinental ballistic missile launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base roared into space. I/J photographer Jim Kean captured the rocket's journey through the Marin sky. Vandenberg officials said the twilight phenomenon was caused by exhaust from the rocket solidifying into ice above 3,000 feet. Sunlight illuminating the ice crystals made the missile's trail visible from the ground.

Road Mishaps Injure Four Motorists

Four persons, including a year-old baby, have been treated for minor injuries in separate accidents on Marin roads, according to California Highway Patrol reports.

Nancy Harris, 18, of 123 Esmeyer Drive, San Rafael, was treated at Marin General Hospital for minor scalp cuts.

According to the CHP, she was a passenger in a car driven by Anthony J. Bricca, 19, of Sylvan Lane, Ross, which was westbound on Kent Avenue at 11:40 a.m. yesterday when it collided at Bridge Road with a car driven by Janice C. Woolston, 18, of St. Isabelles School, Terra Linda.

Angela L. Horn, 12 months, a passenger in a car driven by her mother, Catherine D. Horn of 772 Ignacio Boulevard, Novato, was treated for facial cuts at Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital.

The Horn car was eastbound on Nave Drive at the Highway 101 offramp at 4:15 p.m. yesterday when it collided with a car driven by Robert G. Waldman, 49, of 445 Alameda de la Loma, Novato, which was traveling on the highway exit, the CHP reported.

Mountford J. Mardevich, 36, of 43 Bereas Drive, Kentfield, was treated for a scalp cut at Marin General Hospital. His car hit a center divider in front of Marin Catholic High School as he was westbound on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard at 2:20 a.m. today according to the CHP.

Grant F. Garl, 17, of 853 Tamalpais Avenue, Novato, was treated for a fractured shoulder and cut chin at Novato General Hospital. His southbound car skidded on a curve on the Petaluma-Point Reyes Road 1.5 miles south of Novato Boulevard at 11 p.m. yesterday, according to CHP reports.

One of Canada's outstanding collections of totem poles is displayed in British Columbia's Thunderbird Park in Victoria.

LSD Sale Count Is Reinstated

A charge of selling LSD—dropped last month against Frank Joseph Bonomolo, 22, of Petaluma, when the district attorney's office lost the evidence — was refiled yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

The district attorney's office reported that the alleged LSD, sold to a drug agent, had been located again.

Bonomolo again pleaded innocent to the charge of selling seven capsules and his case was set for preliminary hearing Jan. 9.

His younger brother, George Tipton Bonomolo, 19, is scheduled to go on trial the week of Dec. 15 in Marin Superior Court on a charge of selling marijuana.

Authorities have said the pair sold narcotics at their father's Novato service station.

Three Arrested On Drug Charges

Three persons were arrested on suspicion of possession of marijuana by Sausalito police early today, but details of the arrests were not available.

James Charles Erwin, 22, of 90 Hoag Street, San Rafael, and Joan Susan Barnett, 19, 72 The Alameda, San Anselmo, were arrested about 1 a.m. Neither was able to post $500 bail and will appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Judith Ann Thomas, 20, of 645 North San Pablo Road, San Rafael, was arrested about 3 a.m. She was unable to post $750 bail and will also appear Monday in court.

Whiplash Victim In Good Condition

WHIPLASH VICTIM 114-2

A 25-year-old Novato woman was reported in good condition today at Marin G neral Hospital, where she is recovering from a severe whiplash received Thursday in a San Francisco automobile accident.

Injured was Joan Seeback of 49 San Felipe Way. Details of the accident were unavailable.

WAR

victims also included an American colonel and two South Vietnamese majors.

The U.S. Command said the names of the American victims would not be released until their families had been notified.

Government spokesmen said the "Huey" chopper was shot down about 16 miles north-northeast of Kontum or 275 miles north-northeast of Saigon while observing an operation of the 42nd South Vietnamese Regiment and a Civilian Irregular Defense Group militia unit.

Lien was the government commander in the fighting at Hill 875 in October-November of 1967. That fight, the bloodiest of the war, cost the lives of more than 700 Americans and about 1,641 Communists west of Dak To, about 30 miles north of Kontum.

Lien also was the South Vietnamese commander during the 56-day siege at the Ben Het Special Forces camp earlier this year. That action left about 1,850 Communists dead.

He was one of the junior officers involved in the November 1963 coup which overthrew the late President Ngo Dinh Diem.

regular session.

"To take such action, in stealth, is demonstrative of the contempt the city council must have for their constituent, overburdened, businessmen-taxpayers," Feller charged. "Such action is certainly undemocratic, although it is probably legal."

City Mgr. Alfred C. Kaeppel, supported by City Atty. John G. Buresh, defended the city council's action. He said the ordinance was properly amended under adjourned meeting provisions and that first and final reading and adoption is set for Tuesday night's regular council session.

He said the ordinance does not require two readings, as is the usual procedure, because the measure is an emergency one, set to go into effect Jan. 1. That is when business license fees are regularly due.

Tuesday night's meeting is set for 8 p.m. in city hall.

Youth Convicted On Weed Charge

Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court found Mark W. Goldberg, 19, of Lagunitas, guilty yesterday of possessing marijuana Jan. 27 when arrested for shoplifting.

Hearing the case without a jury, the judge ruled, however, that Goldberg was innocent of a charge of possessing a pipe for smoking the marijuana.

He set sentencing for Jan. 26

The shoplifting charge dismissed earlier when Judge Wilson ruled that superior court had no jurisdiction over the misdemeanor offense.

Goldberg was arrested when owners of an antique shop in San Rafael complained to police. Officers said they found marijuana when searching him.

Two More Victims Of 'Death Squadrons'

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Two more bullet-riddled bodies found yesterday brought to 13 the unidentified presumed victims of Brazil's so-called death squadrons discovered in the past 48 hours.

The death squadrons, said to be composed of policemen who act as vigilantes in off-duty hours, are believed responsible for 500 killings in recent years. Their motto is "the best criminal is a dead criminal." Brazil has no death penalty except for terrorism.

MOUNT TAMALPAIS CEMETERY
for those who've loved our county

The beauty of Mount Tamalpais Cemetery is typically Marin. Here in a setting of soft, rolling hills and lovely vistas are Marin's native trees and shrubs, accented by beautiful lawns and flowers.

For over 90 years leading Marin families have chosen Mount Tamalpais as a final resting place. One good reason is the substantial endowment fund which assures the care and maintenance of this cemetery in the years ahead.

We invite your inspection of this peaceful site. Our staff is always ready to answer your questions and describe Mount Tamalpais facilities

Black Mayor Fires Pair For Marriage

DETROIT (AP) — A woman who was the only white public official in Fayette, Miss., says the city's Negro mayor fired her when she married a Negro city policeman.

Mrs. Martha Jenkins and her husband, Monroe, said they were both fired after their marriage by Mayor Charles Evers, a Negro.

"Mayor Evers said Fayette wasn't ready for mixed marriages and he would have to fire us," Mrs. Jenkins said in an interview with the Detroit News.

"He called a meeting of town aldermen and advised them to discharge us," the 28-year-old lawyer said. "And they did."

The News said Evers was not in Fayette and could not be reached for comment. However, it said a member of Evers' administration confirmed the firings but would not discuss the reason for the action.

Jenkins, also 28, joined the Fayette force last July after working in Milwaukee. His wife was an unpaid member of the mayor's staff and helped handle the city's legal problems.

Mrs. Jenkins, a native of Lansing, Mich., once worked on Mississippi cases for the Law Students Civil Rights Research Council.

The couple said they are seeking jobs in Michigan now.

Probation Granted On Reduced Charge

A 22-year-old San Anselmo man, who pleaded guilty in October to being in a place where narcotics were used, was placed on six months' probation yesterday by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court.

The charge, against Michael Brand Galvin, had been reduced from possession of marijuana, lodged when Galvin was arrested Aug. 25 on San Anselmo Avenue in San Anselmo.

Censorship By Selectivity Claim Raised By Yorty

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty has told a group of state newspaper publishers, "I don't think there is an urban problem that even compares with this war."

Mayor Yorty spoke last night at an annual banquet of the California Press Association, which also honored two publishers for leadership.

Stuart S. Taylor, of the Santa Barbara News-Press, received the publisher of the year award named for Justus F. Craemer, late co-publisher at the Independent-Journal, and William F. Knowland, of the Oakland Tribune, received a special citation for local and national leadership.

Because of the problems of space limitations and the publications' political affiliations and predilections, there "is great opportunity for censorship by selectivity," Yorty said.

He said "much of the reporting on Vietnam is one-sided."

He asked the publishers to "dig back" and locate quotations by newsmakers and then "quote back what they said.

"They said 'halt the bombings and the Communists would come to the negotiating table,' " Yorty said.

Calling the Vietnam war one in which the United States "telegraphs" punches, the mayor said "I would not want to go to Vietnam and fight under restrictions" such as de-escalation.

"But it is not just the Vietnam war," Yorty said. "I see a great national effort to discourage the United States from international participation. . . . from helping other nations." Later, he said the national effort is by the "international Communist party."

Yorty told the publishers they should "educate the people" instead of publishing "so much sensationalism."

Delegates to the 99th annual winter CPA conference elected Carroll W. Parcher, Glendale News-Press, as vice president and Ferdinand Mendenhall, Van Nuys Green Sheet, to the board of directors.

Reelected were Lowell E. Jessen, Turlock Journal, chairman of the board; J. Hart Clinton, San Mateo Times, president; Phillip N. McCombs, San Francisco, secretary-treasurer, and Jack Craemer, San Rafael Independent-Journal, recording secretary.

Error Kills Marinite's G.I. Son

Pfc. John A. Bossom, 20, son of Mrs. Theresa Williams of 600 Red Hill Avenue, San Anselmo, was killed Nov. 30 in Vietnam by "friendly forces," according to the Defense Department.

Bossom was taking part in a combat operation when he was "mistaken for a member of a hostile force and fired on by friendly forces," a telegram to Mrs. Williams said.

Born in Ukiah, Bossom had lived most of his life in Portland, Ore., and graduated from high school there.

He entered the service when he was 17 and was serving his second year in Vietnam.

In addition to his mother, Bossom is survived by a brother, Marine Sgt. Walter Bossom, serving on the USS Constellation in the South Pacific, and five sisters, Mrs. Shirley Comenrind of Medford, Ore.; Mrs. Carol Shroel of Newberg, Ore.; Mrs. Theresa McGuire of Vancouver, Wash.; Mrs. Barbara Benton and Mrs. Joyce Parmeter, both of Portland, Ore.

Burial will be in Willamette National Cemetery in Portland. Zoeller's Chapel of Roses in Portland, Ore., is handling funeral arrangements.

Both Alioto, Unruh Talk To Publishers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Assembly Minority leader Jess Unruh and San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, who may be opponents in a Democratic gubernatorial primary, talked to California publishers about some of the problems of seeking public office.

Unruh appeared before yesterday's 99th annual winter convention of the California Press Association as an announced candidate for nomination to oppose incumbent Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Alioto has not yet announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination, but committees of his supporters already are working to win him backing.

Unruh said the state's new campaign disclosure law will most likely spawn a "public revulsion" bringing about new forms of campaign financing for politicians.

"I don't know if anyone can be elected governor today without becoming so indebted to contributors" that he is obligated in the office, Unruh said. He quickly noted that his own campaign is "an experiment" to discount such observations.

Alioto, plaintiff in a $12.5 million libel suit against Look Magazine, said anyone seeking political office must accept "some defamatory statements."

"If he can't take it, he shouldn't seek the office."

Alioto said he knows of no one on the horizon better able to defeat Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Ailing Youth Missing, Needs Medication

A 21-year-old San Rafael man, who could die unless he receives medication to minimize convulsions from an undiagnosed illness was still missing today, 10 days after he left home without needed pills.

Michael Raymond Arnold was reported missing Saturday night by his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Arnold, with whom he lives at 1330 Fourth Street.

According to Arnold, his grandson left Nov. 24, the day after he quit his job as a file clerk for the State Compensation Insurance Fund in San Francisco. He told his grandparents he was going to visit a friend in San Francisco's North Beach.

Without medication, the young man, who contracted the sickness while in the service, is in danger of a fatal fall or convulsive suffocation, according to an Air Force doctor who has treated Arnold since his medical discharge.

Capt. Robert Blackwood of the Hamilton Air Force Base clinic said a convulsion could be expected within a week of the last medication.

Arnold is six feet, one inch tall, weighs 165 pounds and has brown hair and brown eyes. He has the word "Mother" tattooed on his left arm and a pair of dice tattooed on his right arm.

The young man's father, Raymond E. Arnold, arrived in San Rafael today from his home in Tacoma, Wash., and plans to join police in the search.

Black Mayor Fires Pair For Marriage

DETROIT (AP) — A woman who was the only white public official in Fayette, Miss., says the city's Negro mayor fired her when she married a Negro city policeman.

Mrs. Martha Jenkins and her husband, Monroe, said they were both fired after their marriage by Mayor Charles Evers, a Negro.

"Mayor Evers said Fayette wasn't ready for mixed marriages and he would have to fire us," Mrs. Jenkins said in an interview with the Detroit News.

11:47 a.m., San Rafael — Backfire through carburetor started fire in a car belonging to Mrs. Judith Barry of 1115 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Greenbrae, while it was parked at the Bank of America lot at Fifth Avenue and B Street; $150 damage to motor and hood.

3:03 p.m., Novato — Children playing with matches started a grass fire on the Cherry Street hill which burned 2.5 acres.

SOUTHERN SONOMA

YESTERDAY:

10:50 a.m., Cotati — Fire of unknown origin in grass on West Railroad Avenue burned small spot area; out on arrival of department.

1:26 p.m., Petaluma — Hot ashes placed under sink did $200 damage to sink and cabinets at the home of Mrs. Sheila Hinman at 1624 Jeffrey Drive.

Both Alioto, Unruh Talk To Publishers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Assembly Minority leader Jess Unruh and San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, who may be opponents in a Democratic gubernatorial primary, talked to California publishers about some of the problems of seeking public office.

Unruh appeared before yesterday's 99th annual winter convention of the California Press Association as an announced candidate for nomination to oppose incumbent Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Alioto has not yet announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination, but committees of his supporters already are working to win him backing.

Unruh said the state's new campaign disclosure law will most likely spawn a "public revulsion" bringing about new forms of campaign financing for politicians.

"I don't know if anyone can be elected governor today without becoming so indebted to contributors" that he is obligated in the office, Unruh said. He quickly noted that his own campaign is "an experiment" to discount such observations.

Alioto, plaintiff in a $12.5 million libel suit against Look Magazine, said anyone seeking political office must accept "some defamatory statements."

"If he can't take it, he shouldn't seek the office."

Alioto said he knows of no one on the horizon better able to defeat Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan.

It's Going Too Far To Search Students For Teacher's Money

DEAR HELEN:

Quite a sum of money was stolen from our teacher. The principal came in and gave us a big fat lecture. He was so sure that one of us had taken the money that he decided to search us.

First our purses were turned upside down. Then he looked in all our shoes and pockets. As if that wasn't enough, the girls were taken to the nurse's office and practically stripped, and the boys got the same treatment.

Nothing was ever found. One teacher said that if we were innocent we shouldn't object to a little search to prove it.

Don't you think this was going too far? — BOILING

DEAR BOILING:

I certainly do. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

My folks say we can't get new furniture until I teach my cat not to scratch the davenport.

I made a really great rug-covered stand that any normal feline would flip over. I even rubbed catnip on it. What does ours do? He rubs his nose against it and purrs, then stalks over and scratches the holy heck out of cur sofa. I spank him, I yell, I even squirt him with a water pistol, but he waits until I'm out of the room and he's at it again.

Can anyone please tell me how you train a cat? — FED UP WITH A SHREDDER

DEAR FED:

Very slowly — if at all. You can lead a cat to a scratching board but you can't make him scratch — unless he wants to. Especially if he has discovered a favorite sofa-arm. Suggestions, anyone? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Everybody seems to be getting in on the act, so here's my "What Is A" contribution:

What Is A High School Athlete?

He's the one person who never brags about how much good he does for the team.

He's the one who spends long hours at practice but never complains about a single one (though you do, to yourself!)

He's that big strong guy who'd do anything for you — even to explaining the game — but you just don't understand.

He's the one you get to see least often, but then he makes up for it most.

He comes to your house to see you, and ends up watching "a very important game" on TV.

He's the one who calls you long enough to say, "I'm still alive," then rushes off to either homework or practice.

He's the one who reminds you of that terrific play he made, but just smiles if you didn't catch it.

His intentions are the greatest, but somehow the games always get in the way.

He's the one who makes you feel so proud, but you can't tell him because he'll blush.

He's the one important person in your life and you're awfully glad he's important to the school and all those other cheering people too. — STEPHANIE

HELP To Distribute To Families

Christmas is a time when Marin individuals and groups wish to donate food, toys, clothing and furniture to help less fortunate families in the community.

This year Project HELP has taken on the responsibility to distribute the donated goods to low income families throughout the county, and has set up three Marin distribution centers to receive donations: in North Marin at 875 Grant Avenue, Novato; in Central Marin, at 918 C Street, San Rafael; and for Southern Marin at St. Andrew Presbyterian Church, Drake Avenue, Marin City.

Project HELP has been organized by the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council. Its work goes on year-long, but it making a special effort to coordinate the Christmas gifts, in conjunction with the Volunteer Bureau of Marin.

Many families cannot afford Christmas dinner and HELP will try to assist. Cash gifts will be converted into food certificates which are honored at local grocery markets, it reports.

Mrs. V. W. Sterling Is New President Of Novato Club

Being with her family and friends is most enjoyed by Mrs. Victor W. Sterling, newly elected president of the Novato Hostess Club.

Pat Sterling, the wife of the director of television station KRON, also enjoys golf, art and dancing. They have four sons. Steve is 17, Gary, 16, Rickey, 13 and Bill, 10 years old. The family, also known as Holshevnikoff, has lived in Marin more than two years.

MRS. VICTOR STERLING

A member of the hostess club for two years, Pat has also been chairman of the arts and crafts group and publicity.

The club helps acquaint new arrivals and present residents with the community. Any resident of Novato is eligible for membership.

The club members are raising funds for the Novato parks and are making plans for their holiday dinner-dance to be held on Dec. 27.

Officers elected to serve with Mrs. Sterling are Mmes. Archie Patton, vice president; Michael Stricklin, treasurer; John Ray, recording secretary, and Kenneth Place, corresponding secretary.

Furry Pillows Are Wonderful Gift Idea

By EUNICE FARMER

Here's a great "security blanket" for your boys and girls as they grow a little older. It goes with any type decor of their rooms and makes a wonderful Christmas gift idea.

There's nothing quite like the feel of fur to stir warmth in even the toughest little guys. Cover pillows in fake fur, and you'll have a friend for life.

You may buy inexpensive pillows or use ones that have outlived their covers. Either make a slip-cover type cover with a zipper on one end or, if you can't sew or don't want to spend that much time, simply hand whip the fur cloth to the pillow.

Even an amateur can look professional because the fur hides a multitude of errors. After seams have been stitched, pull out the fur fibers from the seams on the right side, and the seam will be completely disguised. This would also make a college boy or girl very happy.

DEAR EUNICE:

I have learned to cut corduroy the way you have suggested, but in the attractive ready-to-wear garments the nap seems to be running every which way. Many times the pants will be cut with the cross grain. Can the home sewer do the same thing? — JUDY R.

DEAR JUDY R.:

The important rule on corduroy is to remember to cut all the pieces of your pattern in one direction unless you are trying to achieve an unusual effect. Some of the most attractive sportswear this fall were made with the corduroy cut in many different directions. Cutting part of the garment on the bias can also give an interesting effect.

One of the most attractive I have seen was a tunic and pants. The tunic was worked in large patches from side to side and up and down to form the new patchwork look. The pants in this case were cut with the lengthwise grain of the corduroy. Today, it seems that anything goes, so get your imagination to work and have the courage of your creativity.

DEAR EUNICE:

Up until now I have always been a mere "hem-shortener sewer," but your column has inspired me so much that now I have the confidence to do anything. Sure, I have a few failures, but it's surprising how well my sewing does turn out since I have lost my fear of it.

Lately, I have seen a type of velvet I was never aware of. It is much like velveteen only much thicker and is called velour. Does this type of velvet have to be lined, and what is the purpose of having a heavier fabric that costs so much more? — MRS. V. J.

DEAR MRS. V. J.:

Velour has a much deeper pile that velveteen; because of this it is not only heavier but also much more beautiful. It is usually not underlined. If you prefer a lining for a dress, make it separate.

This velour is also waterproof and makes lovely dressy coats that can be worn for afternoon or evenings. Even though this velour has a pile instead of the smoother nap, all pieces of your pattern must be cut in the same direction.

Faye Margaret Brown Becomes Bride Of Sandor H. Straus

Faye Margaret Brown became the bride of Sandor Howard Straus last Saturday in a ceremony at the First Unitarian Church of Berkeley in Kensington.

She is the daughter of Frank M. Brown and Mrs. Margaret N. Brown of Greenbrae, and the bridegroom's parents are the Meyer Strauses of Philadelphia, Pa.

Madeleine Brown was her sister's maid of honor, and bridesmaids were the bridegroom's sisters, Esther and Barbara Straus.

Best man was Jack London of Berkeley, and the bride's brother, Geoffrey Brown, ushered.

A reception at the church followed the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of Redwood High School and the University of California, where she was affiliated with Alpha Xi Delta sorority and elected to Phi Beta Kappa honor society. Faye is employed with the Food Stamp Program of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in San Francisco. Her grandmothers are Mmes. Ida Brown of San Francisco and Mabelle Purser of Greenbrae.

Sandor is a graduate of the Akiba Academy of Philadelphia. He received the B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Pennsylvania and is working toward a Ph.D. degree in mathematics at the University of California. He is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Following a wedding trip to Hawaii the couple will live in Berkeley.

For Baby

A dampened washcloth and a bar of soap in a plastic bag ought to be standard equipment in the carrying case of a baby stroller or carriage. The items make quick clean-ups a breeze.

Fraser-Carlson Rite Held In San Rafael Church

Kathleen J. Carlson became the bride of Jesse Fraser last Saturday in an afternoon ceremony at Trinity Lutheran Church in San Rafael.

A reception followed at the San Rafael Yacht Club.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Carlson of Kodiak, Alaska, former residents of San Rafael. Jesse is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cullie Manning of Ignacio.

Mrs. Charles Tooth of South San Francisco was matron of honor, and the bridesmaid was Georgia (Muff) Mallin of San Francisco.

Larry Gruver of Fort Bragg was best man, and guests were ushered to their seats by the bride's brother, Carl W. Carlson of Mill Valley, and Frank Maguire of Petaluma.

Kathleen was graduated from Marin Catholic High School and Dominican College. She is employed at Children's Hospital and Adult Medical Center in San Francisco.

The bridegroom was graduated from Sir Francis Drake High School. He is employed by Operating Engineers in Concord. George Fraser of Encino and Mrs. James Deffendall of Indianapolis, Ind., are his brother and sister.

The couple will live in San Rafael following a wedding trip to South Lake Tahoe and Tahiti.

DEAR MRS. V. J.:

Velour has a much deeper pile that velveteen; because of this it is not only heavier but also much more beautiful. It is usually not underlined. If you prefer a lining for a dress, make it separate.

This velour is also waterproof and makes lovely dressy coats that can be worn for afternoon or evenings. Even though this velour has a pile instead of the smoother nap, all pieces of your pattern must be cut in the same direction.

Faye Margaret Brown Becomes Bride Of Sandor H. Straus

Faye Margaret Brown became the bride of Sandor Howard Straus last Saturday in a ceremony at the First Unitarian Church of Berkeley in Kensington.

She is the daughter of Frank M. Brown and Mrs. Margaret N. Brown of Greenbrae, and the bridegroom's parents are the Meyer Strauses of Philadelphia, Pa.

Madeleine Brown was her sister's maid of honor, and bridesmaids were the bridegroom's sisters, Esther and Barbara Straus.

Best man was Jack London of Berkeley, and the bride's brother, Geoffrey Brown, ushered.

A reception at the church followed the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of Redwood High School and the University of California, where she was affiliated with Alpha Xi Delta sorority and elected to Phi Beta Kappa honor society. Faye is employed with the Food Stamp Program of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in San Francisco. Her grandmothers are Mmes. Ida Brown of San Francisco and Mabelle Purser of Greenbrae.

Sandor is a graduate of the Akiba Academy of Philadelphia. He received the B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Pennsylvania and is working toward a Ph.D. degree in mathematics at the University of California. He is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Following a wedding trip to Hawaii the couple will live in Berkeley.

Fraser-Carlson Rite Held In San Rafael Church

Kathleen J. Carlson became the bride of Jesse Fraser last Saturday in an afternoon ceremony at Trinity Lutheran Church in San Rafael.

A reception followed at the San Rafael Yacht Club.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Carlson of Kodiak, Alaska, former residents of San Rafael. Jesse is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cullie Manning of Ignacio.

Mrs. Charles Tooth of South San Francisco was matron of honor, and the bridesmaid was Georgia (Muff) Mallin of San Francisco.

Larry Gruver of Fort Bragg was best man, and guests were ushered to their seats by the bride's brother, Carl W. Carlson of Mill Valley, and Frank Maguire of Petaluma.

Kathleen was graduated from Marin Catholic High School and Dominican College. She is employed at Children's Hospital and Adult Medical Center in San Francisco.

The bridegroom was graduated from Sir Francis Drake High School. He is employed by Operating Engineers in Concord. George Fraser of Encino and Mrs. James Deffendall of Indianapolis, Ind., are his brother and sister.

The couple will live in San Rafael following a wedding trip to South Lake Tahoe and Tahiti.

When Decorating Your Home Be Honest About Yourself

An honesty about oneself is the most important thing in decorating, Carelton Varney, 32-year-old president of Dorathy Draper and Co., told an A. M. Lecture Series audience yesterday in San Anselmo.

A home should have a scrapbook look, Varney said, rather than a showcase look.

"Good decorating is not off a magazine cover. It is what you reflect of your own personality in that room. There is no style that is now. Now is you." The young decorator recently designed the stage sets for "Goodbye Mr. Chips" and has done the sets of "A Man For All Seasons" and "Oliver." He has won the Design Achievement Award and also designs men's hats, fabric and furniture.

Photographs of family members and friends belong in the living room, he said. "I've never relagated the important people in my life to the back hall."

Some of his other suggestions for decorating a home to reflect your life include:

"Hang children's art anywhere in your house. The frame is wiser spent on a painting by a child than on an expensive imitation of someone else's.

"When I'm working with someone I immediately go to their linen closet and look at the towels. They chose them immediately and it shows what colors they like.

"Sky Blue is the most neutral color there is. There is nothing that will not work with it.

"Let children chose their own colors. They have a wonderful eye color sense and can select plaids and patterns that will go beautifully.

"We overdo balance. Just because we like a table that doesn't mean we have to have two of them.

"You cannot chose paint colors from those little samples at the paint store. You have to see the paint on the surface. The surface will make a difference. And light colors go on darker.

"Windows are the eyes of the house and should look as good from the outside as the inside. Use window boxes and painted frames.

"If you have a picture window make sure it has a picture. And if it does don't hide it with cascading drapery.

"Mirrors should reflect something beautiful. Don't hang them to reflect a hallway.

"Plastic furniture has its place in the swimming pool and a very few other places. We will never come to a disposable world.

"Make your own fur rugs out of old coats from second hand stores. Cut them into squares and sew them together with twill tape, clean and line them."

Menotti Yule Classic Set By College

The traditional Christmas opera, "Amahl and the Night Visitors," will be presented in Marin and Southern Sonoma by the Sonoma State College Opera Workshop beginning next week

Under the direction of Dr. Peggy Donovan-Jeffry, assistant professor of music, the opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti will be fully staged and costumed.

Performances in Ives Hall at the college have been scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday at 4:15 p.m.; Dec. 12 at 8 p.m.; and Dec. 13 at 2:15 and 8 p.m. Performances at San Rafael High School have been set for Dec. 20 at 3 and 7:30 p.m.

The lead role of the young cripple Amahl will be sung by four boys including three from Marin. They are Jack Packard, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Packard of Corte Madera; Cyril Hofmeister, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Hofmeister of San Rafael; Charles Gavin Jr., 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Gavin of San Rafael, and Marty Klatt, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor M. Klatt of Santa Rosa.

Other Marin and Southern Sonoma cast members include Marianne Rios of Novato, Mary Beard of Cotati, and Victor Parker and Dr. Allan Querin of Petaluma.

The Sonoma State Madrigal Singers, under the direction of E. Gardner Rust, will perform before the Friday and Saturday evening curtains go up.

Reservations may be made by contacting the offices of educational services at the college. Special rates are available for groups of 25 or more students.

"THIS IS MY BOX"—Gifts of jewels brought by one of the three kings in the Christmas opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors" enthral two Marin boys in the cast, Cyril Hofmeister (left), 11, of San Rafael, and Jack Packard, 12, of Corte Madera. Robert Moore of Santa Rosa plays one of the kings in the Sonoma State College Opera Workshop production which begins next week.

Church Has Use Of Console Organ

The Church of the Nativity in Marinwood has the use of a $10,000 console organ for a year and possibly two, according to Rev. David Barnette, vicar.

The organ was loaned to the church because of the building's "fine accoustics" by the Baldwin Organ Co., which hopes to use the church for demonstration purposes, Barnette said.

The organ was installed recently and the cost of installing the speakers was contributed by the Episcopal Church Women's organization.

Bach To Mozart Concert Series To Open Dec. 14

First of the three Bach to Mozart concerts in the 10th annual candlelight series sponsored by the Homestead Valley Community Association will be presented at Brown's Hall, Mill Valley, Dec. 14 at 8:15 p.m.

At 2:30 that afternoon in the same place some of the group will perform in the first of the three children's concerts sponsored by the association this year for the first time.

Highlight of the evening program will be "Pimpinone," a baroque chamber opera by Telemann, which will feature soprano Gwen Curatilo and baritone Edgar Jones. It will be narrated by Donald Pippin of Old San Francisco Spaghetti Factory fame, who has also prepared the translation and orchestra parts.

Though not a fully staged production, it will have dramatic action and costumes.

Instrumentalists will open the program with the Sonata in D Major by Petronio Franceschini and perform between the acts of the opera the Sonata for Trumpet by Domenico Gabrielli, featuring Edward Haug, and Concerto for Oboe by Tomaso Albinoni, featuring Raymond Duste.

For the afternoon children's concert works by Handel, J. S. Bach, Vaughan Williams, J. Quantz and Franceschini will be performed.

Duste will explain the instruments and use of the voice and comment on the music.

Ticket information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Martin Goldschmidt of Mill Valley or Ursula Davidson of San Rafael.

Jury Deadlocks In Fraud Case

A jury in Marin Superior Court deadlocked yesterday in the case of Gilbert Loris De Costa, 30, of San Rafael, accused of signing another person's name to a stolen credit card at a San Rafael gas station in July.

He allegedly used the card to purchase about $6 worth of gasoline.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner said a new trial date would be set Monday.

DRAMA REVIEW

'Enter Laughing' An Amateur's Vehicle?

By KARL BARRON

PETALUMA — "Enter Laughing," Joseph Stein's dramatization of Carl Reiner's autobiographical novel, may become to the '70s what "The Torchbears" has been to the Torchbearers" has been to the which amateurs can masochistically poke fun at themselves.

The story of Reiner's entry into show business as a dreadful ham is funny if done with whiplike pace and good Jewish accents — the current production by Little Hills Theatre at the multipurpose room of Petaluma High School has neither.

It does have some amusing moments and a couple of praiseworthy performances, but in the long run it's a rather dreary affair.

DIALECTS FAIL

Director Elizabeth Martin has some likely talent to work with, but has failed to keep it functioning steadily. The result is actors who speak Yiddish dialects one moment, Irish the next, and a strange hodgepodge resembling my impression of Swahili at other times.

I had thought that the days of actors who completely blow lines was gone, but the lack of communication in a couple of scenes last night had me feeling really sorry for the people on stage. Line uncertainty adds to the slow pace.

Stein has many short, choppy scenes, and technical director Troy Wicker has deisgned clever sliding set units to eliminate delays. If they functioned, they would, but they don't. So there are many waits, and the pace suffers still more.

PLAY LACKING

In all fairness to the Little Hills group, which I have not seen before, the play itself is not all that funny.

Jim Adams, who plays the Reiner character, is most uneven, giving the impression at times of a mad puppet seeking asylum.

As for the good things about the show, the best is Dr. Frank Foster's easy, direct playing of the hapless soul who is divested of his dress suit so that David (Reiner) can make his stage debut. Foster shows good timing, gets his laughs and wastes no hand flapping about it. Which is more than can be said for many others in the large cast. Excellent in his role and showing great promise is a young man named Linzy Hudson. Mary Johns has charming moments as David's girl friend, but is allowed to overemote terribly.

Alize Patz doesn't need to try so hard at being cute; she's already a cute girl and destroys her natural appeal by overdoing the Betty Boop routine.

SINCERE MOMENTS

Bob Armbruster, in spite of an accent that roves about the globe, manages some very sincere moments as David's boss. Ann Zodel and Lou Isselin are also spottily good as the parents, and Bill Bergman contributes a small but very believable cameo as a stage manager.

Little Hills Theatre is a class in Adult Education of the Petaluma City Schools.

"Enter Laughing" will be presented tonight and next Friday and Saturday at 8:30 o'clock.

Met Buffs Happy; Unions May Get To Rehearsals

NEW YORK (AP) — Stacks of unused tickets for the 1969-70 Metropolitan Opera season gather dust in a desk drawer of cosmetics maker Charles Revson, one of a legion of opera buffs that has been wondering whether the curtain ever will rise again.

Now, with a contract settlement possible as early as Monday, the Met hopes it may be able to present an abbreviated season beginning around Christmas. The opera company's $45 million house failed to open in mid-September.

The delay was caused by the management's decision not to begin rehearsals until agreement was reached on all labor contracts. The unions, which had not called a strike, termed this decision a "lockout" and stiffened their demands.

The orchestra voted Wednesday night to accept the first three years of a four-year management proposal and the artists' union negotiators followed suit Thursday. The stagehands negotiate today. Choristers and dancers will try to settle on Monday.

The contract now proposed by management would, over three years, raise weekly pay for musicians from $260 to $325; soloists without individual contracts from $325 to $375; choristers $194 to $250; and dancers from $140 to $215.

Pay increase sought at the start of negotiations last summer included 50 per cent raises for musicians, 140 per cent for choristers and 200 per cent for dancers.

Management estimates that the increases offered would double last year's operating deficit of $3.5 million. Much of the deficit is picked up by the opera's approximately 800 private and corporate patrons.

Many patrons, including some who give many times the minimum $1,000, prefer to remain anonymous. More than 115 companies and foundations patronize the opera starting at $500 for foundations, $2,500 for companies.

Whether they are enthusiastic opera buffs or attend only occasionally, the patrons have been upset by the Met's five-month absence.

"I was waiting, hopeful it would be over by now," said patron Mrs. Charles Payson, owner of the Mets baseball team.

Menotti Yule Classic Set By College

The traditional Christmas opera, "Amahl and the Night Visitors," will be presented in Marin and Southern Sonoma by the Sonoma State College Opera Workshop beginning next week.

Under the direction of Dr. Peggy Donovan-Jeffry, assistant professor of music, the opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti will be fully staged and costumed.

Performances in Ives Hall at the college have been scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday at 4:15 p.m.; Dec. 12 at 8 p.m.; and Dec. 13 at 2:15 and 8 p.m. Performances at San Rafael High School have been set for Dec. 20 at 3 and 7:30 p.m.

The lead role of the young cripple Amahl will be sung by four boys including three from Marin. They are Jack Packard, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Packard of Corte Madera; Cyril Hofmeister, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Hofmeister of San Rafael; Charles Gavin Jr., 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Gavin of San Rafael, and Marty Klatt, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor M. Klatt of Santa Rosa.

Other Marin and Southern Sonoma cast members include Marianne Rios of Novato, Mary Beard of Cotati, and Victor Parker and Dr. Allan Querin of Petaluma.

The Sonoma State Madrigal Singers, under the direction of E. Gardner Rust, will perform before the Friday and Saturday evening curtains go up.

Reservations may be made by contacting the offices of educational services at the college. Special rates are available for groups of 25 or more students.

Church Has Use Of Console Organ

The Church of the Nativity in Marinwood has the use of a $10,000 console organ for a year and possibly two, according to Rev. David Barnette, vicar.

The organ was loaned to the church because of the building's "fine accoustics" by the Baldwin Organ Co., which hopes to use the church for demonstration purposes, Barnette said.

The organ was installed recently and the cost of installing the speakers was contributed by the Episcopal Church Women's organization.

"THIS IS MY BOX"—Gifts of jewels brought by one of the three kings in the Christmas opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors" enthral two Marin boys in the cast, Cyril Hofmeister (left), 11, of San Rafael, and Jack Packard, 12, of Corte Madera. Robert Moore of Santa Rosa plays one of the kings in the Sonoma State College Opera Workshop production which begins next week.

Bach To Mozart Concert Series To Open Dec. 14

First of the three Bach to Mozart concerts in the 10th annual candlelight series sponsored by the Homestead Valley Community Association will be presented at Brown's Hall, Mill Valley, Dec. 14 at 8:15 p.m.

At 2:30 that afternoon in the same place some of the group will perform in the first of the three children's concerts sponsored by the association this year for the first time.

Highlight of the evening program will be "Pimpinone," a baroque chamber opera by Telemann, which will feature soprano Gwen Curatilo and baritone Edgar Jones. It will be narrated by Donald Pippin of Old San Francisco Spaghetti Factory fame, who has also prepared the translation and orchestra parts.

Though not a fully staged production, it will have dramatic action and costumes.

Instrumentalists will open the program with the Sonata in D Major by Petronio Franceschini and perform between the acts of the opera the Sonata for Trumpet by Domenico Gabrielli, featuring Edward Haug, and Concerto for Oboe by Tomaso Albinoni, featuring Raymond Duste.

For the afternoon children's concert works by Handel, J. S. Bach, Vaughan Williams, J. Quantz and Franceschini will be performed.

Duste will explain the instruments and use of the voice and comment on the music.

Ticket information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Martin Goldschmidt of Mill Valley or Ursula Davidson of San Rafael.

Jury Deadlocks In Fraud Case

A jury in Marin Superior Court deadlocked yesterday in the case of Gilbert Loris De Costa, 30, of San Rafael, accused of signing another person's name to a stolen credit card at a San Rafael gas station in July.

He allegedly used the card to purchase about $6 worth of gasoline.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner said a new trial date would be set Monday.

'Enter Laughing' An Amateur's Vehicle?

By KARL BARRON

PETALUMA — "Enter Laughing," Joseph Stein's dramatization of Carl Reiner's autobiographical novel, may become to the '70s what "The Torchbears" has been to the Torchbearers" has been to the which amateurs can masochistically poke fun at themselves.

The story of Reiner's entry into show business as a dreadful ham is funny if done with whiplike pace and good Jewish accents — the current production by Little Hills Theatre at the multipurpose room of Petaluma High School has neither.

It does have some amusing moments and a couple of praiseworthy performances, but in the long run it's a rather dreary affair.

DIALECTS FAIL

Director Elizabeth Martin has some likely talent to work with, but has failed to keep it functioning steadily. The result is actors who speak Yiddish dialects one moment, Irish the next, and a strange hodgepodge resembling my impression of Swahili at other times.

I had thought that the days of actors who completely blow lines was gone, but the lack of communication in a couple of scenes last night had me feeling really sorry for the people on stage. Line uncertainty adds to the slow pace.

Stein has many short, choppy scenes, and technical director Troy Wicker has deisgned clever sliding set units to eliminate delays. If they functioned, they would, but they don't. So there are many waits, and the pace suffers still more.

PLAY LACKING

In all fairness to the Little Hills group, which I have not seen before, the play itself is not all that funny.

Jim Adams, who plays the Reiner character, is most uneven, giving the impression at times of a mad puppet seeking asylum.

As for the good things about the show, the best is Dr. Frank Foster's easy, direct playing of the hapless soul who is divested of his dress suit so that David (Reiner) can make his stage debut. Foster shows good timing, gets his laughs and wastes no hand flapping about it. Which is more than can be said for many others in the large cast. Excellent in his role and showing great promise is a young man named Linzy Hudson. Mary Johns has charming moments as David's girl friend, but is allowed to overemote terribly.

Alize Patz doesn't need to try so hard at being cute; she's already a cute girl and destroys her natural appeal by overdoing the Betty Boop routine.

SINCERE MOMENTS

Bob Armbruster, in spite of an accent that roves about the globe, manages some very sincere moments as David's boss. Ann Zodel and Lou Isselin are also spottily good as the parents, and Bill Bergman contributes a small but very believable cameo as a stage manager.

Little Hills Theatre is a class in Adult Education of the Petaluma City Schools.

"Enter Laughing" will be presented tonight and next Friday and Saturday at 8:30 o'clock.

Met Buffs Happy; Unions May Get To Rehearsals

NEW YORK (AP) — Stacks of unused tickets for the 1969-70 Metropolitan Opera season gather dust in a desk drawer of cosmetics maker Charles Revson, one of a legion of opera buffs that has been wondering whether the curtain ever will rise again.

Now, with a contract settlement possible as early as Monday, the Met hopes it may be able to present an abbreviated season beginning around Christmas. The opera company's $45 million house failed to open in mid-September.

The delay was caused by the management's decision not to begin rehearsals until agreement was reached on all labor contracts. The unions, which had not called a strike, termed this decision a "lockout" and stiffened their demands.

The orchestra voted Wednesday night to accept the first three years of a four-year management proposal and the artists' union negotiators followed suit Thursday. The stagehands negotiate today. Choristers and dancers will try to settle on Monday.

The contract now proposed by management would, over three years, raise weekly pay for musicians from $260 to $325; soloists without individual contracts from $325 to $375; choristers $194 to $250; and dancers from $140 to $215.

Pay increase sought at the start of negotiations last summer included 50 per cent raises for musicians, 140 per cent for choristers and 200 per cent for dancers.

Management estimates that the increases offered would double last year's operating deficit of $3.5 million. Much of the deficit is picked up by the opera's approximately 800 private and corporate patrons.

Many patrons, including some who give many times the minimum $1,000, prefer to remain anonymous. More than 115 companies and foundations patronize the opera starting at $500 for foundations, $2,500 for companies.

Whether they are enthusiastic opera buffs or attend only occasionally, the patrons have been upset by the Met's five-month absence.

"I was waiting, hopeful it would be over by now," said patron Mrs. Charles Payson, owner of the Mets baseball team.

Tidal Waterways Proposal Again Before Planners

A new ordinance to control filling and building on all tidal waterways will get another review by the Marin County Planning Commission Monday at 9 a.m. in the Civic Center.

At the last meeting on Nov. 24, Normand H. Traverso, executive manager of the Marin Property Owners Association, charged that the ordinance draft is too wordy and includes too many restrictions against siltation, sedimentation, and destruction of Wildlife habitats.

The second item on the agenda is the proposed Laird's Landing subdivision of 63 lots between Tomales Bay and Pierce Point Road, within the area designated for the Point Reyes National Seashore.

Last Tuesday, the Marin County Board of Supervisors passed a 90-day interim ordinance prohibiting development in the seashore area. This ordinance will expire on March 2, 1970, unless it is extended. County Planning Director Paul C. Zucker will recommend that action on the 319-acre project be put off until March 2.

Bank of America will seek approval for projecting signs on its branch banks at Point Reyes Station and Tomales. The bank seeks signs that project seven feet from the building instead of lying flat against the wall.

At 11 a.m., a hearing will be held on the Roundtree condiminium townhouse project on the south side of Miller Creek Road near Las Gallinas Avenue, Marinwood. U.S. Development Corp. of Walnut Creek plans 150 townhouses on 12.7 acres of land, with homes selling at $19,500 to $24,500.

In the afternoon, the planning commissioners will consider the tentative map of Forest Hills subdivision, a 10-lot project on seven acres at the corner of Homestead Boulevard and Ferndale Avenue, Tamalpais Valley.

ART REVIEW

Tiny Landscapes And Puddles Of Paint

By LAURA DEUENDORF

There are moments when Frances A. McKinney's tiny unpeopled landscapes make a painted place seem a living one.

The overall impression of her work being exhibited through Jan. 3 at Torrance Galleries, 128 Greenfield in San Anselmo, is that the smaller she works the better. The larger oils start falling apart both structurally and in the quality of her technique. But the little canvases usually keep their grip on both and on the viewer as well.

At their best, Miss McKinney's scenes are like remembered private experiences that were once very moving and so remained crystallized in the mind. They have the sort of honesty that evokes recognition of a time and place whether or not you have actually been there.

A sunny Sierra meadow, trees in seasonal stages and several eroding barns have this quality, enhanced by an understated palette that is chill with the lonely grays of weathered wood and dark wet earth.

Even so, these scenes are not stickily sentimental. They are more impersonally observed and methodically put together than that. Which is probably one of the strongest reasons the good ones reach out as convincingly as they do.

Also being shown at Torrance this month are Clyde Barnett's dripping pools of paint. Barnett, rather than having been emancipated from the confines of realism, has been trapped by his uncontrolled experimental technique.

Stringy drools and garish spreading puddles of enamel often take on the look of ogling ostriches. And Barnett doubles the impression by adding black and white dot eyes like those plastic ones that roll around.

In a few cases the mingling trails of paint and dots work out wittily as in the feathery, bug-eyed "Royal Birds." They seem intended to be what they are, supported by the way the paint is applied rather than just content invented after the fact. And it's here that Barnett has a good idea worth developing.

However, most of the others are handicapped by Barnett's hang-up with "how," rather than "what" is being done and his ideas are defeated on the way to making them visual.

A 1970 Goal: More Cultural Youth Events

More cultural programs for youngsters h ave been set as one of the 1970 goals for the Rohnert Park Cultural Arts Commission.

Commissioner Nancy Thiesfeld reported Thursday that 120 elementary aged youngsters have signed up to attend the Dec. 13 performance of "Amahl and the Night Visitors" at Sonoma State College, showing that there is interest for commission-sponsored programs.

She said that two buses will leave city hall at 1 p.m. and each child will pay 25-cents for the ticket with the commission paying the remaining 50-cents of the ticket cost and providing transportation.

Mrs. Thiesfeld said the commission will consider field trips to area museums and other musical programs.

The Rohnert Park Cultural Arts Commission also:

CHAIRMAN — Elected Mrs. Thiesfeld as chairman to replace Dr. William O. Cord, who resigned because he plans to travel in the next year while on sabbatical leave from Sonoma State College.

ADULT CLASSES — Discussed the possibility of working with the adult education division of the Petaluma schools to set up more cultural classes for adults in Rohnert Park.

ART CONTEST — Discussed the possibility of sponsoring an annual children's art festival.

Panel Selects Acting Chairman

Marc W. Tracy of Novato High School was elected acting chairman of the newly created Marin Youth Commission at its first meeting Thursday in the Civic Center.

The youth commissioners set another meeting for 7 p.m. Dec. 15 in the board of supervisors chambers at Civic Center to discuss youth needs and recommendations to be made to the board of supervisors.

The youth commission comprises six youths appointed by the supervisors, a seventh youth to be named by the first six and four adults representing the Marin County Juvenile Delinquency Prevention, Juvenile Justice, Human Rights, and the Parks and Recreation commissions.

If all the coal mined in the United States in one year were used as paving material, it could build 12 superhighways — each 50 feet wide, one foot thick, and almost 3,000 miles long.

City's Librarian Plans To Retire

Mill Valley librarian Dorothy Thomas told the city's library board she plans to retire sometime in early 1970.

Mrs. Thomas on Thursday said she is aiming toward an April retirement date but announced her plans last night to give the trustees time to select a replacement.

She will have been the city's librarian for 20 years on Jan. 1.

Woman's Arm Hurt When Hit By Auto

Danae Douglas, 16, of 500 San Francisco Boulevard, San Anselmo, was treated for a bruised left arm and leg at Kaiser Foundation Hospital Thursday after she was struck by a car in a San Rafael crosswalk, police reported yesterday.

Driver of the car Richard Eagon McMullen, 23, of 68 Brookdale Avenue, San Rafael, according to police, said he was blinded by the sun and did not see the girl at Fifth Avenue and D Street at 2:24 p.m., police said.

Reception For Demo

A public reception for Richard M. Adams of Belvedere, a potential candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fourth Senatorial District, will be held at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday at the Belvedere home of Leonard M. Sperry Jr., of 20 Crest Road. Adams is considering running for the seat held by Republican Sen. John F. McCarthy.

We were pleasantly fascinated by the phenomenal response to our first real sale: brought in more dough in 3 days than we usually see in a month, just because we slashed prices beyond all reason. Therefore, and herewith, let it be known to all those buying presents: the ridiculous low prices on everything in the store—leather, leather accessories, natural skin area rugs, fabrics, garments, jewelry, all of it, not just clearance items.

UNUSUAL GIFTS IN MARIN
DESIGNERS MARKET
3001 BRIDGEWAY, SAUSALITO

We were pleasantly fascinated by the phenomenal response to our first real sale: brought in more dough in 3 days than we usually see in a month, just because we slashed prices beyond all reason. Therefore, and herewith, let it be known to all those buying presents: the ridiculous low prices on everything in the store—leather, leather accessories, natural skin area rugs, fabrics, garments, jewelry, all of it, not just clearance items.

WHO KNOWS WHAT EVIL LURKS IN THE HEARTS OF USED CARS?

We invite you to compare our cars with others. Because we at Felton's know a used car can be a thing of beauty on the outside and a mass of corruption on the inside. Our 16-point inspection takes us to parts of the car rarely traveled by used car dealers. When we find it pure at heart . . . then it's ready for you.

Here's a personal, company car that's been driven exclusively by the mother-in-law of our company's owner.

This absolutely, like-new little Skylark 2-dr. Sport Coupe has only 6,700 miles.

G.M. air conditioning plus all the other Skylark custom extras like custom notch-back vinyl upholstery, automatic transmission, radio, heater, w/w tires, power steering, tinted glass, etc.

The sticker price on this car is $4103. The Kelley Blue Book shows this car should sell used for $3445. We'll sell for only $3345 and pass on the unused portion of the General Motors (5-year 50,000-mile) warranty. You will be the first owner of record. 444379Z106183

WHO KNOWS WHAT EVIL
LURKS IN THE HEARTS OF USED CARS?

We invite you to compare our cars with others. Because we at Felton's know a used car can be a thing of beauty on the outside and a mass of corruption on the inside. Our 16-point inspection takes us to parts of the car rarely traveled by used car dealers. When we find it pure at heart . . . then it's ready for you.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

A Danger Sign: Triangle Area Appearing On The Face

VAN DELLEN

A triangular area on the face is regarded as dangerous. Its base is a line extending through both corners of the mouth and the peak is located on the forehead just above the bridge of the nose. The area includes the entire nose, inner part of the eyebrows, and upper lip.

Why is the triangle dangerous? Infections in this area may spread directly to a large vein of the brain (cavernous sinus). This is always a possibility because one of the lesser veins that drains the area makes a connection with this cerebral venous center. In addition, these vessels have no valves and as a result the blood may flow in all directions.

AN INFLAMMATION in this area irritates the walls of the cavernous sinus and shortly thereafter the entire passageway is blocked with clotted blood. Once this develops, the outcome is extremely poor (80 per cent die). On the other hand, most infections in the dangerous triangle respond rapidly to treatment. Never squeeze or scratch a pimple or other infection. See your physician because the infection can be controled with applications of hot, wet dressings and an antibiotic such as penicillin.

Many infections in this area are traced originally to plucking nasal hairs or eyebrows. They may also follow a scratch or injury. The risk of developing a cavernous sinus thrombosis is very small considering how often women pluck these hairs. Cleanliness is of utmost importance. And, should the area become red and swollen, call the physician.

WHEN THE infection spreads via the veins to the brain, the temperature may reach 106 degrees Fahrenheit. The eyelids swell and vision is impaired. Headache, listlessness, and paralysis of certain cranial nerves ensue. Unless the infection can be controled with massive doses of antibiotics and an anticoagulant such as heparin, the victim may lapse into coma and die.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.

KICKS OWN ANKLE

B.P. writes: When I walk, I often kick myself on the ankle. Do you think this could be corrected by wearing special shoes?

REPLY

Yes. Bars on the soles of the shoes would alter the stance and properly distribute the weight on the feet when walking. You must help by learning to walk properly. Our leaflet on this topic may be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

HEEL BUMPS

B.E. writes: How can hard bumps on the heels be removed? They came from wearing pumps.

REPLY

If these represent calluses, relife may be obtained by covering the area with adhesive tape or wearing a different type of shoe, such as oxfords or sling pumps. Surgical removal may be necessary if the defect represents a bony growth or bursitis.

HEATING PAD

N.H. writes: Is it harmful to keep a heating pad on my back all night? I have arthritis at the base of my spine and heat is the only thing that gives me any relief.

REPLY

No, but be sure to keep it on the low setting to avoid a burn.

DON'T WE ALL?

S.G. writes: I feel miserable when I work. So much so, that I must lie down and rest and then I feel better. Have you any advice for me?

REPLY

What a convenient disease. If it's catching, no one in your family will get any work done.

COLD SOOTHES

H.W. writes: Are cold drinks and ice cream bad for a cough or a sore throat? Please advise.

REPLY

Cold liquids have a soothing effect on sore throat. Some physicians also recommend the use of an ice bag over the front of the neck.

Today's Health Hint — The baby sitter should be a responsible person.

Freeway Child's Parents Held Over

BAKERSFIELD (UPI)—The mother of 5-year-old Jody Lansdown and her common-law husband were bound over to superior court yesterday for arraignment on charges of abandoning the child beside a freeway.

Municipal Court Judge Doyle Miller took the action after denying a motion for dismissal on a charge of placing the child in circumstances likely to produce bodily harm. Mrs. Betty Louise Fouquet, 26, and her husband, Ronald Francis Fouquet, 31, also are charged with willful child abandonment.

They are accused of leaving Jody, Mrs. Fouquet's child by a previous marriage, beside U.S. Highway 99 about 25 miles south of Bakersfield last Oct. 24.

Police Arrest Parole Violator

A 30-year-old man from Redlands, San Bernardino County, was arrested in San Rafael yesterday when a routine check disclosed he was wanted for parole violation in Alameda County, police reported.

Alan Arthur Graves was booked into Marin County Jail for Alameda authorities who had issued a felony warrant for his arrest.

Graves was a passenger in a car driven by Robert Louis Guay, 20, of San Francisco, which was stopped by a patrol car at 4:04 a.m. on Lincoln Avenue after it was seen traveling without lights. Guay was cited for having open containers of beer in his car, police said.

Petaluma Council To Eye Bond Date

The timing of a proposed fire department and street improvement bond election will be considered at an adjourned meeting of the Petaluma City Council Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The council is considering a bond election to raise $200,000 for a new fire station and station additions and $800,000 to construct an extension to Caulfield Lane and the widening of Hopper and D Streets. Both February and June have been considered for the election.

The council will also hear a report from Councilman Phillip L. Joerger on a meeting with the Petaluma Sanitary Disposal Service on a rate increase.

The ringneck pheasant may not be a native species, but he's no newcomer either. He landed in New York State first between 1728 and 1731 when Governor James Montgomery stocked several dozen on what is now known as Governor's Island in New York harbor.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

A Danger Sign: Triangle Area Appearing On The Face

VAN DELLEN

A triangular area on the face is regarded as dangerous. Its base is a line extending through both corners of the mouth and the peak is located on the forehead just above the bridge of the nose. The area includes the entire nose, inner part of the eyebrows, and upper lip.

Why is the triangle dangerous? Infections in this area may spread directly to a large vein of the brain (cavernous sinus). This is always a possibility because one of the lesser veins that drains the area makes a connection with this cerebral venous center. In addition, these vessels have no valves and as a result the blood may flow in all directions.

AN INFLAMMATION in this area irritates the walls of the cavernous sinus and shortly thereafter the entire passageway is blocked with clotted blood. Once this develops, the outcome is extremely poor (80 per cent die). On the other hand, most infections in the dangerous triangle respond rapidly to treatment. Never squeeze or scratch a pimple or other infection. See your physician because the infection can be controled with applications of hot, wet dressings and an antibiotic such as penicillin.

Many infections in this area are traced originally to plucking nasal hairs or eyebrows. They may also follow a scratch or injury. The risk of developing a cavernous sinus thrombosis is very small considering how often women pluck these hairs. Cleanliness is of utmost importance. And, should the area become red and swollen, call the physician.

WHEN THE infection spreads via the veins to the brain, the temperature may reach 106 degrees Fahrenheit. The eyelids swell and vision is impaired. Headache, listlessness, and paralysis of certain cranial nerves ensue. Unless the infection can be controled with massive doses of antibiotics and an anticoagulant such as heparin, the victim may lapse into coma and die.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.

KICKS OWN ANKLE

B.P. writes: When I walk, I often kick myself on the ankle. Do you think this could be corrected by wearing special shoes?

REPLY

Yes. Bars on the soles of the shoes would alter the stance and properly distribute the weight on the feet when walking. You must help by learning to walk properly. Our leaflet on this topic may be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

HEEL BUMPS

B.E. writes: How can hard bumps on the heels be removed? They came from wearing pumps.

REPLY

If these represent calluses, relife may be obtained by covering the area with adhesive tape or wearing a different type of shoe, such as oxfords or sling pumps. Surgical removal may be necessary if the defect represents a bony growth or bursitis.

HEATING PAD

N.H. writes: Is it harmful to keep a heating pad on my back all night? I have arthritis at the base of my spine and heat is the only thing that gives me any relief.

REPLY

No, but be sure to keep it on the low setting to avoid a burn.

DON'T WE ALL?

S.G. writes: I feel miserable when I work. So much so, that I must lie down and rest and then I feel better. Have you any advice for me?

REPLY

What a convenient disease. If it's catching, no one in your family will get any work done.

COLD SOOTHES

H.W. writes: Are cold drinks and ice cream bad for a cough or a sore throat? Please advise.

REPLY

Cold liquids have a soothing effect on sore throat. Some physicians also recommend the use of an ice bag over the front of the neck.

Freeway Child's Parents Held Over

BAKERSFIELD (UPI)—The mother of 5-year-old Jody Lansdown and her common-law husband were bound over to superior court yesterday for arraignment on charges of abandoning the child beside a freeway.

Municipal Court Judge Doyle Miller took the action after denying a motion for dismissal on a charge of placing the child in circumstances likely to produce bodily harm. Mrs. Betty Louise Fouquet, 26, and her husband, Ronald Francis Fouquet, 31, also are charged with willful child abandonment.

They are accused of leaving Jody, Mrs. Fouquet's child by a previous marriage, beside U.S. Highway 99 about 25 miles south of Bakersfield last Oct. 24.

Police Arrest Parole Violator

A 30-year-old man from Redlands, San Bernardino County, was arrested in San Rafael yesterday when a routine check disclosed he was wanted for parole violation in Alameda County, police reported.

Alan Arthur Graves was booked into Marin County Jail for Alameda authorities who had issued a felony warrant for his arrest.

Graves was a passenger in a car driven by Robert Louis Guay, 20, of San Francisco, which was stopped by a patrol car at 4:04 a.m. on Lincoln Avenue after it was seen traveling without lights. Guay was cited for having open containers of beer in his car, police said.

Petaluma Council To Eye Bond Date

The timing of a proposed fire department and street improvement bond election will be considered at an adjourned meeting of the Petaluma City Council Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The council is considering a bond election to raise $200,000 for a new fire station and station additions and $800,000 to construct an extension to Caulfield Lane and the widening of Hopper and D Streets. Both February and June have been considered for the election.

The council will also hear a report from Councilman Phillip L. Joerger on a meeting with the Petaluma Sanitary Disposal Service on a rate increase.

The ringneck pheasant may not be a native species, but he's no newcomer either. He landed in New York State first between 1728 and 1731 when Governor James Montgomery stocked several dozen on what is now known as Governor's Island in New York harbor.

Gifts Sought For Children In Hospitals

Gifts for children in the wards at Sonoma and Napa state hospitals will be collected at the third annual Christmas party sponsored by the Marin Co-op and Marin Association for Mental Health on Dec. 13.

Dr. Robert W. Burke of San Rafael, playing Santa Claus, will collect the unwrapped gifts at the party in the Co-op meeting room at 71 Tamal Vista Drive, Corte Madera.

A performance by the Mime Troupe of San Francisco will open the two sessions of the party at 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Group singing of Christmas carols will be accompanied by guitars. Punch and cookies will be served.

Among gifts recommended for children in the hospital are: Art supplies, such as watercolor paints, art paper, crayons, blunt scissors, clay, paint brushes, yarn and burlap; wading pools; indestructible toys; dolls; books; games; cards; various type of balls; food and records for teen-agers.

Information may be obtained from Mrs. Daniel C. Beittel of 1368 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael.

Liver Switch Fatal To Boy

DENVER (AP) — A small Seattle boy died late yesterday, less than 24 hours after surgeons gave him a transplanted chimpanzee liver in a last-chance effort to save his life.

Tests following the 14-hour operation at the University of Colorado Medical Center showed the liver was functioning but the 7-months-old child remained critically ill, surviving as long as he did only with the aid of a respirator.

The child, not identified further by the hospital, grew weaker during the night and died shortly before midnight, a spokesman said.

TOMORROW IS PEARL HARBOR DAY

It was on a Sunday morning Dec. 7, 1941, that Americans learned they were involved in the armed struggle that had been spreading across the world since the late 30s. Striking the most deadly aerial blow ever unleashed up to that time, the Japanese sank the battleship Arizona (above) and others anchored in Pearl Harbor, killing 2,243 officers and men. Today, a simple memorial (below) marks the Arizona's resting place, where tomorrow memorial rites will recall the battle that brought the U.S. into World War II.

Academy Trio In Competition

Three San Rafael Military Academy students have been chosen to represent their school in a competition to select the Outstanding Teen-ager of America for 1970.

They are: Steven J. Appleby of San Rafael, Kevin V. McCloskey of Martinez and Gregory R. Jenny of Dixon, Solano County. The boys, nominated by the Academy, were selected by the Outstanding American Foundation, a nonprofit Chicago foundation whose purpose is to honor and encourage young people.

The three were selected on the basis of ability and achievement and will compete with other teen-agers in California for the Governor's Trophy, presented annually to the most outstanding teen-ager of each state. State winners will compete in a national competition.

Gifted Child's Education Is Topic Of Series

An 11-week course, "Education of the Gifted Child," for parents and teachers will be presented by the Adult Education Committee of the San Rafael Association for Gifted Children at San Rafael High School next month.

The course will be given on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The first five weeks will be devoted to special problems encountered in educating the gifted child such as underachievement, aggression-hostility and discipline. Mental health and social adjustments of gifted children will also be discussed.

The techniques parents and teachers can use in attacking the problems in teaching the children will be discussed during the last six weeks.

Information on registration may be obtained from Dr. A. G. Scottolini at 30 Bret Harte Road, San Rafael.

Peace Rally Set For Greenbrae

A peace rally for the "silent majority" residents of Greenbrae and Kentfield who oppose President Richard M. Nixon's policy will be held at 11 a.m. next Saturday on the Wolfe Grade School field.

Bryce W. Anderson, executive city editor of the Independent-Journal, and Rev. Roswell Gordon of the First Presbyterian Church, San Anselmo, will speak as the rally opens, to begin a discussion among participants, organizers reported.

The Neighborhood Peace Committee working on the project urged residents to walk to the school, joining friends and neighbors along the way.

In case of inclement weather, the rally will be held in the school library.

Las Vegas Visitors Lose Lives In New Mexico Crash

ALBUQUERQUE (UPI) —The lure of Las Vegas frequently tugged the group from the barren west Texas Panhandle.

Usually when they went, they stayed at a plush hotel where the cheapest room is $25 a night. This time they stayed four days.

At midmorning yesterday the 11 funlovers climbed aboard Carroll Thompson's twin-engine Lockheed Lodestar for the three hour 40-minute flight to Dalhart.

Near Albuquerque, Thompson ran into rough weather. When he was just east of the 10,600-foot-high Sandia mountains he decided to return to Albuquerque, nestled at the western foot of the rugged Sandias.

About 500 yards from the runway the plane exploded and crashed, killing all 11.

"I heard the plane and, looked out a window, I saw it was flying awful low. Then it exploded and people began to fall out," said Mrs. Carolyn Corley, who has lived in a neat cream-colored stucco home on the edge of Coronado Airport since 1946.

Wreckage, luggage and bodies were strewn along the plane's path.

Bernalillo county coroner Dr. Gerome Greenblatt said the 11 bodies—eight men and three women—were scattered on the tumbleweed-covered plain.

Scattered amid the wreckage were two partially burned $20 bills.

It was the worst airplane crash in New Mexico since a Trans World Airlines plane crashed into Sandia Peak in February, 1955, killing 11 persons.

Flu Sweeps France

PARIS (UPI) — Drug manufacturers today reported they were unable to keep up with demand for medicine to cope with an Asian influenza epidemic sweeping France.

From the Spanish border across the entire south of the country, 25 per cent of the inhabitants were estimated confined to bed with flu.

Gifts Sought For Children In Hospitals

Gifts for children in the wards at Sonoma and Napa state hospitals will be collected at the third annual Christmas party sponsored by the Marin Co-op and Marin Association for Mental Health on Dec. 13.

Dr. Robert W. Burke of San Rafael, playing Santa Claus, will collect the unwrapped gifts at the party in the Co-op meeting room at 71 Tamal Vista Drive, Corte Madera.

A performance by the Mime Troupe of San Francisco will open the two sessions of the party at 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Group singing of Christmas carols will be accompanied by guitars. Punch and cookies will be served.

Among gifts recommended for children in the hospital are: Art supplies, such as watercolor paints, art paper, crayons, blunt scissors, clay, paint brushes, yarn and burlap; wading pools; indestructible toys; dolls; books; games; cards; various type of balls; food and records for teen-agers.

Information may be obtained from Mrs. Daniel C. Beittel of 1368 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael.

Liver Switch Fatal To Boy

DENVER (AP) — A small Seattle boy died late yesterday, less than 24 hours after surgeons gave him a transplanted chimpanzee liver in a last-chance effort to save his life.

Tests following the 14-hour operation at the University of Colorado Medical Center showed the liver was functioning but the 7-months-old child remained critically ill, surviving as long as he did only with the aid of a respirator.

The child, not identified further by the hospital, grew weaker during the night and died shortly before midnight, a spokesman said.

TOMORROW IS PEARL HARBOR DAY

It was on a Sunday morning Dec. 7, 1941, that Americans learned they were involved in the armed struggle that had been spreading across the world since the late 30s. Striking the most deadly aerial blow ever unleashed up to that time, the Japanese sank the battleship Arizona (above) and others anchored in Pearl Harbor, killing 2,243 officers and men. Today, a simple memorial (below) marks the Arizona's resting place, where tomorrow memorial rites will recall the battle that brought the U.S. into World War II.

Academy Trio In Competition

Three San Rafael Military Academy students have been chosen to represent their school in a competition to select the Outstanding Teen-ager of America for 1970.

They are: Steven J. Appleby of San Rafael, Kevin V. McCloskey of Martinez and Gregory R. Jenny of Dixon, Solano County. The boys, nominated by the Academy, were selected by the Outstanding American Foundation, a nonprofit Chicago foundation whose purpose is to honor and encourage young people.

The three were selected on the basis of ability and achievement and will compete with other teen-agers in California for the Governor's Trophy, presented annually to the most outstanding teen-ager of each state. State winners will compete in a national competition.

Gifted Child's Education Is Topic Of Series

An 11-week course, "Education of the Gifted Child," for parents and teachers will be presented by the Adult Education Committee of the San Rafael Association for Gifted Children at San Rafael High School next month.

The course will be given on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The first five weeks will be devoted to special problems encountered in educating the gifted child such as underachievement, aggression-hostility and discipline. Mental health and social adjustments of gifted children will also be discussed.

The techniques parents and teachers can use in attacking the problems in teaching the children will be discussed during the last six weeks.

Information on registration may be obtained from Dr. A. G. Scottolini at 30 Bret Harte Road, San Rafael.

Peace Rally Set For Greenbrae

A peace rally for the "silent majority" residents of Greenbrae and Kentfield who oppose President Richard M. Nixon's policy will be held at 11 a.m. next Saturday on the Wolfe Grade School field.

Bryce W. Anderson, executive city editor of the Independent-Journal, and Rev. Roswell Gordon of the First Presbyterian Church, San Anselmo, will speak as the rally opens, to begin a discussion among participants, organizers reported.

The Neighborhood Peace Committee working on the project urged residents to walk to the school, joining friends and neighbors along the way.

In case of inclement weather, the rally will be held in the school library.

Las Vegas Visitors Lose Lives In New Mexico Crash

ALBUQUERQUE (UPI) —The lure of Las Vegas frequently tugged the group from the barren west Texas Panhandle.

Usually when they went, they stayed at a plush hotel where the cheapest room is $25 a night. This time they stayed four days.

At midmorning yesterday the 11 funlovers climbed aboard Carroll Thompson's twin-engine Lockheed Lodestar for the three hour 40-minute flight to Dalhart.

Near Albuquerque, Thompson ran into rough weather. When he was just east of the 10,600-foot-high Sandia mountains he decided to return to Albuquerque, nestled at the western foot of the rugged Sandias.

About 500 yards from the runway the plane exploded and crashed, killing all 11.

"I heard the plane and, looked out a window, I saw it was flying awful low. Then it exploded and people began to fall out," said Mrs. Carolyn Corley, who has lived in a neat cream-colored stucco home on the edge of Coronado Airport since 1946.

Wreckage, luggage and bodies were strewn along the plane's path.

Bernalillo county coroner Dr. Gerome Greenblatt said the 11 bodies—eight men and three women—were scattered on the tumbleweed-covered plain.

Scattered amid the wreckage were two partially burned $20 bills.

It was the worst airplane crash in New Mexico since a Trans World Airlines plane crashed into Sandia Peak in February, 1955, killing 11 persons.

Flu Sweeps France

PARIS (UPI) — Drug manufacturers today reported they were unable to keep up with demand for medicine to cope with an Asian influenza epidemic sweeping France.

From the Spanish border across the entire south of the country, 25 per cent of the inhabitants were estimated confined to bed with flu.

HOW TO PLAY BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

It's Frustrating Task To Teach The Art Of A Finesse

Like everybody else who works with bridge players, I have spent thousands of hours teaching beginners to take a simple finesse.

And after they have emerged from their cocoons, I spend more thousands of hours teaching them not to take that same kind of simple finesse. It's all very frustrating.

OPENING LEAD

If you consider only the clubs in the hand shown today, you'll see that the opening lead gives you the chance to take a simple finesse.

You can play a low club from the dummy to make sure of winning a trick with the queen of clubs.

If East has the king of clubs, he can play it; but that makes the queen good for a later trick.

If East doesn't have the king of clubs, South can win the first trick with the queen.

That's what I would point out if you were a beginner.

It isn't a difficult lesson, but most beginners need to have it pointed out.

CHANGED LESSON

The lesson must be changed for an experienced player.

South must not take that simple finesse in clubs at the first trick.

If East has the king of clubs, he will win the first trick and shift to hearts. Then the defenders will easily get three heart tricks in addition to the king of clubs and the ace of diamonds. South will go down one.

TO PROTECT CONTRACT

Declarer can make sure of his contract by playing the ace of clubs at the first trick and then developing the diamonds.

East can take the ace of diamonds and a club, but cannot prevent South from taking four diamonds, three spades, one heart and at least one club.

The beginner concentrates on winning as many tricks as he can in each suit.

The experienced player must think of the hand as a whole before he takes a finesse.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player bids two diamonds.

You hold:
♠ K J 7

♦ Q 10 6 2
♣ A 10 9 4.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Double.

You will probably win two diamond tricks, a club and a spade, and your partner should win about three tricks for his opening bid.

You will thus collect a two-trick penalty if partner has a minimum opening bid.

If partner has more than minimum strength, you should collect a bigger penalty, more than enough to compensate you for not bidding a game of your own.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Dec. 6, the 340th day of 1969 with 25 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Venus and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1917, 1,630 persons died when a Belgian relief ship and a French munitions vessel collided and exploded in the harbor at Halifax, Nova Scotia.

In 1933, Americans crowded into liquor stores and cafes to buy their first legal alcoholic beverages in 13 years.

In 1941, President Franklin Roosevelt sent a note to Tokyo, saying he hoped Emperor Hirohito was giving "thought in this definite emergency of dispelling the dark (war) clouds." Japan attacked Pearl Harbor the next day.

In 1943, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower became commander-in-chief of Operation Overlord, the forthcoming invasion of the continent of Europe.

A thought for the day: President Franklin Roosevelt said, "We, too, born to freedom and believing in freedom, are willing to fight to maintain freedom."

Guest Will Address Church Prayer Forum

Special guest at Holy Innocents' Parish, Corte Madera next week will be Don W. Basham, author of "Face Up to a Miracle." He will address the weekly Wednesday evening Prayer Forum, at 8 p.m.

Dr. Basham has had ministries in Toronto, Canada, and in Pennsylvania, and he has made tours of Europe and the United States and is active in the Charismatic nenewal.

Yesterday's Answer

High Court Picks Ethics Watchdogs

WASHINGTO N(AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger yesterday appointed 10 federal judges to oversee the off-bench activities of all federal judges.

Three of the 10 judges, working together as a review committee, are to receive reports every three months of any payments of more than $100 any federal judge acquires for out-of-court activity.

A second, seven-man committee will function as an advisory panel. This group will pass judgment on teaching, lecturing, writing, work with charitable organizations and service on boards of colleges, churches and other nonprofit institutions.

Burger's announcement, made at the Supreme Court, said this committee will give its opinions "upon request." Presumably this means unless the seven review judges are asked what they think about an off-bench job they will give no advice nor render an opinion.

Burger said the two committees will serve until the American Bar Association completes its current study of revising the canons of judicial ethics and until the new canons are adopted by the judicial conference. This study is headed by Chief Judge Roger Traynor of the California Supreme Court and is expected to take about a year.

The judicial conference asserts no authority over the Supreme Court and its justices evidently will not make the quarterly reports all other federal judges will submit.

12th Night Yule Event Canceled

Tiburon's annual 12th Night Christmas tree burning ceremony has been canceled by Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commission in order to comply with the Jan. 1 ban on backyard and outdoor burning.

Chairman George Ellman said commissioners agreed Thursday that in the interests of clean air and conservation they should not press for a burning permit for the traditional ceremony, scheduled for Jan. 6.

Commissioners F. G. Knight and Donald S. Tayer were named to a committee to develop another civic function to be held later in the spring replacing the tree burning ceremony, Ellman said.

The nation's population may reach 360 million by the year 2000 and unless home construction increases by 50 per cent over current levels, many of them will not be housed.

Trio Hurt When Struck By Truck

Two boys received minor injuries and a third a fractured wrist Thursday when they ran in front of a panel truck driven by Remi Pierre Larrieu, 59, of 215 Orris Terrace, San Rafael, police reported yesterday.

Timothy Cook Kenney, 11, of 276 Fairhills Drive, was treated at Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital for a fractured left wrist after the accident at 4:15 p.m. in front of 5 Fairhills Drive, police said.

Peter Whitney Clifford, 11, of 200 Forbes Street and Walter William Bagley, 12, of 592 Fairhills Drive, received unspecified injuries and did not need medical attention, according to police.

Wheeling, Dealing A's In Four-Player Trade

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Oakland Athletics traded infielder Ted Kubiak and pitcher George Lauzerique to the Seattle Pilots today for shortstop Ray Oyler and relief pitcher Diego Segui, a former Oaklander.

Both of the American League clubs have been busy in the trading mart at baseball's winter meetings.

Kubiak, a second baseman and shortstop, hit .249 in 92 games last season. Lauzerique posted a 5-3 record for Des Moines in the American Association and a 3-4 mark for Oakland last season.

Segui, a Cuban right-hander, had been purchased from Oakland in the expansion draft last year. He had a fine season with a 12-6 won-lost record, 12 saves and a 3.36 earned run average in 66 games.

Oyler, a fine fielding, light-hitting former Detroit Tiger, batted only .165 in 106 games last season.

It was the third trade of the week by the Athletics. Earlier they traded pitcher Jim Nash to Atlanta for outfielder Felipe Alou, and first baseman Danny Cater and shortstop Ossie Chavarria to the New York Yankees for pitcher Al Downing and catcher Frank Fernandez.

Golf, Alias Palmer, Is Still Very Alive

We bring you today a medical bulletin direct from the critical ward and intensive care unit of Sports.

You can put away the beads, and hold the flowers, and call off the death watch.

Golf is able to sit up and take nourishment.

For the first time, doctors hold out hope for its complete recovery. Respiration normal, pulse stronger, temperature falling. They've removed the oxygen tent.

You will remember Golf came down with an 82 and a medically baffling disorder of the hip and backswing last summer, and took to its bed. Prognosis was not good. Some thought the case terminal. Others felt a long and painful road back was the best to hope for.

Well, Golf is alive and well and living in Latrobe, Pa. When last seen it was wearing a tan sweater, two-tone shoes, and knocking in 30-foot putts.

Some Typical Signs Of Recovery

Golf's given name is Arnold Palmer. Sometimes, it is little telltale things that indicate to a doctor a patient is on the road to recovery—a movement of a blanket, flutter of an eyelid, spot of color on a cheek. Sometimes, the patient just comes to and asks what day it is.

They knew Golf was on the mend when Palmer jerked a 3-wood out of the bag and asked the caddy to go up and hold the pin. They knew Golf was on the way back when Palmer had a choice of going under a tree or around it — and he went THROUGH. They knew Golf was recuperating when he shot a 68 on a course so tough that — on the last day when only good players were left—no one broke par, two shot 80, and nearly a half-dozen shot 77's. The host pro had trouble breaking 100.

If you think I've got my patients mixed, that the two are not interrelated, that Palmer might be sick but Golf was healthy, don't sell that to Larry Ziegler. During the period when Golf was on the shelf, Larry won his only tournament. And there wasn't enough money to pay off.

You Have To Play Off Someone

Guys who were bidding up the purses to the stratosphere when Palmer and Jack Nicklaus were matching birdies suddenly stopped answering the phone.

San Marin, Drake Cop Overtimes

The high and the mighty in Sonoma and Marin counties high school basketball knocked haads on two different courts last night, and Redwood, the Marin County Athletic League favorite, and Sonoma, North Bay League II favorite, came up hair-pin winners in non-league encounters.

Redwood just did squeeze by North Bay I favorite Santa Rosa, 57-55 at Larkspur, while Sonoma nicked a strong Petaluma team, 58-57, behind the scoring of Dan Briggs and Tom Waldron.

Tom Marker scored from the corner with 18 seconds left to give Redwood its third straight win against one loss. Jerry Piro led the scoring with 15 points while 6-foot-6 junior Bill Challender had 16 rebounds and 13 points.

In other games last night, Drake opened its season by catching Vallejo in overtime, 64-58, San Marin did the same overtime job to Piner of Santa Rosa, 61-58, and Tamalpais topped Poly of San Francisco, 64-57 and San Rafael whipped Healdsburg, 58-49.

LOSING LEDGER

On the losing ledger were Terra Linda, which was belted by DeAnza of Richmond, 84-50 and Novato, which dropped a harrowing, 60-59 decision to San Francisco powerhouse Lowell.

Drake, which had trailed by six points at one point, won it in overtime when Glenn Pfaff sank both ends of two one-in-one free throw situations.

Gary Howard, who had scored a bucket to tie the game for San Marin, won it with a clinching pair of free throws in overtime as he scored 32 points to lead the Mustangs.

Tamalpais outscored Poly, 19-8, in the final period, to give Coach Bernie Schneider his first victory over the city school since joining the Indians, almost four years ago.

Cerrudo's Fortune: $617

MIAMI (AP) — There's a definite chance that Ron Cerrudo of Napa will not win the $125,000 Danny Thomas Diplomat Golf Classic, not the way Gay Brewer is shooting.

But Cerrudo has practically nailed down something almost as important for him. He's got almost the No. 60 spot in the 1969 earnings assured simply by qualifying for the final two rounds of the tournament, which guarantees him some kind of earnings for the week's work.

Jack McGowan, who held the No. 60 spot going into the tournament, closed out with a second 75 yesterday, finishing with a 150 total, not good enough to qualify for the final two rounds.

Cerrudo, formerly of San Rafael, had a 72-71-143 total. Now he needs to finish high enough to earn $617 for the tournament in order to overtake McGowan.

The top 60 money-makers on the tour automatically qualify for most major tournaments.

Brewer, meanwhile, had two things going for him, an ancient putter that found new life, and Bobby Nichols.

"I've played with him eight or nine times in our careers," said Nichols, Brewer's playing partner in the first two rounds, "and he's never shot higher than 67."

The magic remained in the second round yesterday, with Brewer taking a six-under-par 66 for the 36-hole lead at 131, 13 under par on the 6,964 yard, par 72 Diplomat — Presidential golf course.

He held a four stroke lead over rebounding Arnold Palmer and rookie Hal Underwood going into today's third round in this, the last stop of the year on the PGA tour.

Palmer, who snapped a year-long slump with a victory last week, and the red-haired Underwood, on the tour only six months, were tied for second at 135s. Each had a second round 67.

"I was scrambling," whispered Brewer, who contracted laryngitis and can barely speak, "but I was putting so well. I hit some bad shots but I got away with it."

Sonoma State Wins Opener Over Fresno

The Sonoma State Cossacks opened their 1969-70 basketball season on a highly successful note last night, trouncing Fresno Pacific, 82-76, at Sonoma State.

The Cossacks almost squandered a fat lead, as Fresno whittled a 44-30 Sonoma lead down to the final margin.

Ramon Soloman, Sonoma's top scorer last season, got right back into the swing of things as he pumped in 31 points while Roy Jones added 15 points.

Mariners Get First Cage Win

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

ROCKLIN (Placer County) — John Panagakis finally got what he wanted.

The College of Marin head basketball coach got his first win in his new job, and it was a victory in the grand style as the Tars bowled over usually tough Sierra College, 98-71, on a devastating fast break last night.

"Our fast break was really going well," Panagakis said. "We just jumped off right away. We had all our kids in there practically the whole game."

The Tars streaked to a 42-31 halftime lead against the Wolverines and never looked back.

It was a rough and sloppy non-league game as 52 fouls were called on an even distribution.

SCHAFER HIGH

Marin's Pat Schafer, the former Tamalpais High School star, pumped in a 11 out of 19 free throws and added nine fielders to lead all scorers with 29 points. He got help from Chip Tyson with 14 points and Bob Tate with 13 as a total 11 Tars got into the scoring act.

Don Davies topped Sierra with 22 points.

"It certainly feels good to win that first one," Panagakis said. "But we actually played well enough to win the other two."

Red Hot Warriors Take A Long Rest

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Warriors have the weekend off, hoping the rest won't cool a hot streak of five vicctories in seven games and a climb to second place in the National Basketball Association's Western Division.

With Jeff Mullins scoring 31 points and Nate Thurmond 30, the Warriors came from behind in the final quarter here last night to defeat the San Diego Rockets 112-107.

That triumph, coupled with Chicago's loss to Phoenix, moved the Warriors a half game ahead of the Bulls into second place in the division. It also gained them a game on the Atlanta Hawks, who lost to Cincinnati.

ATLANTA NEXT

The Warriors play next on Tuesday in Salt Lake City against Atlanta, which now holds the Western Division lead by three games.

San Francisco had a 52-49 halftime lead but fell behind 80-78 in the third quarter. A Warrior spurt in which they outscored San Diego 14-4 in a four-minute stretch provided San Francisco a six-point lead which San Diego whittled to 109-107 with a little more than a minute left.

Don Kojis was the Rockets' leading scorer with 23.

Joe Ellis had 20 points for the Warriors when a hand injury sidelined him midway in the last period.

Wheeling, Dealing A's In Four-Player Trade

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Oakland Athletics traded infielder Ted Kubiak and pitcher George Lauzerique to the Seattle Pilots today for shortstop Ray Oyler and relief pitcher Diego Segui, a former Oaklander.

Both of the American League clubs have been busy in the trading mart at baseball's winter meetings.

Kubiak, a second baseman and shortstop, hit .249 in 92 games last season. Lauzerique posted a 5-3 record for Des Moines in the American Association and a 3-4 mark for Oakland last season.

Segui, a Cuban right-hander, had been purchased from Oakland in the expansion draft last year. He had a fine season with a 12-6 won-lost record, 12 saves and a 3.36 earned run average in 66 games.

Oyler, a fine fielding, light-hitting former Detroit Tiger, batted only .165 in 106 games last season.

It was the third trade of the week by the Athletics. Earlier they traded pitcher Jim Nash to Atlanta for outfielder Felipe Alou, and first baseman Danny Cater and shortstop Ossie Chavarria to the New York Yankees for pitcher Al Downing and catcher Frank Fernandez.

Golf, Alias Palmer, Is Still Very Alive

We bring you today a medical bulletin direct from the critical ward and intensive care unit of Sports.

You can put away the beads, and hold the flowers, and call off the death watch.

Golf is able to sit up and take nourishment.

For the first time, doctors hold out hope for its complete recovery. Respiration normal, pulse stronger, temperature falling. They've removed the oxygen tent.

You will remember Golf came down with an 82 and a medically baffling disorder of the hip and backswing last summer, and took to its bed. Prognosis was not good. Some thought the case terminal. Others felt a long and painful road back was the best to hope for.

Well, Golf is alive and well and living in Latrobe, Pa. When last seen it was wearing a tan sweater, two-tone shoes, and knocking in 30-foot putts.

Some Typical Signs Of Recovery

Golf's given name is Arnold Palmer. Sometimes, it is little telltale things that indicate to a doctor a patient is on the road to recovery—a movement of a blanket, flutter of an eyelid, spot of color on a cheek. Sometimes, the patient just comes to and asks what day it is.

They knew Golf was on the mend when Palmer jerked a 3-wood out of the bag and asked the caddy to go up and hold the pin. They knew Golf was on the way back when Palmer had a choice of going under a tree or around it — and he went THROUGH. They knew Golf was recuperating when he shot a 68 on a course so tough that — on the last day when only good players were left—no one broke par, two shot 80, and nearly a half-dozen shot 77's. The host pro had trouble breaking 100.

If you think I've got my patients mixed, that the two are not interrelated, that Palmer might be sick but Golf was healthy, don't sell that to Larry Ziegler. During the period when Golf was on the shelf, Larry won his only tournament. And there wasn't enough money to pay off.

You Have To Play Off Someone

Guys who were bidding up the purses to the stratosphere when Palmer and Jack Nicklaus were matching birdies suddenly stopped answering the phone.

San Marin, Drake Cop Overtimes

The high and the mighty in Sonoma and Marin counties high school basketball knocked haads on two different courts last night, and Redwood, the Marin County Athletic League favorite, and Sonoma, North Bay League II favorite, came up hair-pin winners in non-league encounters.

Redwood just did squeeze by North Bay I favorite Santa Rosa, 57-55 at Larkspur, while Sonoma nicked a strong Petaluma team, 58-57, behind the scoring of Dan Briggs and Tom Waldron.

Tom Marker scored from the corner with 18 seconds left to give Redwood its third straight win against one loss. Jerry Piro led the scoring with 15 points while 6-foot-6 junior Bill Challender had 16 rebounds and 13 points.

In other games last night, Drake opened its season by catching Vallejo in overtime, 64-58, San Marin did the same overtime job to Piner of Santa Rosa, 61-58, and Tamalpais topped Poly of San Francisco, 64-57 and San Rafael whipped Healdsburg, 58-49.

LOSING LEDGER

On the losing ledger were Terra Linda, which was belted by DeAnza of Richmond, 84-50 and Novato, which dropped a harrowing, 60-59 decision to San Francisco powerhouse Lowell.

Drake, which had trailed by six points at one point, won it in overtime when Glenn Pfaff sank both ends of two one-in-one free throw situations.

Gary Howard, who had scored a bucket to tie the game for San Marin, won it with a clinching pair of free throws in overtime as he scored 32 points to lead the Mustangs.

Tamalpais outscored Poly, 19-8, in the final period, to give Coach Bernie Schneider his first victory over the city school since joining the Indians, almost four years ago.

HE'S GOING LIKE 60

Cerrudo's Fortune: $617

MIAMI (AP) — There's a definite chance that Ron Cerrudo of Napa will not win the $125,000 Danny Thomas Diplomat Golf Classic, not the way Gay Brewer is shooting.

But Cerrudo has practically nailed down something almost as important for him. He's got almost the No. 60 spot in the 1969 earnings assured simply by qualifying for the final two rounds of the tournament, which guarantees him some kind of earnings for the week's work.

Jack McGowan, who held the No. 60 spot going into the tournament, closed out with a second 75 yesterday, finishing with a 150 total, not good enough to qualify for the final two rounds.

Cerrudo, formerly of San Rafael, had a 72-71-143 total. Now he needs to finish high enough to earn $617 for the tournament in order to overtake McGowan.

The top 60 money-makers on the tour automatically qualify for most major tournaments.

Brewer, meanwhile, had two things going for him, an ancient putter that found new life, and Bobby Nichols.

"I've played with him eight or nine times in our careers," said Nichols, Brewer's playing partner in the first two rounds, "and he's never shot higher than 67."

The magic remained in the second round yesterday, with Brewer taking a six-under-par 66 for the 36-hole lead at 131, 13 under par on the 6,964 yard, par 72 Diplomat — Presidential golf course.

He held a four stroke lead over rebounding Arnold Palmer and rookie Hal Underwood going into today's third round in this, the last stop of the year on the PGA tour.

Palmer, who snapped a year-long slump with a victory last week, and the red-haired Underwood, on the tour only six months, were tied for second at 135s. Each had a second round 67.

"I was scrambling," whispered Brewer, who contracted laryngitis and can barely speak, "but I was putting so well. I hit some bad shots but I got away with it."

Mariners Get First Cage Win

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

ROCKLIN (Placer County) — John Panagakis finally got what he wanted.

The College of Marin head basketball coach got his first win in his new job, and it was a victory in the grand style as the Tars bowled over usually tough Sierra College, 98-71, on a devastating fast break last night.

"Our fast break was really going well," Panagakis said. "We just jumped off right away. We had all our kids in there practically the whole game."

The Tars streaked to a 42-31 halftime lead against the Wolverines and never looked back.

It was a rough and sloppy non-league game as 52 fouls were called on an even distribution.

SCHAFER HIGH

Marin's Pat Schafer, the former Tamalpais High School star, pumped in a 11 out of 19 free throws and added nine fielders to lead all scorers with 29 points. He got help from Chip Tyson with 14 points and Bob Tate with 13 as a total 11 Tars got into the scoring act.

Don Davies topped Sierra with 22 points.

"It certainly feels good to win that first one," Panagakis said. "But we actually played well enough to win the other two."

Raiders Have A Score To Settle

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Raiders play the last team they lost to and the Cincinnati Bengals play the last team they beat when the two collide tomorrow in an American Football League contest before a sellout crowd of more than 53,000.

A 31-17 loss to the Bengals early last month is the only defeat the Raiders have suffered this year. Since then Cincinnati has been winless in four contests.

Assuming Kansas City beats Buffalo, this game will have little bearing on the Raiders' battle with the Chiefs for the AFL's Western Division title. Win or lose, the Raiders will still have to beat the Chiefs here next Saturday.

Greg Cook, the rookie Cincinnati quarterback who threw three scoring passes against the Raiders last time, has been troubled by a sore arm, but is expected to start. Sam Wyche will be ready if Cook falters.

Oakland quarterback Daryle Lamonica needs six touchdown passes in the two remaining regular-season games to tie the AFL record of 36 set by teammate George Blanda in 1961 when he was with Houston.

Wide receivers Fred Biletnikoff and Warren Wells are tied for the league lead in touchdown receptions with 11 each.

Cincinnati got a fine rushing effort in the Buffalo snow last week from Paul Robinson, 1968 rookie of the year. In a losing effort against the Bills, Robinson picked up 117 yards in 24 carries, his best day of the season.

The Bengals' starting defensive tackles, Bill Staley and Andy Rice, have been troubled with injuries, but are considered likely to play.

For the Raiders, tackle Bob Svihus is doubtful with a bruised leg. Center Jim Otto should play despite some bad bruises.

Pride, Prestige And Winning Streaks On Line In Rams-Vikings Explosion

By MIKE BRYSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

It may be only a preview of more important things to come, but you'll get a strong argument from a couple of guys if you think there'll be any "holding back" in tomorrow's slam-bang collision between the Los Angeles Rams and the Minnesota Vikings.

In reality, there's nothing more than prestige, pride and a couple of lengthy winning streaks at stake since both teams already have wrapped up divisional titles, setting up a Dec. 27 showdown between the two for the National Football League's Western Conference title.

But, from the way both Viking Coach Bud Grant and Ram boss George Allen are talking, tomorrow's meeting sounds like the REAL thing . . . not just a preview.

(The game will be televised by CBS at 1 p.m.)

"We'll play to win and play tough," barked Allen, whose team hasn't been beaten in 11 games this season.

"You don't improve by sitting on the bench or taking things easy. We'll play this game like we've played each one the past four years . . . and I'm sure the Vikings will play the same way."

BEST RECORD

"We anticipate a rugged contest," said Grant. "The Rams have the best record in the league, they're undefeated in 11 games and they're certainly the best team we've played all year."

Los Angeles turned back stubborn Washington 24-13 to clinch the Coastal Division title last Sunday, continuing its hopes of becoming the league's first team to go unbeaten during a regular season since the Chicago Bears turned the trick in 1942, when the campaign was only 11 games long.

Minnesota was upset at New York 24-23 on opening day, but since then the Vikings have carved out 10 consecutive victories, including a 27-0 Thanksgiving Day blanking of Detroit that assured them the Central Division title.

TV GAMES TOMORROW

10:15 a.m. — Green Bay-Cleveland, CBS.

10:30 a.m. — Denver-Miami, NBC.

1 p.m. — Minnesota-Los Angeles, CBS.

Meanwhile, Dallas, only divisional leader that hasn't sewed up a championship, should claim the Capitol crown easily tomorrow against Pittsburgh, which has lost 10 straight since an opening triumph.

OUTSIDE CHANCE

Second-place Washington, which travels to Philadelphia, has an outside chance of overtaking the Cowboys—but one more Dallas victory, or a Redskin defeat, will send the Cowboys against Cleveland's Century Division champs for the Eastern Conference title Dec. 28.

In other games tomorrow, Green Bay travels to Cleveland, Detroit goes to Baltimore, St. Louis is at New York and Atlanta plays host to New Orleans. San Francisco entertained the Chicago Bears this afternoon.

In the American Football League tomorrow, it's Boston at San Diego, Buffalo at Kansas City, Cincinnati at Oakland and Denver at Miami. The New York Jets were at Houston this afternoon.

Santa Clara Too Much For Stanford

By STEVE TOOMAJIAN
United Press International

Dick Garibaldi's Santa Clara basketball club is off to another flying start.

With four starters returning from the defending champion West Coast athletic conference team, the Broncos have knocked off their first two opponents and are placed 11th in the nation's college basketball rankings.

The Broncos threw up a fierce defense last night and came away with a 72-60 nonconference win on Stanford's court.

The Indians were unable to penetrate the hawking defense of the Bronco five—center Dennis Awtrey, forwards Ralph Ogden and Bruce Bochte, and guards Kevin Eagleson and Terry O'Brien.

LONG BOMBS

Only the long bombs of gunners Claude Terry and Dennis O'Neill kept the Indians close. Terry was high for Stanford with 19 points and O'Neill fired in 17.

The Broncos' two candidates for All-American acclaim led in scoring for both teams. Awtrey dropped in 21 and Odgen tallied 20.

In another game involving a WCAC team last night, the St. Mary's Gaels were shutout in the last seven minutes and watched Fresno State blast away with a 95-73 win.

Most Pacific-8 Conference schools found their way into the victory column, though the California Bears dropped a 98-79 decision to Brigham Young.

Washington held off a furious Seattle rally to overcome the Chieftains, 86-78, while Washington State was whipping Hawaii, 94-83.

The Trojans of Southern California busted out in the second half for an 88-74 win over sixth-ranked Colorado. Southern Cal is ranked ninth.

BOWLING

Foreign Student Is High

Jameel Rai, a native of India and a student at College of Marin, seems to be getting the hang of bowling in a hurry.

A member of the classes at Greenbrae Lanes, Jameel recently came through with a 245 game that featured seven strikes in a row. Up until then, he'd held a 157 average.

Also shooting well above her average was Dee Dee Flahive, who came through with a 209, 127 pins above her 102 average at Greenbrae.

Also at Greenbrae, Sam Hooten had a 166 triplicate and Mary Brown converted the 4-7-10 split.

At Nave Lanes, Joe Galbreath climbed the ladder in the Friday Nite Leftovers, or rather, came down one, as he had games of 170, 169, and 168 while Carol Galinski, who bowls at a 139 clip, came through with consecutive games of 162, 178, and 162 for a 502 series. Dick Anthony picked up the 6-7 split in the same league.

Jim Miller in the Hawaiian League bowled some 63 pins over his average of 135 with a 198 game.

Tracey Adams topped the San Rafael Country Club Bowl's Pee Wees with a 107 game.

Seals Barrage Nets, Gain Only A Tie With Flyers

By DAVE DIETZ

OAKLAND — The Seals unleashed 43 shots — a team high this season — at Philadelphia goaltender Bernie Parent last night, but earned only a 2-2 tie from the barrage.

Parent, one of the National Hockey League's strongest goal-tenders, was excellent, especially in the first and third periods when the Seals threatened repeatedly.

He stopped 20 shots in the first (when the Flyers got only 8) and 16 in the third, relinquishing goals to Carol Vadnais and Gary Jarrett, whose tally tied the game at 2-2 at 1:25 of the final period.

In the Oakland net, Gary Smith also played well and was left virtually helpless on both Flyer scores.

"He sure could be a boxer," Jarrett said later.

The 4,335 fans taunted Fleming for his pugnacity and a security man had to separate Reggie from an angry fan when the Flyer entered the penalty box for slugging Jarrett.

At the end of the game, Fleming and teammates Simon Nolet and Earl Heiskala swung their sticks savagely at goading, debris-throwing fans, but missed.

Golf is a geme where you have to play off someone's ball. Even in a $2 Nassau, you arrange the match and the bets around the best player.

Golf without Palmer is anarchy. There's no one's ball to play off of.

The encouraging fever chart is not Palmer's alone. For, 1969 was a year the Golden Bear went into hibernation, too. Jack Nicklaus wasn't laid up, but his game was.

In the past month and a half, only a handful of tournaments have been played. But two have been won by Nicklaus, and, now, one has been won by Palmer.

The game is in traction in periods between major matchups. It may even be pronounced dead. But, at the moment, heart massage has worked. The heart is pumping again. This will be good news to motel owners at Augusta, television networks in New York, and even though they may not think of it, to 50 other golfers who not only have something tangible to beat now but an assured payoff of 100 cents on the dollar if they do.

Dan Gurney Is Fastest Qualifier

RIVERSIDE (AP) — Dan Gurney, who turned in the fastest qualifying time yesterday for the 300-mile Rex Mays USAC championship race, might have his California protege, Swede Savage of Santa Ana, breathing down his neck tomorrow.

Savage offered the biggest surprise at the Riverside International Raceway yesterday by pushing his Eagle Ford an average of 113.336 miles per hour on the 2.5-mile course.

Gurney, from nearby Costa Mesa, earned the post position in his Eagle Ford for the $75,000 race, while his former pupil took the sixth berth. Savage is a former motorcycle racer.

Joining Gurney in the top five qualifying positions yesterday were Mark Donohue, Media, Pa., Lola Chevrolet, 116.731 m.p.h.; Al Unser, Albuquerque, N.M., Lola Ford, 116.320 m.p.h.; Mario Andretti, Nazareth, Pa., Hawk Ford, 115.830 m.p.h.; and Bobby Unser, Albuquerque, Eagle Turbo Ford, 113.924 m.p.h.

Qualifiers from yesterday and today compete tomorrow in the conclusion of the 23-race U.S. Auto Club championship circuit for 1969. The winner's purse is about $20,000.

Prep Water Polo Showdown Set

Terra Linda and Redwood high schools flexed their muscles and tuned up for their big Marin County Athletic League match next Tuesday by taking care of lesser opponents in MCAL water polo action yesterday.

Redwood ripped San Marin, 30-5, in Larkspur with Doug Brockbank scoring six goals, while Terra Linda downed San Rafael, 12-5, at San Rafael as Pat Ellington and Bob Bentley scored three goals.

Rich Barclay had three goals for the Bulldogs.

A's Get Veteran Hurler Mudcat Grant From Cards

COMBINED A P& UPI

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The St. Louis Cardinals sold veteran righthanded pitcher Jim "Mudcat" Grant to the Oakland Athletics last night.

Grant, 34, was 8-11 in 41 games last season with a 4.42 earned run average pitching for both Montreal and the Cardinals.

Grant, 12-year-veteran, has a career record of 131-113.

SPORTS SHORTS

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The New York Mets announced today the appointment of former major league infielder Chuck Hiller, a former San Francisco Giant, as manager of their Tidewater farm club in the International League.

Hiller, who managed in the Pittsburgh organization last year, replaces Roy McMillan, who is joining the Seattle Pilots as a coach next year.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The Washington Senators announced the conditional purchase of second baseman Bob Schroder from San Francisco's Phoenix farm club in the Pacific Coast League today.

Schroder, who batted .258 for Phoenix last season, goes on the Senators' major league roster.

HOCKEY

MONTREAL — The Montreal Canadiens, currently in a tight race for the National Hockey League's East Division lead, will have to do it — temporarily at least — without the services of defenseman Jacques Laperriere.

He received a three-game suspension last night from league president Clarence Campbell for shoving referee Bill Friday and linesman Pat Shetler in a game here last Saturday night.

PITTSBURGH — Ex-Oakland Seal Bryan Watson, who plays right wing and defense, has been assigned by the Pittsburgh Penguins to their Baltimore farm club in the American Hockey League.

GENERAL

WENHAM, Mass. — A fire which blazed through a three-story barn on the estate of the late socialite Frederick Ayer yesterday destroyed between 12 and 14 thoroughbreds. The barn was valued at more than $70,000.

DETROIT — The Ford Motor Co. announced yesterday that famed auto racing driver A. J. Foyt has signed an agreement to build all Ford Indianapolis-type racing engines starting next year.

Raiders Have A Score To Settle

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Raiders play the last team they lost to and the Cincinnati Bengals play the last team they beat when the two collide tomorrow in an American Football League contest before a sellout crowd of more than 53,000.

A 31-17 loss to the Bengals early last month is the only defeat the Raiders have suffered this year. Since then Cincinnati has been winless in four contests.

Assuming Kansas City beats Buffalo, this game will have little bearing on the Raiders' battle with the Chiefs for the AFL's Western Division title. Win or lose, the Raiders will still have to beat the Chiefs here next Saturday.

Greg Cook, the rookie Cincinnati quarterback who threw three scoring passes against the Raiders last time, has been troubled by a sore arm, but is expected to start. Sam Wyche will be ready if Cook falters.

Oakland quarterback Daryle Lamonica needs six touchdown passes in the two remaining regular-season games to tie the AFL record of 36 set by teammate George Blanda in 1961 when he was with Houston.

Wide receivers Fred Biletnikoff and Warren Wells are tied for the league lead in touchdown receptions with 11 each.

Cincinnati got a fine rushing effort in the Buffalo snow last week from Paul Robinson, 1968 rookie of the year. In a losing effort against the Bills, Robinson picked up 117 yards in 24 carries, his best day of the season.

The Bengals' starting defensive tackles, Bill Staley and Andy Rice, have been troubled with injuries, but are considered likely to play.

For the Raiders, tackle Bob Svihus is doubtful with a bruised leg. Center Jim Otto should play despite some bad bruises.

Pride, Prestige And Winning Streaks On Line In Rams-Vikings Explosion

By MIKE BRYSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

It may be only a preview of more important things to come, but you'll get a strong argument from a couple of guys if you think there'll be any "holding back" in tomorrow's slam-bang collision between the Los Angeles Rams and the Minnesota Vikings.

In reality, there's nothing more than prestige, pride and a couple of lengthy winning streaks at stake since both teams already have wrapped up divisional titles, setting up a Dec. 27 showdown between the the two for the National Football League's Western Conference title.

But, from the way both Viking Coach Bud Grant and Ram boss George Allen are talking, tomorrow's meeting sounds like the REAL thing . . . not just a preview.

(The game will be televised by CBS at 1 p.m.)

"We'll play to win and play tough," barked Allen, whose team hasn't been beaten in 11 games this season.

"You don't improve by sitting on the bench or taking things easy. We'll play this game like we've played each one the past four years . . . and I'm sure the Vikings will play the same way."

BEST RECORD

"We anticipate a rugged contest," said Grant. "The Rams have the best record in the league, they're undefeated in 11 games and they're certainly the best team we've played all year."

Los Angeles turned back stubborn Washington 24-13 to clinch the Coastal Division title last Sunday, continuing its hopes of becoming the league's first team to go unbeaten during a regular season since the Chicago Bears turned the trick in 1942, when the campaign was only 11 games long.

Minnesota was upset at New York 24-23 on opening day, but since then the Vikings have carved out 10 consecutive victories, including a 27-0 Thanksgiving Day blanking of Detroit that assured them the Central Division title.

TV GAMES TOMORROW

10:15 a.m. — Green Bay-Cleveland, CBS.

10:30 a.m. — Denver-Miami, NBC.

1 p.m. — Minnesota-Los Angeles, CBS.

Meanwhile, Dallas, only divisional leader that hasn't sewed up a championship, should claim the Capitol crown easily tomorrow against Pittsburgh, which has lost 10 straight since an opening triumph.

OUTSIDE CHANCE

Second-place Washington, which travels to Philadelphia, has an outside chance of overtaking the Cowboys—but one more Dallas victory, or a Redskin defeat, will send the Cowboys against Cleveland's Century Division champs for the Eastern Conference title Dec. 28.

In other games tomorrow, Green Bay travels to Cleveland, Detroit goes to Baltimore, St. Louis is at New York and Atlanta plays host to New Orleans. San Francisco entertained the Chicago Bears this afternoon.

In the American Football League tomorrow, it's Boston at San Diego, Buffalo at Kansas City, Cincinnati at Oakland and Denver at Miami. The New York Jets were at Houston this afternoon.

Santa Clara Too Much For Stanford

By STEVE TOOMAJIAN
United Press International

Dick Garibaldi's Santa Clara basketball club is off to another flying start.

With four starters returning from the defending champion West Coast athletic conference team, the Broncos have knocked off their first two opponents and are placed 11th in the nation's college basketball rankings.

The Broncos threw up a fierce defense last night and came away with a 72-60 non-conference win on Stanford's court.

The Indians were unable to penetrate the hawking defense of the Bronco five—center Dennis Awtrey, forwards Ralph Ogden and Bruce Bochte, and guards Kevin Eagleson and Terry O'Brien.

LONG BOMBS

Only the long bombs of gunners Claude Terry and Dennis O'Neill kept the Indians close. Terry was high for Stanford with 19 points and O'Neill fired in 17.

The Broncos' two candidates for All-American acclaim led in scoring for both teams. Awtrey dropped in 21 and Odgen tallied 20.

In another game involving a WCAC team last night, the St. Mary's Gaels were shutout in the last seven minutes and watched Fresno State blast away with a 95-73 win.

Most Pacific-8 Conference schools found their way into the victory column, though the California Bears dropped a 98-79 decision to Brigham Young.

Washington held off a furious Seattle rally to overcome the Chieftains, 86-78, while Washington State was whipping Hawaii, 94-83.

The Trojans of Southern California busted out in the second half for an 88-74 win over sixth-ranked Colorado. Southern Cal is ranked ninth.

Seals Barrage Nets, Gain Only A Tie With Flyers

By DAVE DIETZ

OAKLAND — The Seals unleashed 43 shots — a team high this season — at Philadelphia goaltender Bernie Parent last night, but earned only a 2-2 tie from the barrage.

Parent, one of the National Hockey League's strongest goal-tenders, was excellent, especially in the first and third periods when the Seals threatened repeatedly.

He stopped 20 shots in the first (when the Flyers got only 8) and 16 in the third, relinquishing goals to Carol Vadnais and Gary Jarrett, whose tally tied the game at 2-2 at 1:25 of the final period.

In the Oakland net, Gary Smith also played well and was left virtually helpless on both Flyer scores.

"He sure could be a boxer," Jarrett said later.

The 4,335 fans taunted Fleming for his pugnacity and a security man had to separate Reggie from an angry fan when the Flyer entered the penalty box for slugging Jarrett.

At the end of the game, Fleming and teammates Simon Nolet and Earl Heiskala swung their sticks savagely at goading, debris-throwing fans, but missed.

Golf is a geme where you have to play off someone's ball. Even in a $2 Nassau, you arrange the match and the bets around the best player.

Golf without Palmer is anarchy. There's no one's ball to play off of.

The encouraging fever chart is not Palmer's alone. For, 1969 was a year the Golden Bear went into hibernation, too. Jack Nicklaus wasn't laid up, but his game was.

In the past month and a half, only a handful of tournaments have been played. But two have been won by Nicklaus, and, now, one has been won by Palmer.

The game is in traction in periods between major matchups. It may even be pronounced dead. But, at the moment, heart massage has worked. The heart is pumping again. This will be good news to motel owners at Augusta, television networks in New York, and even though they may not think of it, to 50 other golfers who not only have something tangible to beat now but an assured payoff of 100 cents on the dollar if they do.

Dan Gurney Is Fastest Qualifier

RIVERSIDE (AP) — Dan Gurney, who turned in the fastest qualifying time yesterday for the 300-mile Rex Mays USAC championship race, might have his California protege, Swede Savage of Santa Ana, breathing down his neck tomorrow.

Savage offered the biggest surprise at the Riverside International Raceway yesterday by pushing his Eagle Ford an average of 113.336 miles per hour on the 2.5-mile course.

Gurney, from nearby Costa Mesa, earned the post position in his Eagle Ford for the $75,000 race, while his former pupil took the sixth berth. Savage is a former motorcycle racer.

Joining Gurney in the top five qualifying positions yesterday were Mark Donohue, Media, Pa., Lola Chevrolet, 116.731 m.p.h.; Al Unser, Albuquerque, N.M., Lola Ford, 116.320 m.p.h.; Mario Andretti, Nazareth, Pa., Hawk Ford, 115.830 m.p.h.; and Bobby Unser, Albuquerque, Eagle Turbo Ford, 113.924 m.p.h.

Qualifiers from yesterday and today compete tomorrow in the conclusion of the 23-race U.S. Auto Club championship circuit for 1969. The winner's purse is about $20,000.

Prep Water Polo Showdown Set

Terra Linda and Redwood high schools flexed their muscles and tuned up for their big Marin County Athletic League match next Tuesday by taking care of lesser opponents in MCAL water polo action yesterday.

Redwood ripped San Marin, 30-5, in Larkspur with Doug Brockbank scoring six goals, while Terra Linda downed San Rafael, 12-5, at San Rafael as Pat Ellington and Bob Bentley scored three goals.

Rich Barclay had three goals for the Bulldogs.

A's Get Veteran Hurler Mudcat Grant From Cards

COMBINED A P& UPI

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The St. Louis Cardinals sold veteran righthanded pitcher Jim "Mudcat" Grant to the Oakland Athletics last night.

Grant, 34, was 8-11 in 41 games last season with a 4.42 earned run average pitching for both Montreal and the Cardinals.

Grant, 12-year-veteran, has a career record of 131-113.

SPORTS SHORTS

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The New York Mets announced today the appointment of former major league infielder Chuck Hiller, a former San Francisco Giant, as manager of their Tidewater farm club in the International League.

Hiller, who managed in the Pittsburgh organization last year, replaces Roy McMillan, who is joining the Seattle Pilots as a coach next year.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The Washington Senators announced the conditional purchase of second baseman Bob Schroder from San Francisco's Phoenix farm club in the Pacific Coast League today.

Schroder, who batted .258 for Phoenix last season, goes on the Senators' major league roster.

HOCKEY

MONTREAL — The Montreal Canadiens, currently in a tight race for the National Hockey League's East Division lead, will have to do it — temporarily at least — without the services of defenseman Jacques Laperriere.

He received a three-game suspension last night from league president Clarence Campbell for shoving referee Bill Friday and linesman Pat Shetler in a game here last Saturday night.

PITTSBURGH — Ex-Oakland Seal Bryan Watson, who plays right wing and defense, has been assigned by the Pittsburgh Penguins to their Baltimore farm club in the American Hockey League.

GENERAL

WENHAM, Mass. — A fire which blazed through a three-story barn on the estate of the late socialite Frederick Ayer yesterday destroyed between 12 and 14 thoroughbreds. The barn was valued at more than $70,000.

DETROIT — The Ford Motor Co. announced yesterday that famed auto racing driver A. J. Foyt has signed an agreement to build all Ford Indianapolis-type racing engines starting next year.

TRUCK CUTS NEW ROAD

A Corte Madera police officer forges through a grove in an attempt to reach a runaway truck that narrowly missed a classroom of children after it jumped a curb and plunged down a 60-foot embankment Thursday. The truck was parked on Robin Drive when it struck off on its own about 12:30 p.m. It missed a Marin Country Day School classroom by about five feet before landing in a grove of trees about 20 feet from the school, police said. No Incidents At Park's Car Lot Opening

I-J Special Report

BERKELEY — The new asphalt parking lot in Berkeley that was once part of "people's park" has opened and only a handful of peaceful pickets were on hand for the unlocking Thursday.

Although there are 60 parking spaces in the university-owned lot, and parking spaces are at a premium in the south campus area, no one used them yesterday.

C. W. Smith, parking manager for the University of California, said parking in the lot is intended for use only by dormitory residents who, he said, haven't been notified yet of the available spaces.

The University Interfraternity council recently voted, with one dissenting vote, to boycott the new soccer field which shares space in the onetime "park" with the parking lot.

By the driveway opening in the cyclone fence around the area are two signs: "Remember People's Park" and, over a university parking sign, "Reserved — J. Rector."

James Rector was rooftop spectator fatally shot by police in the first day of park demonstrating.

WALL STREET WEEK

The Worst Low In Three Years

By HOWARD LUXENBERG

NEW YORK (UPI)—The collapse of Wall Street's most widely publicized support area of 1969 sent stocks tumbling this week in moderately active trading.

Once the Dow Jones industrial average fell through the 800 line the rush to sell began. Earlier in the year the 800-level had been the resistance point for numerous setbacks. And, as one analyst commented, when it became apparent that the DJ would stay below 800 "morale soured and everybody latched onto everything unfavorable."

LOWEST SINCE 67

After the dust settled, the DJ, which reflects movement in 30 selected blue chips, was off a whopping 19.27 at 793.03, its lowest level since the 791.14, of Jan. 4, 1967. DJ rails and utilities also pointed lower.

The UPI market indicator, measuring all stocks traded, showed a loss of 3.90 at 99.53. Standard and Poor's index of 500 stocks dropped 2.08 to 91.73.

The New York Stock Exchange index measured a drop of $1.29 to $51.20 in the average common share price.

PSYCHOLOGICAL BLOW

Newton Zinder, analyst for E. F. Hutton, said the drop below

WALL STREET WEEK

The Worst Low In Three Years

By HOWARD LUXENBERG

NEW YORK (UPI)—The collapse of Wall Street's most widely publicized support area of 1969 sent stocks tumbling this week in moderately active trading.

Once the Dow Jones industrial average fell through the 800 line the rush to sell began. Earlier in the year the 800-level had been the resistance point for numerous setbacks. And, as one analyst commented, when it became apparent that the DJ would stay below 800 "morale soured and everybody latched onto everything unfavorable."

LOWEST SINCE 67

After the dust settled, the DJ, which reflects movement in 30 selected blue chips, was off a whopping 19.27 at 793.03, its lowest level since the 791.14, of Jan. 4, 1967. DJ rails and utilities also pointed lower.

The UPI market indicator, measuring all stocks traded, showed a loss of 3.90 at 99.53. Standard and Poor's index of 500 stocks dropped 2.08 to 91.73.

The New York Stock Exchange index measured a drop of $1.29 to $51.20 in the average common share price.

PSYCHOLOGICAL BLOW

Newton Zinder, analyst for E. F. Hutton, said the drop below

WALL STREET WEEK

The Worst Low In Three Years

800 was a psychological blow to many investors, but he believed the list was deeply oversold and due for a snap back.

Other analysts pointed out that traders also were discouraged by inflation, tight credit, high interest rates, and by prospects for lower than expected corporate profits next year.

EARNINGS FEARS

Henry Kaufman, a partner in Salomon Brothers and Hutzler, said the corporate profit squeeze could be worse than expected and earnings could drop by as much as 15 to 20 per cent in 1970. He addressed the European Institutional Investor Conference in London.

Moreover, a 3.4 per cent drop in unemployment in November was viewed as a major setback in President Richard M. Nixon's war on inflation. He had been warning that a higher jobless rate may be expected as part of the fight to combat inflation.

Monte Gordon, Bache and Co. vice president, said the unemployment figures seemed to indicate that Washington's policy of restraint isn't biting yet.

Andrew F. Brimmer, said after careful study of recent economic trends and the outlook for coming months it is his opinion the battle against inflation still has to be won.

Of the 1,742 issues crossing the tape, 1,353 declined, 282 gained. There were 481 new lows set, 20 highs.

Purchases Firm

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Westinghouse Electric Corp. has bought C. W. Blakeslee & Sons, Inc., a New Haven, Conn., building firm with 1,200 workers, for 145,161 shares of Westinghouse common stock.

The Worst Low In Three Years

800 was a psychological blow to many investors, but he believed the list was deeply oversold and due for a snap back.

Other analysts pointed out that traders also were discouraged by inflation, tight credit, high interest rates, and by prospects for lower than expected corporate profits next year.

EARNINGS FEARS

Henry Kaufman, a partner in Salomon Brothers and Hutzler, said the corporate profit squeeze could be worse than expected and earnings could drop by as much as 15 to 20 per cent in 1970. He addressed the European Institutional Investor Conference in London.

Moreover, a 3.4 per cent drop in unemployment in November was viewed as a major setback in President Richard M. Nixon's war on inflation. He had been warning that a higher jobless rate may be expected as part of the fight to combat inflation.

Monte Gordon, Bache and Co. vice president, said the unemployment figures seemed to indicate that Washington's policy of restraint isn't biting yet.

Andrew F. Brimmer, said after careful study of recent economic trends and the outlook for coming months it is his opinion the battle against inflation still has to be won.

Of the 1,742 issues crossing the tape, 1,353 declined, 282 gained. There were 481 new lows set, 20 highs.

Narrow Field As You Will, Ada Fusselman Is There

IF ONE WERE TO RESEARCH the efforts and accomplishments of notable women in Marin's history, Ada Fusselman would most assuredly emerge in the top 10.

If the research went into greater detail, she would emerge in the top five.

Narrow the field to three and she would still be there.

She has to have been one of the two top women practitioners of constructive community service in all of the county's history.

THE OBITUARY STORIES earlier this week referred to the Marin County Citizen of the Year award bestowed upon her by the Marin County Real Estate Board in 1954.

There was more to it than that; it was a far greater honor than the obituary references indicated.

Actually, the real estate board had for some years made a "Man of the Year" award. It was prestigeous; it was just about the highest public honor that could be bestowed upon a Marin community leader.

Each year there were numerous nominations. The judging was a tough job.

In 1954, some anonymous, highly perceptive individual observed that Mrs. Fusselman had outshone the leading male community leaders and submitted her nomination.

The judges understandably were nonplussed. They recognized the truth of the nomination's contentions but, after all, it was a "Man of the Year" award.

To their credit, the judges rose to the occasion. Ada Fusselman beat out all the men for the "Man of the Year" award that year.

She was to win other honors later in her long life. But none would ever be more significant than that.

ADA FUSSELMAN WAS an effervescent, energetic person. In her prime she traveled widely through the state speaking to women's groups.

She didn't drive. Her husband, Bill, dutifully handled that chore. Their public lives appeared widely separated. She was deeply involved and committed in her work on the Marin Junior College District board of trustees and in her work among various women's organizations.

He was tough-minded, uncompromising Supervisor William D. Fusselman, who was always on hand wherever the action was, as a supervisor.

But out of public view they were engaged in their own private love affair for more than 55 years. "Billie" was what he called her.

He drove her the length and breadth of the state on her speaking tours and there is no doubt that they mutually enjoyed every minute of those trips, alone together.

Bill Fusselman was not unaware of the blessings he enjoyed in the form of a devoted wife. Starting nearly a quarter of a century ago, on birthdays and wedding anniversaries he reflected privately to friends on the good fortune which permitted him and "Billie" to enjoy so many happy years of good health and happiness together.

They weren't even half done with their happiness together 25 years ago; they were certainly especially blessed.

IF YOU WANT TO BE exposed to contemporary philosophers who most closely approximate the wisdom of the Old Testament, you have to go to the right barber shop.

"I don't think the Man Upstairs takes any orders, but if He did, my order would be to leave this world just after I hooked a big fish and had it played just to the point where I knew I was going to land it. That's the instant I would like to fall over dead, going through eternity with all the excitment of feeling that I was just landing a big one," said the barber.

Ada Fusselman unquestionably was still far too busy living in her eighty-first year to give thought to "putting in her order."

If she had, it would be impossible to think of anything she might have longed for more than going through eternity chatting with a friend on the telephone. She always had a wide circle of friends; she intensely enjoyed her associations with them.

Ada Fusselman's departure from among us is a sorrowful loss, but we can take comfort in the knowledge that she and her Bill did enjoy an extraordinary measure of health and happiness and, when the end came, it was not amidst unpleasantness or pain or suffering — she was at the moment of her death doing something she very much enjoyed doing.

As the philosophic barber would say, that's hard to beat.

Of Raccoons And Garbage Cans

When we try to play games with nature, we usually lose. Take our raccoons. For about four months now we have been feeding at least four. We started out with one pie pan heaped high with dog food. Now we put out two and during the course of an average evening refill them once or twice.

But, as a result of our feeding, we thought we had discouraged these cunning creatures from pulling the lid from our garbage can and spreading the contents around the back yard for detailed inspection.

Not so! They still do it, but not so frequently. Perhaps what we have read is true. Maybe raccoons fool around with garbage out of curiosity, rather than hunger.

After all, Beverly Hills isn't the only place with high class garbage.

SOME MONTHS ago a noted commercial artist was asked by a magazine editor if he's accept a commission to illustrate the lead story for the upcoming December issue. A price of $3,000 was agreed upon over the phone, and the artist concluded, "Send me the script which Ill return at once and I'll have the drawings done in a week." Refugee Problem Questions, Answers

Phil Newsom's article on the Palestinian commandos and refugees (Nov. 25) raises a very interesting question among Americans concerned with justice in the Middle East. He states that the U.S. has contributed more than $450 million to UNRWA since 1949. Have we been the major contributor out of a sense of guilt and shame because the U.S. legally became a party to the Balfour Declaration through its signature of the Anglo-American Convention of 1924? . . .

Palestine in 1948 had been among the most advanced areas of the Arab world, especially in terms of general economic growth, an emerging middle class, and literacy. As late as 1954, Don Peretz estimated that 350 of the approxomately 400 Jewish settlements created after 1948 were on refugee property, and that two-thirds of the cultivated land acquired by Israel had been refugee-owned. Although the UN, with the almost unanimous support of its members, has annually reaffirmed that the Palestinian refugees should be repatriated or compensated for their lossess, neither action has been taken, with the result that the number of refugees has grown through natural increase year by year. . .

I seriously the varacity of Mr. Newsom's figures. He states that UNRWA "has had to provide shelter for some 92,000 new refugees on Jordan's east bank "since the June War. According to the former commissioner-general of UNRWA, by December 1967 some 245,000 had already fled into Jordan's east bank.

Newsom's initial question, "When does a refugee become a guerilla and what do you do about it" is not hard to answer if we label things as they are. A refugee becomes a resistance fighter after he waits 20 years to leave a tent and return to his home and land; after he loses faith in the U.N. to carry out justice; and after he realizes that only he can help himself regain what is rightfully his. . .

Reason To Oppose Smog Initiative

Your paper's article on page 14 of the Nov. 25 issue seemed to present only one side of the Peoples Lobby Initiative "A" controversy. The reason that the anti-air pollution bill should be opposed is because it doesn't add to the list of laws protecting our environment, but rather removes many of them.

It is true that the bill would handle air pollution very well, but in the process, it would annul many of the other bills which are also imperative to preserve our ecology, including many dealing with water pollution. If the bill could be added to our environmental laws so as to complement, rather than replace them, it would be very effective, but with its present wording, it would do far more harm than good. . .

Some Things Made Perfectly Clear

President Nixon's favorite phrase, "Let me make one thing perfectly clear", was certainly illustrated by a comment in your editorial on the Song My massacre where you noted that "we are not saviors to the Vietnamese people" (Nov. 25).

Perhaps another point can be made perfectly clear. While the U.S. Army has officially admitted the atrocity killing of women and children, while this same Army is also inquiring as to the cover-up of the story, the Saigon government has officially denied the whole occurrence! Leaders in the Saigon-based government originally fought on the side of the French imperialists against their own people in the early '50s. Now installed by American military power, they won't even raise a voice to denounce the killing of civilians. Isn't something "perfectly clear" about this government.

LINES ON LIVING

Marriage 'Made In Heaven' Must Be Renewed Here

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

In spite of computer matchmaking, there are still those who believe that "marriage is made in heaven." But even they admit that marriage is not a gift of heaven but an achievement of mature, compatible living on earth.

Heaven grants us the gift of love by which two strangers are attracted to each other and bind their far-flung destinies into a common bond of love, of friendship, the building of a home, and the rearing of children. But those who don't renew their canopy vows daily in a continuous rediscovery of a life-giving relationship, turn into curators of past dreams and fancies instead of creators of present promises and fulfillments.

LOVE, AS LIFE itself, is animated by the constant fresh air of renewal and dies for lack of it. Rejuvenated living and loving, the ever-novel look and appreciative attitude —that too often evaporate with the coffeemaker's vapor in the kitchen — is the blood-life of a good and fulfilling home-life and home-love.

This kind of relationship is not handled by postponement, nor is it marketable at discount price as a commercial arrangement. No, it is not a 50-50 proposition, but a 100 per cent commitment by both husband and wife.

It blossoms forth on the sunshine of mutual affection which deems no sacrifice a burden, on the soil of mutual respect which seeks not to domineer nor to possess, on the tender care of consideration which asks not for the gift but for the glory of sharing — inspiring loyalty and devotion.

LOVE DOES NOT come in a big band like a hurricane, nor does it burst into a flame in a big flash. It is suffused, in no pomp, like sunlight in noiseless atmosphere. It is best expressed not in dramatic gestures but in unspectacular deeds of kindness and affection, in the grace of patience and understanding, in the benevolence of giving and forgiving.

Love, like a liquid, can slip through the fingers and sink to the ground when watered down by contempt, scorn and disdain. Burning anger, flying tempers and moody dispositions form scars in loving hearts, scars that heal slowly and impair the free inflow of the love-life of a healthy circulation.

But since love is a gift of humans and humans are infested with germs of frailty, the sage advice given by one wise mentor to newlyweds might be practical wisdom. He thus counseled them under the canopy: "Try to avoid anger in your home. And if you can't help it, try never to get angry at the same time."

THE DRUMMONDS

Nixon Has Taken The Big Stick From Military-Industrial Complex

By ROSCOE and GEOFFREY DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — The genie of the military-industrial complex is being pushed back into its bottle.

It has suffered serious setbacks in recent weeks, and its potentially overpowerful influence is being contained.

The danger, as former President Eisenhower rightly warned in his farewell address, was that the military-industrial complex would dominate national policy.

For the present the danger is past. National policy is dominating the military industrial complex.

INTERESTINGLY, it is a conservative Republican administration which is taking effective steps to do this. Here is what's been happening:

The Pentagon did not relish the civilian decision against chemical and germ warfare stockpiling. But the President did it.

Under the leadership of Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the military would have preferred to keep the draft law unchanged until after Vietnam. But President Nixon fired General Hershey and got Congress to change the law.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff fear that cutting back the military — particularly new weapons development and fighting strength — will go too fast. But their influence is not stopping it. Spending is being cut $3 billion this year even before we're out of Vietnam, and more reductions are imminent.

THE PENTAGON is not happy over the way Richard Nixon prepared for the critical U.S.-Russian arms talks. It would have preferred firm advance decisions as to just how far we would go, is uneasy at the flexible approach the negotiators are to take, even though the military will have a further voice before agreements are accepted. The wake of military counsel is being reduced. The initiative is with the President and his civilian advisers far more than in recent past.

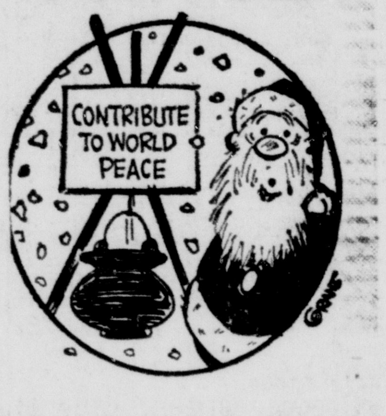
Former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara established civilian control in the Pentagon, but former President Johnson was more responsive to the military than Mr. Nixon is. The result is that together the President and Defense Secretary Melvin Laird constitute a more powerful shield against overly pervasive Pentagon influence than their predecessors. The unwinding of the Vietnamese war helps make this possible.

There are other factors. Though, in the main, through no fault of its own, the military has lost a great deal of public support. The high costs of the nuclear arms race with the Russians take money away from acute domestic needs. In the frustration over the indecisive Vietnamese war, the military became an easy scapegoat. And past mismanagement in the Pentagon, producing large cost overruns, has made Congress unusually wary and skeptical.

GENERAL EISENHOWER saw the hazard of the military-industrial complex (his phrase) in its combined influence tending to overwhelm the vital civilian control of military policy. He was furious when some industrialists took out big ads demanding appropriations he had just rejected but which the Pentagon still wanted.

Eisenhower was very sensitive to the need and appropriateness of civilian control. When he was chief of staff of the Army in the late '40s and President Truman was proposing the Atomic Energy Commission, there was a great urge in Congress to put it under the military. Dwight Eisenhower opposed this and helped Harry Truman carry the day.

SMALL WORLD



"I hate to rush the season, but . . ."

ART BUCHWALD

It's Harder To Get Together If You Fly American Flag

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's promise to bring the country together doesn't seem to be working too well. If anything, people are more polarized than they've ever been before.

A friend of mine, Mrs. Johnston, told me the other day what happened to her when she decided to fly the flag on Veterans' Day. Mrs. Johnston's been flying the American flag every Veterans' Day without receiving much comfort. But this year her effort became the cause celebre on the block.

The first person to mention it was a nieghbor from across the street who congratulated her for flying the flag and asked her to sign a petition to impeach Justice William Douglas of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Mrs. Johnston said she wasn't interested in signing any petitions against the Supreme Court.

"THEN WHY are you flying the American flag" the neighbor demanded.

"Because it's Veterans' Day," she said.

"Would you be willing to go to a rally tomorrow against teaching sex education in the schools" the neighbor demanded.

Mrs. Johnston said she wouldn't.

The neighbor said angrily, "And I believed you were a good American."

A LITTLE LATER the neighbor's son, a college student, said, "Mrs. Johnston, I thought you were sympathetic to our getting out of Vietnam."

"I am," Mrs. Johnston said.

"Then why are you flying the American flag"

"Flying the American flag has nothing to do with my feelings on Vietnam, Bobby. It is our flag and I believe it should be displayed on national holidays."

"What about all the innocent people whose villages have been burned and bombed, and the profiteering South Vietnamese generals who have numbered bank accounts in Switzerland" Bobby said.

"That has nothing to do with the flag."

"Only super-hawks fly the flag," said Bobby, as he walked away in a huff.

A LITTLE LATER Mrs. Johnston received a call from the lady down the street. "Mrs. Johnston, I notice you're flying the American flag. Would you be interested in joining the American Legion Auxiliary"

Mrs. Johnston said, "No, my husband isn't a member of the American Legion so there is no reason for me to join the auxiliary."

"You had us fooled, Mrs. Johnston," the lady said, "I'm sorry I called."

THE DELIVERY BOY from the local market arrived at this moment and he said, "You hate me because I have long hair, don't you, Mrs. Johnston"

"I don't hate you," Mrs. Johnston protested.

"I saw the flag outside," the delivery boy said. "I know how you people think." He slammed the groceries on the table and left.

The plumber arrived to do some work, but when he saw the flag he decided Mrs. Johnston would be interested in how he felt about "people who are on welfare and don't do any work and who are always waiting for handouts, and how the protesters ought to all be put in jail. . . ."

It cost Mrs. Johnston an extra $9 an hour to listen to the plumber's political philosophy.

WHEN MR. JOHNSTON came home from work, Mrs. Johnston told him everything that happened during the day.

"Don't feel bad," he told her. "I was driving without my lights on today and a taxi driver yelled at me, 'If you don't like America, why don't you go back to the Soviet Union where you belong' "

Reason To Oppose Smog Initiative

Your paper's article on page 14 of the Nov. 25 issue seemed to present only one side of the Peoples Lobby Initiative "A" controversy. The reason that the anti-air pollution bill should be opposed is because it doesn't add to the list of laws protecting our environment, but rather removes many of them.

It is true that the bill would handle air pollution very well, but in the process, it would annul many of the other bills which are also imperative to preserve our ecology, including many dealing with water pollution. If the bill could be added to our environmental laws so as to complement, rather than replace them, it would be very effective, but with its present wording, it would do far more harm than good. . .

Some Things Made Perfectly Clear

President Nixon's favorite phrase, "Let me make one thing perfectly clear", was certainly illustrated by a comment in your editorial on the Song My massacre where you noted that "we are not saviors to the Vietnamese people" (Nov. 25).

Perhaps another point can be made perfectly clear. While the U.S. Army has officially admitted the atrocity killing of women and children, while this same Army is also inquiring as to the cover-up of the story, the Saigon government. has officially denied the whole occurrence! Leaders in the Saigon-based government originally fought on the side of the French imperialists against their own people in the early '50s. Now installed by American military power, they won't even raise a voice to denounce the killing of civilians. Isn't something "perfectly clear" about this government.

LINES ON LIVING

Marriage 'Made In Heaven' Must Be Renewed Here

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

In spite of computer matchmaking, there are still those who believe that "marriage is made in heaven." But even they admit that marriage is not a gift of heaven but an achievement of mature, compatible living on earth.

Heaven grants us the gift of love by which two strangers are attracted to each other and bind their far-flung destinies into a common bond of love, of friendship, the building of a home, and the rearing of children. But those who don't renew their canopy vows daily in a continuous rediscovery of a life-giving relationship, turn into curators of past dreams and fancies instead of creators of present promises and fulfillments.

LOVE, AS LIFE itself, is animated by the constant fresh air of renewal and dies for lack of it. Rejuvenated living and loving, the ever-novel look and appreciative attitude —that too often evaporate with the coffeemaker's vapor in the kitchen — is the blood-life of a good and fulfilling home-life and home-love.

This kind of relationship is not handled by postponement, nor is it marketable at discount price as a commercial arrangement. No, it is not a 50-50 proposition, but a 100 per cent commitment by both husband and wife.

It blossoms forth on the sunshine of mutual affection which deems no sacrifice a burden, on the soil of mutual respect which seeks not to domineer nor to possess, on the tender care of consideration which asks not for the gift but for the glory of sharing — inspiring loyalty and devotion.

LOVE DOES NOT come in a big band like a hurricane, nor does it burst into a flame in a big flash. It is suffused, in no pomp, like sunlight in noiseless atmosphere. It is best expressed not in dramatic gestures but in unspectacular deeds of kindness and affection, in the grace of patience and understanding, in the benevolence of giving and forgiving.

Love, like a liquid, can slip through the fingers and sink to the ground when watered down by contempt, scorn and disdain. Burning anger, flying tempers and moody dispositions form scars in loving hearts, scars that heal slowly and impair the free inflow of the love-life of a healthy circulation.

But since love is a gift of humans and humans are infested with germs of frailty, the sage advice given by one wise mentor to newlyweds might be practical wisdom. He thus counseled them under the canopy: "Try to avoid anger in your home. And if you can't help it, try never to get angry at the same time."

THE DRUMMONDS

Nixon Has Taken The Big Stick From Military-Industrial Complex

By ROSCOE and GEOFFREY DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — The genie of the military-industrial complex is being pushed back into its bottle.

It has suffered serious setbacks in recent weeks, and its potentially overpowerful influence is being contained.

The danger, as former President Eisenhower rightly warned in his farewell address, was that the military-industrial complex would dominate national policy.

For the present the danger is past. National policy is dominating the military industrial complex.

INTERESTINGLY, it is a conservative Republican administration which is taking effective steps to do this. Here is what's been happening:

The Pentagon did not relish the civilian decision against chemical and germ warfare stockpiling. But the President did it.

Under the leadership of Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the military would have preferred to keep the draft law unchanged until after Vietnam. But President Nixon fired General Hershey and got Congress to change the law.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff fear that cutting back the military — particularly new weapons development and fighting strength — will go too fast. But their influence is not stopping it. Spending is being cut $3 billion this year even before we're out of Vietnam, and more reductions are imminent.

THE PENTAGON is not happy over the way Richard Nixon prepared for the critical U.S.-Russian arms talks. It would have preferred firm advance decisions as to just how far we would go, is uneasy at the flexible approach the negotiators are to take, even though the military will have a further voice before agreements are accepted. The wake of military counsel is being reduced. The initiative is with the President and his civilian advisers far more than in recent past.

Former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara established civilian control in the Pentagon, but former President Johnson was more responsive to the military than Mr. Nixon is. The result is that together the President and Defense Secretary Melvin Laird constitute a more powerful shield against overly pervasive Pentagon influence than their predecessors. The unwinding of the Vietnamese war helps make this possible.

There are other factors. Though, in the main, through no fault of its own, the military has lost a great deal of public support. The high costs of the nuclear arms race with the Russians take money away from acute domestic needs. In the frustration over the indecisive Vietnamese war, the military became an easy scapegoat. And past mismanagement in the Pentagon, producing large cost overruns, has made Congress unusually wary and skeptical.

GENERAL EISENHOWER saw the hazard of the military-industrial complex (his phrase) in its combined influence tending to overwhelm the vital civilian control of military policy. He was furious when some industrialists took out big ads demanding appropriations he had just rejected but which the Pentagon still wanted.

Eisenhower was very sensitive to the need and appropriateness of civilian control. When he was chief of staff of the Army in the late '40s and President Truman was proposing the Atomic Energy Commission, there was a great urge in Congress to put it under the military. Dwight Eisenhower opposed this and helped Harry Truman carry the day.

ART BUCHWALD

It's Harder To Get Together If You Fly American Flag

WASHINGTON -- President Nixon's promise to bring the country together doesn't seem to be working too well. If anything, people are more polarized than they've ever been before.

A friend of mine, Mrs. Johnston, told me the other day what happened to her when she decided to fly the flag on Veterans' Day. Mrs. Johnston's been flying the American flag every Veterans' Day without receiving much comfort. But this year her effort became the cause celebre on the block.

The first person to mention it was a nieghbor from across the street who congratulated her for flying the flag and asked her to sign a petition to impeach Justice William Douglas of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Mrs. Johnston said she wasn't interested in signing any petitions against the Supreme Court.

"THEN WHY are you flying the American flag" the neighbor demanded.

"Because it's Veterans' Day," she said.

"Would you be willing to go to a rally tomorrow against teaching sex education in the schools" the neighbor demanded.

Mrs. Johnston said she wouldn't.

The neighbor said angrily, "And I believed you were a good American."

A LITTLE LATER the neighbor's son, a college student, said, "Mrs. Johnston, I thought you were sympathetic to our getting out of Vietnam."

"I am," Mrs. Johnston said.

"Then why are you flying the American flag"

"Flying the American flag has nothing to do with my feelings on Vietnam, Bobby. It is our flag and I believe it should be displayed on national holidays."

"What about all the innocent people whose villages have been burned and bombed, and the profiteering South Vietnamese generals who have numbered bank accounts in Switzerland" Bobby said.

"That has nothing to do with the flag."

"Only super-hawks fly the flag," said Bobby, as he walked away in a huff.

A LITTLE LATER Mrs. Johnston received a call from the lady down the street. "Mrs. Johnston, I notice you're flying the American flag. Would you be interested in joining the American Legion Auxiliary"

Mrs. Johnston said, "No, my husband isn't a member of the American Legion so there is no reason for me to join the auxiliary."

"You had us fooled, Mrs. Johnston," the lady said, "I'm sorry I called."

THE DELIVERY BOY from the local market arrived at this moment and he said, "You hate me because I have long hair, don't you, Mrs. Johnston"

"I don't hate you," Mrs. Johnston protested.

"I saw the flag outside," the delivery boy said. "I know how you people think." He slammed the groceries on the table and left.

The plumber arrived to do some work, but when he saw the flag he decided Mrs. Johnston would be interested in how he felt about "people who are on welfare and don't do any work and who are always waiting for handouts, and how the protesters ought to all be put in jail. . . ."

It cost Mrs. Johnston an extra $9 an hour to listen to the plumber's political philosophy.

WHEN MR. JOHNSTON came home from work, Mrs. Johnston told him everything that happened during the day.

"Don't feel bad," he told her. "I was driving without my lights on today and a taxi driver yelled at me, 'If you don't like America, why don't you go back to the Soviet Union where you belong' "

Second Panama Canal Eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Can a fish born and bred in the Pacific find happiness in the Atlantic?

The question is deadly serious and is only one of many facing a presidential commission studying construction of a new sea-level canal across the Isthmus of Panama.

The commission, authorized by Congress four years ago and scheduled to report to the President next year, has farmed out the problem of the displaced fish to the National Academy of Sciences and the Smithsonian Institution.

But it has answered some other fundamental questions. They include:

Q. Is it technically feasible to replace the 55-year-old lock canal in Panama with a new sea-level cut linking the two oceans?

A. Yes—at several possible locations on the Isthmus. Fears that the Pacific, which has a higher sea level, would spill over into the Atlantic and alter both coastlines have been proven groundless.

But opening an unobstructed channel between the two oceans would allow a far greater exchange of marine life than now takes place through the Panama Canal, raising the questions as to whether fish and other marine life might suffer. The Academy of Sciences has been asked to propose a program of long-term studies of the potential biological effects.

OCEANIC COCKTAIL

On the other hand, engineers have concluded there is no reason to worry about the "infinitesmal" exchange of water between the two oceans because of tidal ebb and flow. They explain that the levels of all of the earth's great oceans vary at different locations. If they were going to find a common level, it would have happened a long time ago because the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans all converge around the Antarctic.

Q. How much would it cost?

A. Probably somewhere between $3 and $6 billion, at current estimates (which have a way of escalating before a project is completed.) Costs depend on location—some sites involve more engineering difficulties than others—and the method of excavation to be used. Nuclear energy would cost less than half as much as conventional methods, but poses problems of its own because of the test ban treaty.

Q. Is the canal needed?

A. Yes. At least in the view of the commission. Congress and the Defense Department agree, as do most of the world's maritime nations. traffic frequently backs up for days awaiting passage through the present canal with its old-fashioned locks. It's also too small for most modern ships. (Nearly 1,000 Navy and merchant ships are too wide or too deep for the present canal."

The sea-level canal also would be easier to defend. One nuclear warhead or a salvo of conventional bombs landing on the present locks would put the old canal out of operation almost indefinitely.

Q. Can the political problems be solved?

A. That's a poser. Originally, the Isthmus was a part of Colombia. When the United States decided to undertake the canal construction around the turn of the century, it offered Colombia $10 million for the land plus an annuity of $250,000.

Colombia rejected the offer but the action set off a rebellion in Panama, which declared its independence in 1903. The United States sent a warship to Panama preventing Colombian troops from quelling the outbreak.

QUICK TREATY

The new republic promptly negotiated a treaty which allowed construction of the canal, gave the United States control of it "in perpetuity," and ceded other land necessary for the canal's defense. The construction, which took seven years and cost $350 million, was completed in 1914.

The original treaty provided an annuity of $250,000 to Panama, but this has been increased periodically over the years and now stands at $1.9 million a year.

Nanama also has been demanding increased recognition of its inherent sovereignty over the canal and parity between the wages paid local employees and U.S. employees in the Canal Zone—a 10-mile wide strip of U.S. territory bordering the canal.

The fenced-in zone itself had become a major issue. Inside the barrier, Panamanians lived alongside U.S. citizens in comfortable ease. Outside Panamanians live in crowded slum tenements and hovels.

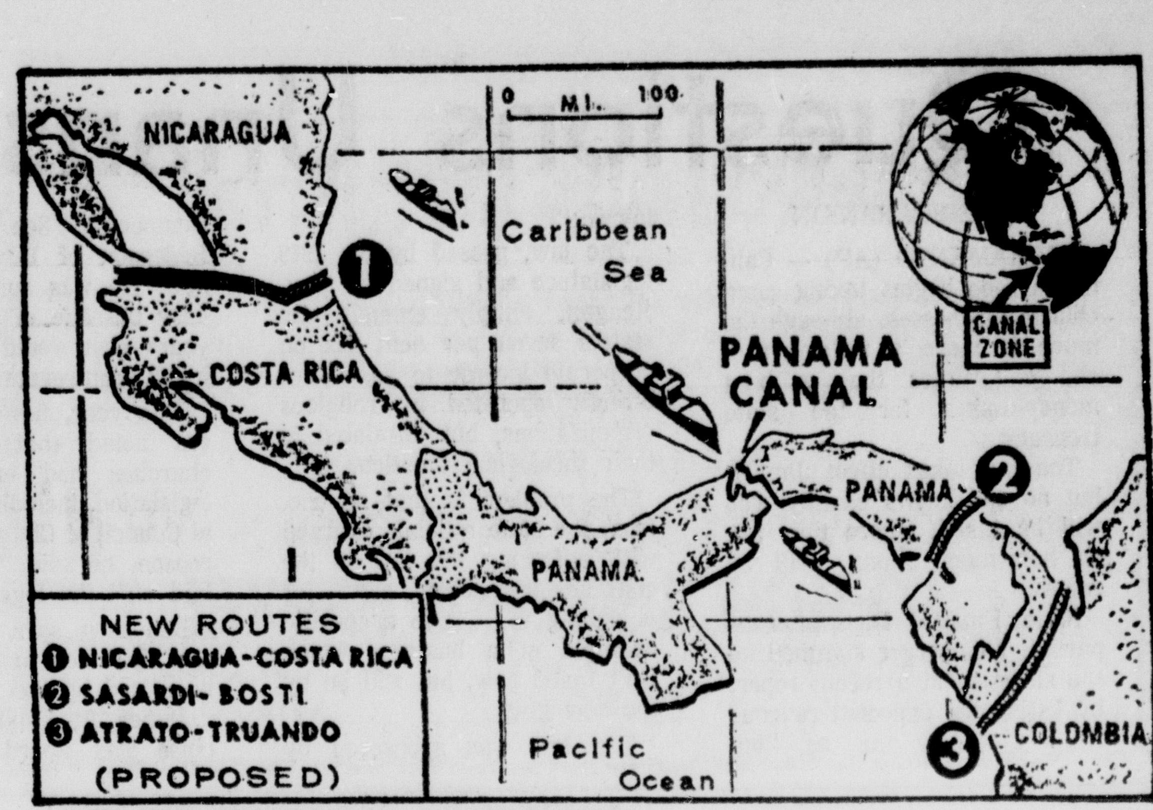
The situation, which had grown increasingly volatile since World War II, culminated in demonstrations and riots in the 1950s.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower moved to meet Panamaian demands in 1959 by authorizing the republic to fly its flag alongside the U.S. flag in the Canal Zone.

But his action—which was opposed by a sizeable bloc in the U.S. Congress—relieved the situation only briefly, and the unrest exploded in major riots soon after President Lyndon Johnson took office in 1963.

Johnson stilled the disturbances with the promise of new treaty negotiations, and these were begun in the following year. The negotiations took three years, and resulted in agreement on not one draft treaty but three.

The first would eliminate sole U.S. sovereignty over the Canal Zone, provide a "significant" increase in the annual payments to Panama, and establish a dual authority with Panama to govern the canal's operations.



UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL, INC. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED..

But the treaties pleased no one. They prompted an uproar in Congress from members who felt they went too far in ceding sovereignty to Panama, and riots in Panama where political groups felt they did not go far enough in giving control to their country.

Formal signing of the treaties was delayed until after the then-pending Panamanian elections—but 11 days after a pro-American president was elected, he was overthrown by military coup.

Since then, the draft treaties have been in a sort of legal limbo. The new regime in Panama had not, until very recently, pressed the subject, and the State Department was reluctant to negotiate with what it considered to be an illegal government.

Lately, Panama has evinced, informally, an interest in resuming conversations, and the State Department has said it is always glad to talk to anyone about matters of concern.

In the meantime, Congress created the study commission, authorized it to spend $24 million on its field work and feasibility analyses, and is awaiting the results.

ROYAL FAMILY GROWS — King Constantine of Greece, Queen Anne Marie and their children, Prince Paul and Princess Alexia, pose happily with the newest addition to the family, Prince Nicholas, at the exiled king's villa in Rome late in October. (UPI Telephoto)

A KING 'ON STRIKE'

Constantine Exile In 23rd Month

ROME (UPI) — This month it will be two years since young King Constantine of Greece went "on strike" against the ruling military junta in Athens and chose exile.

Today, living quietly in Rome with his queen, the lovely former Princess Anne Marie of Denmark, and their three children, the 29-year-old Constantine shows no outward signs of being ready to return to his country unless on his own terms.

The terms are said to include free elections and a political climate of open and free debate.

SHUN LIMELIGHT

Though they have been assiduous about shunning the limelight during their self-exile in Rome, the Greek royal couple came briefly back into the headlines on Oct. 1 when the 24-year-old Anne Marie gave birth to her third child, a son whom they have named Nicholas. In addition to the infant Prince Nicholas the children are Crown Prince Paul, 2, and Princess Alexia, 4.

Ever since they fled to Rome on Dec. 14, 1967, after Constantine tried unsuccessfully to overthrow the leaders of the army coup d'etat which took power in April that year, the Greek exiles have sought to attract as little attention to themselves as possible. Constantine wants to do nothing that will make it harder for him to return some day to the throne that is still officially his.

The Athens regime still considers Constantine the king of Greece although it has appointed a regent to discharge royal functions in his place. It put out a cautious feeler to the king earlier this year by sending Foreign Minister Panoyotis Pipinelis to meet Constantine in Switzerland.

There has been no comment on the meeting from members of Constantine's entourage in Rome, but information leaked in London at the time said the king told Pipinelis he was willing to return to Greece only if there were free general elections held after an open political campaign.

The young king has maintained quiet contacts with Athens by means of two courtiers, Court Marshal Leonidas Papagos and Marinos Ieroulanos, who commute regularly between the Greek capital and Rome.

At the same time, Constantine appears to be keeping some lines open to rightwing opposition leaders in exile, such as ex-Premier Constantine Karamanlis in Paris.

Greek political sources said the king and Karamanlis appeared to have agreed to shelve differences dating back to the times of Constantine's father, King Paul.

Constantine made world headlines when he arrived in Rome, haggard and unshaven, in the early hours of a cold December morning two years ago. For several months afterwards, if he merely stepped out on the street to buy a newspaper, photographers mobbed him.

Things have since changed. Now he and the queen live almost as recluses. When occasionally they venture out, perhaps to quiet dinners in out-of-the-way Roman restaurants, they draw little attention.

In the first weeks of their Italian stay, the royal couple lived at the Greek Embassy across the street from the Rome zoo. They then moved to a luxury hotel near the Via Veneto nightlife street and later to a secluded villa off the ancient Via Cassia 12 miles northwest of Rome. Queen Mother Frederika rented the villa from a Mexican millionaire.

ANOTHER MOVE

About a year ago, Constantine and Anne Marie moved to another and less palatial villa on the Via di Porta Latina at the other end of Rome. Its owner is Countess Alice Paolozzi, whose daughter Christine made news several years ago by posing topless for a magazine photograph.

The royal couple share the 10-room villa with their children and a Greek and an Irish nursemaid. Queen Frederika and Constantine's sister, Princess Irene, now live in another villa on the northern outskirts of Rome.

Police assigned by the Italian government to guard the king—one uniformed Carabiniere who stands at the gate of the royal villa and two plainclothesmen who follow Constantine wherever he goes—have most of their trouble with photographers trying to take pictures of the couple.

ROYAL COMPLAINT

Photographers also irritated the king during their summer vacation at Ansedonia, a Tuscan beach resort. Constantine complained to Italian authorities against camera hawks who took long lens pictures of himself and his wife in bathing suits.

Constantine and Anne Marie also spent part of the summer in Denmark with her parents, King Frederik IX and Queen Ingrid. Earlier in the year, Constantine went to Washington for the funeral of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and was received there with full royal honors.

Athens reports say the king's exile has not affected his royal allowance, which amounts to $500,000 annually. The pay is supposed to cover the king's salary, travel expenses and maintenance and operation of the royal palace and gardens. An undisclosed share of the allowance is deducted and retained in Athens to cover palace expenses, but the remainder reportedly is sent to the king in Rome each month by special courier.

Blood-Chilling 'Southern Hospitality'

By JOHN AITKEN
Toronto Telegram News Service

JACKSON, Miss. (TNS) — The fear of outsiders that many Southerners cling to is covered by a thin and effusive veneer of southern hospitality, but there is something blood-chilling about talking to a true segregationist.

Beneath the friendliness, the polite request that the interview about to take place be tape-recorded by both sides, lies the basic mistrust that is a fact of life in the southern states.

There is no communication at all in a genuine sense; there are two sides, unalterably opposed, impossible for either one to convince the other and little chance for more than a cursory attempt at understanding.

Thus an interview with John C. Satterfield, probably the best-known segregationist lawyer in the country, has to be interesting if not particularly enlightening.

High on a hill overlooking Yazoo City perches the proud white marble office building of the Mississippi Chemical Company, and within a lavish suite of offices on the fourth floor presides Satterfield, lifelong Mississippian, genteel gut fighter and for the past 20 or 30 years one of the most important and most frequently victorious generals in the battle against integration of southern schools.

His tortured syntax and well-practiced generalities and expressions of southern hospitality, create an aura of respectability for the continued holding action against progress of the American blackman.

Satterfield views the Supreme Court as not his enemy but the enemy of the country, in that this "ill-considered" ruling of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, forcing full integration by the end of the year (the very thought of it actually happening is preposterous) is hampering, not helping the cause of the Negro.

"This (integration) is, of course, a gradual process," he says. "It has been announced by Secretary Finch and by President Nixon that they intend to enforce the constitutional guarantees in the field of education throughout the entire United States, not in any particular section.

"My judgment would be that the process will be begun within the next few months but it will actually take several years for it to be extended to all parts of the United States."

The implication, unspoken but there nonetheless, is that in his judgment Mississippi will not be in the forefront of reform, either.

His reaction to the suggestion that segregated black schools in his own Yazoo City make little effort to teach anything of a more academic nature than the importance of turning up to class each day and not getting uppity, is one of near horror.

"I do not know of any instance in my judgment—Io do not believe it to be a fact that any graduate of our high schools attended predominantly by the Negro race, in fact exclusively by the members of the Negro race, has ever received a diploma without being able to read and write."

This was in response to a question about statements made the day before by a black principal of a black high school, a saddened and frustrated man who swore that "social promotion" meant students were regularly advanced without regard for what they had or had not learned.

What, then, of integration, Mr. Satterfield? What of eventual inter-marriage, and what of the future of Mississippi blacks?

"Of course," he answered, "we have more than 900,000 of the finest Negroes in the world in Mississippi. They and their fathers and their grandfathers have been Mississippians just about as long as my grandfather and father, whose pictures are there on the wall. . . ."

In the lobby of the marble MCC office building is a permanent exhibit of paintings showing various scenes of cotton plantation life during the time of slavery in Mississippi.

Presumably they are there to remind people how far the black man has advanced, but I didn't ask.

"I believe they have an excellcnt future in my judgment, unless prevented by employed troublemakers (he named Rudy Shielfs, a dedicated young agitator from Chicago who has successfully managed black boycotts, in several Mississippi cities).

"Insofar as intermarriage is concerned," he continued, "it is my judgment that it is not in the best interest of either race and certainly not to the best interest of the United States.

"In other countries, chiefly in other continents, it has been the experience that the intermarriage of races has tended to have a very adverse affect on the citizenship."

Similarly Satterfield bridled at suggestion that segregated housing exists in Mississippi. If it does, he said, it's because members of both races prefer it that way.

"In my judgment," he said, "if a Negro was to move into a white community he would not be assassinated. On the other hand, in my judgment, if a Negro was to move into certain exclusive white areas it would be considered objectionable."

Does he believe, then, in letting the races be separate but equal?

"No, not separate but equal, but on a basis of equality and to whatever extend there may be separateness it would be voluntary on the part of those involved."

What of Mississippi's chances of riot and violence in the months to come, with the Supreme Court ruling for instant integration now upheld by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals despite a vigorous fight by administration officials?

Unlikely, he says, and black spokesman agree with him.

But a final comment on the riots of the past: "The riots to which you refer have been set up and planned by militant Negro organizations where they were involved, or mixed organizations or in some instances by organizations which have very close Communist ties.

"I do not know that many instances have been shown to be true where many of these riots have been instigated and planned by those who have very close Communist ties . . ."

And there you have it, the opinion of a refined and gentlemanly and extremely likeable segregationist who believes that the violence of ghetto life is a Communist plot against America; who believes that schools that do not teach are comparable to scohols that do; a man who believes, simply, that it is unlikely that black and white can ever achieve true equality.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The commander of the troops involved in the alleged massacre at My Lai denied this week that he ordered or was aware of any deliberate killing of Vietnamese civilians by U.S. troops.

"No, I did not shoot any child in My Lai, and no, I did not order any massacre in My Lai," Capt. Ernest L. Medina told a Pentagon news conference. "I did not see any massacre in My Lai."

The 33-year-old Army captain's denials—his first public statements on the "massacre" —were in response to charges made by various soldiers and ex-soldiers who seemed to be cropping up everywhere with conflicting accounts of what happened in My Lai on that fateful day 20 months ago.

Attorneys for both the prosecution and the defense in the pending court martial of 1st Lt. William L. Calley Jr., who was a platoon commander in Medina's company, asked for a ban on further pretrial statements, but the request was denied by the Court of Military Appeals as an infringement on freedom of the press.

Medina, with Boston Attorney F. Lee Bailey, talked to newsmen during a recess in the Army's second-round investigation of the massacre reports. They were ruled groundless in an earlier investigation, but the colonel who conducted it has since expressed some doubts.

No charges have been filed against Medina.

Three South Vietnamese Senators who visited My Lai this week said their investigation indicated that a number of civilians there were shot with small arms at closer ange, but that the details remain obscure.

Tax Reforms Spring Up For 1970 Ballots

By CAPITOL NEWS SERVICE

Tax relief for homeowners, renters and senior citizens, a statewide property tax for schools, curbs on the charity property exemption and income tax withholding were proposed by the State Board of Equalization as "elements in any comprehensive tax reform legislation."

The board of equalization, the state's major revenue agency, made its recommendations before a joint meeting of the Assembly and Senate Revenue and Taxation committees meeting in Sacramento.

Seven other changes were proposed by chairman John Lynch.

They included:

Authorization for counties to collect property taxes in four or more installments; end restrictions on review of property tax appeals taken to superior courts; subject public lands leased to private users to full taxation; simplify administration of the 1 per cent local sales and use tax and eliminate special exemptions for utilities and carriers now in the local tax law; provide more equity in the truck transportation tax or eliminate it; eliminate preferred treatment for insurance companies now in the Constitution by removing the principal office deduction not afforded to other business taxpayers; and end the inequity between diesel and gasoline use by trucks by raising diesel fuel 2 cents a gallon because it is 50 per cent more efficient.

Lynch recommended the 1968 homeowner exemption be boosted from $750 to $1,500; raise the qualifying income for senior citizens seeking property tax assistance from $3,350 to $5,000; and grant a minimum 20 per cent tax credit.

Temporary funding of the Cal-Vet Farm and Home Loan Program has been provided through a $13 million loan from the state's General Fund. Gov. Ronald Reagan said the loan will provide financing for about 715 veterans homes, at the present average of $18,000 per home. The state has $200 million in authorized, but unsold, veterans' bonds. A constitutional amendment on the June 1970 ballot will permit the state to accept bids of up to 7 per cent interest on the bonds which now have a 5 per cent ceiling.

The fenced-in zone itself had become a major issue. Inside the barrier, Panamanians lived alongside U.S. citizens in comfortable ease. Outside Panamanians live in crowded slum tenements and hovels.

The situation, which had grown increasingly volatile since World War II, culminated in demonstrations and riots in the 1950s.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower moved to meet Panamaian demands in 1959 by authorizing the republic to fly its flag alongside the U.S. flag in the Canal Zone.

But his action—which was opposed by a sizeable bloc in the U.S. Congress—relieved the situation only briefly, and the unrest exploded in major riots soon after President Lyndon Johnson took office in 1963.

Johnson stilled the disturbances with the promise of new treaty negotiations, and these were begun in the following year. The negotiations took three years, and resulted in agreement on not one draft treaty but three.

The first would eliminate sole U.S. sovereignty over the Canal Zone, provide a "significant" increase in the annual payments to Panama, and establish a dual authority with Panama to govern the canal's operations.

But the treaties pleased no one. They prompted an uproar in Congress from members who felt they went too far in ceding sovereignty to Panama, and riots in Panama where political groups felt they did not go far enough in giving control to their country.

Formal signing of the treaties was delayed until after the then-pending Panamanian elections—but 11 days after a pro-American president was elected, he was overthrown by military coup.

Since then, the draft treaties have been in a sort of legal limbo. The new regime in Panama had not, until very recently, pressed the subject, and the State Department was reluctant to negotiate with what it considered to be an illegal government.

Lately, Panama has evinced, informally, an interest in resuming conversations, and the State Department has said it is always glad to talk to anyone about matters of concern.

In the meantime, Congress created the study commission, authorized it to spend $24 million on its field work and feasibility analyses, and is awaiting the results.

A KING 'ON STRIKE'

Constantine Exile In 23rd Month

ROME (UPI) — This month it will be two years since young King Constantine of Greece went "on strike" against the ruling military junta in Athens and chose exile.

Today, living quietly in Rome with his queen, the lovely former Princess Anne Marie of Denmark, and their three children, the 29-year-old Constantine shows no outward signs of being ready to return to his country unless on his own terms.

The terms are said to include free elections and a political climate of open and free debate.

SHUN LIMELIGHT

Though they have been assiduous about shunning the limelight during their self-exile in Rome, the Greek royal couple came briefly back into the headlines on Oct. 1 when the 24-year-old Anne Marie gave birth to her third child, a son whom they have named Nicholas. In addition to the infant Prince Nicholas the children are Crown Prince Paul, 2, and Princess Alexia, 4.

Ever since they fled to Rome on Dec. 14, 1967, after Constantine tried unsuccessfully to overthrow the leaders of the army coup d'etat which took power in April that year, the Greek exiles have sought to attract as little attention to themselves as possible. Constantine wants to do nothing that will make it harder for him to return some day to the throne that is still officially his.

The Athens regime still considers Constantine the king of Greece although it has appointed a regent to discharge royal functions in his place. It put out a cautious feeler to the king earlier this year by sending Foreign Minister Panoyotis Pipinelis to meet Constantine in Switzerland.

There has been no comment on the meeting from members of Constantine's entourage in Rome, but information leaked in London at the time said the king told Pipinelis he was willing to return to Greece only if there were free general elections held after an open political campaign.

The young king has maintained quiet contacts with Athens by means of two courtiers, Court Marshal Leonidas Papagos and Marinos Ieroulanos, who commute regularly between the Greek capital and Rome.

At the same time, Constantine appears to be keeping some lines open to rightwing opposition leaders in exile, such as ex-Premier Constantine Karamanlis in Paris.

Greek political sources said the king and Karamanlis appeared to have agreed to shelve differences dating back to the times of Constantine's father, King Paul.

Constantine made world headlines when he arrived in Rome, haggard and unshaven, in the early hours of a cold December morning two years ago. For several months afterwards, if he merely stepped out on the street to buy a newspaper, photographers mobbed him.

Things have since changed. Now he and the queen live almost as recluses. When occasionally they venture out, perhaps to quiet dinners in out-of-the-way Roman restaurants, they draw little attention.

In the first weeks of their Italian stay, the royal couple lived at the Greek Embassy across the street from the Rome zoo. They then moved to a luxury hotel near the Via Veneto nightlife street and later to a secluded villa off the ancient Via Cassia 12 miles northwest of Rome. Queen Mother Frederika rented the villa from a Mexican millionaire.

ANOTHER MOVE

About a year ago, Constantine and Anne Marie moved to another and less palatial villa on the Via di Porta Latina at the other end of Rome. Its owner is Countess Alice Paolozzi, whose daughter Christine made news several years ago by posing topless for a magazine photograph.

The royal couple share the 10-room villa with their children and a Greek and an Irish nursemaid. Queen Frederika and Constantine's sister, Princess Irene, now live in another villa on the northern outskirts of Rome.

Police assigned by the Italian government to guard the king—one uniformed Carabiniere who stands at the gate of the royal villa and two plainclothesmen who follow Constantine wherever he goes—have most of their trouble with photographers trying to take pictures of the couple.

ROYAL COMPLAINT

Photographers also irritated the king during their summer vacation at Ansedonia, a Tuscan beach resort. Constantine complained to Italian authorities against camera hawks who took long lens pictures of himself and his wife in bathing suits.

Constantine and Anne Marie also spent part of the summer in Denmark with her parents, King Frederik IX and Queen Ingrid. Earlier in the year, Constantine went to Washington for the funeral of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and was received there with full royal honors.

Athens reports say the king's exile has not affected his royal allowance, which amounts to $500,000 annually. The pay is supposed to cover the king's salary, travel expenses and maintenance and operation of the royal palace and gardens. An undisclosed share of the allowance is deducted and retained in Athens to cover palace expenses, but the remainder reportedly is sent to the king in Rome each month by special courier.

Blood-Chilling 'Southern Hospitality'

By JOHN AITKEN
Toronto Telegram News Service

JACKSON, Miss. (TNS) — The fear of outsiders that many Southerners cling to is covered by a thin and effusive veneer of southern hospitality, but there is something blood-chilling about talking to a true segregationist.

Beneath the friendliness, the polite request that the interview about to take place be tape-recorded by both sides, lies the basic mistrust that is a fact of life in the southern states.

There is no communication at all in a genuine sense; there are two sides, unalterably opposed, impossible for either one to convince the other and little chance for more than a cursory attempt at understanding.

Thus an interview with John C. Satterfield, probably the best-known segregationist lawyer in the country, has to be interesting if not particularly enlightening.

High on a hill overlooking Yazoo City perches the proud white marble office building of the Mississippi Chemical Company, and within a lavish suite of offices on the fourth floor presides Satterfield, lifelong Mississippian, genteel gut fighter and for the past 20 or 30 years one of the most important and most frequently victorious generals in the battle against integration of southern schools.

His tortured syntax and well-practiced generalities and expressions of southern hospitality, create an aura of respectability for the continued holding action against progress of the American blackman.

Satterfield views the Supreme Court as not his enemy but the enemy of the country, in that this "ill-considered" ruling of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, forcing full integration by the end of the year (the very thought of it actually happening is preposterous) is hampering, not helping the cause of the Negro.

"This (integration) is, of course, a gradual process," he says. "It has been announced by Secretary Finch and by President Nixon that they intend to enforce the constitutional guarantees in the field of education throughout the entire United States, not in any particular section.

"My judgment would be that the process will be begun within the next few months but it will actually take several years for it to be extended to all parts of the United States."

The implication, unspoken but there nonetheless, is that in his judgment Mississippi will not be in the forefront of reform, either.

His reaction to the suggestion that segregated black schools in his own Yazoo City make little effort to teach anything of a more academic nature than the importance of turning up to class each day and not getting uppity, is one of near horror.

"I do not know of any instance in my judgment—Io do not believe it to be a fact that any graduate of our high schools attended predominantly by the Negro race, in fact exclusively by the members of the Negro race, has ever received a diploma without being able to read and write."

This was in response to a question about statements made the day before by a black principal of a black high school, a saddened and frustrated man who swore that "social promotion" meant students were regularly advanced without regard for what they had or had not learned.

What, then, of integration, Mr. Satterfield? What of eventual inter-marriage, and what of the future of Mississippi blacks?

"Of course," he answered, "we have more than 900,000 of the finest Negroes in the world in Mississippi. They and their fathers and their grandfathers have been Mississippians just about as long as my grandfather and father, whose pictures are there on the wall. . . ."

In the lobby of the marble MCC office building is a permanent exhibit of paintings showing various scenes of cotton plantation life during the time of slavery in Mississippi.

Presumably they are there to remind people how far the black man has advanced, but I didn't ask.

"I believe they have an excellent future in my judgment, unless prevented by employed troublemakers (he named Rudy Shielis, a dedicated young agitator from Chicago who has successfully managed black boycotts, in several Mississippi cities).

"Insofar as intermarriage is concerned," he continued, "it is my judgment that it is not in the best interest of either race and certainly not to the best interest of the United States.

"In other countries, chiefly in other continents, it has been the experience that the intermarriage of races has tended to have a very adverse affect on the citizenship."

Similarly Satterfield bridled at suggestion that segregated housing exists in Mississippi. If it does, he said, it's because members of both races prefer it that way.

"In my judgment," he said, "if a Negro was to move into a white community he would not be assassinated. On the other hand, in my judgment, if a Negro was to move into certain exclusive white areas it would be considered objectionable."

Does he believe, then, in letting the races be separate but equal?

"No, not separate but equal, but on a basis of equality and to whatever extend there may be separateness it would be voluntary on the part of those involved."

What of Mississippi's chances of riot and violence in the months to come, with the Supreme Court ruling for instant integration now upheld by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals despite a vigorous fight by administration officials?

Unlikely, he says, and black spokesman agree with him.

But a final comment on the riots of the past: "The riots to which you refer have been set up and planned by militant Negro organizations where they were involved, or mixed organizations or in some instances by organizations which have very close Communist ties.

"I do not know that many instances have been shown to be true where many of these riots have been instigated and planned by those who have very close Communist ties . . ."

And there you have it, the opinion of a refined and gentlemanly and extremely likeable segregationist who believes that the violence of ghetto life is a Communist plot against America; who believes that schools that do not teach are comparable to scohols that do; a man who believes, simply, that it is unlikely that black and white can ever achieve true equality.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The commander of the troops involved in the alleged massacre at My Lai denied this week that he ordered or was aware of any deliberate killing of Vietnamese civilians by U.S. troops.

"No, I did not shoot any child in My Lai, and no, I did not order any massacre in My Lai," Capt. Ernest L. Medina told a Pentagon news conference. "I did not see any massacre in My Lai."

The 33-year-old Army captain's denials—his first public statements on the "massacre" —were in response to charges made by various soldiers and ex-soldiers who seemed to be cropping up everywhere with conflicting accounts of what happened in My Lai on that fateful day 20 months ago.

Attorneys for both the prosecution and the defense in the pending court martial of 1st Lt. William L. Calley Jr., who was a platoon commander in Medina's company, asked for a ban on further pretrial statements, but the request was denied by the Court of Military Appeals as an infringement on freedom of the press.

Medina, with Boston Attorney F. Lee Bailey, talked to newsmen during a recess in the Army's second-round investigation of the massacre reports. They were ruled groundless in an earlier investigation, but the colonel who conducted it has since expressed some doubts.

No charges have been filed against Medina.

Three South Vietnamese Senators who visited My Lai this week said their investigation indicated that a number of civilians there were shot with small arms at closer ange, but that the details remain obscure.

Tax Reforms Spring Up For 1970 Ballots

By CAPITOL NEWS SERVICE

Tax relief for homeowners, renters and senior citizens, a statewide property tax for schools, curbs on the charity property exemption and income tax withholding were proposed by the State Board of Equalization as "elements in any comprehensive tax reform legislation."

The board of equalization, the state's major revenue agency, made its recommendations before a joint meeting of the Assembly and Senate Revenue and Taxation committees meeting in Sacramento.

Seven other changes were proposed by chairman John Lynch.

They included:

Authorization for counties to collect property taxes in four or more installments; end restrictions on review of property tax appeals taken to superior courts; subject public lands leased to private users to full taxation; simplify administration of the 1 per cent local sales and use tax and eliminate special exemptions for utilities and carriers now in the local tax law; provide more equity in the truck transportation tax or eliminate it; eliminate preferred treatment for insurance companies now in the Constitution by removing the principal office deduction not afforded to other business taxpayers; and end the inequity between diesel and gasoline use by trucks by raising diesel fuel 2 cents a gallon because it is 50 per cent more efficient.

Lynch recommended the 1968 homeowner exemption be boosted from $750 to $1,500; raise the qualifying income for senior citizens seeking property tax assistance from $3,350 to $5,000; and grant a minimum 20 per cent tax credit.

Temporary funding of the Cal-Vet Farm and Home Loan Program has been provided through a $13 million loan from the state's General Fund. Gov. Ronald Reagan said the loan will provide financing for about 715 veterans homes, at the present average of $18,000 per home. The state has $200 million in authorized, but unsold, veterans' bonds. A constitutional amendment on the June 1970 ballot will permit the state to accept bids of up to 7 per cent interest on the bonds which now have a 5 per cent ceiling.

Questions Unanswered On State's Church Tax

By JERRY RANKIN

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California soon begins taxing some church businesses, although the move is more a reflection of changing times than a big money-maker for the state treasury.

The tax takes effect Jan. 1, but no one knows exactly who will be taxed, where they are or how much money will be raised.

State Finance Director Caspar W. Weinberger summed up the situation in a recent report by listing the expected revenue from the new tax as "unknown."

The law, passed by the 1969 legislature and signed by Gov. Reagan, simply extends the state's seven per cent tax on corporate income to businesses directly operated by religious organizations, but unrelated to their theological function.

The problem is that no one, from the state officials charged with enforcing the law to the churches themselves, can — or is willing to — give a specific example of a business which isn't taxed now, but will be by the new law.

The law was sponsored by Democratic Sen. Anthony C. Beilenson of Beverly Hills, a Jew. He was surprised at the easy passage of a bill that in years past would have been a highly controversial matter.

This year, however, supporters noted that most major churches had endorsed such legislation, including the National Council of Churches. For that reason, he said, "the churches laid off" the legislation.

Beilenson says "nobody has any idea" how much money will be raised by the measure.

James T. Philbin, a Franchise Tax Board lawyer who will administer the law, remarks "we have absolutely no idea" how much money will come in. He said he is sending information on the law to all the church organizations he can find, and will seek help from the news media next year to publicize the law.

Rev. Glen A. Holman, lobbyist for the Northern and Southern California Councils of Churches, was asked if the revenue might hit $1 million a year.

"I would doubt it would be that high," he answered.

The law does not involve businesses which have a controlling interest held by a church, but which are actually run by lay management. These already are taxed.

Holman explains, "You really find that the big investment churches have is usually more in things they lease out, such as owning a hotel or motel. Or they have it in stocks and bonds. Your mainline denomination don't want to be bothered with operating businesses. Most aren't going to be affected."

He couldn't give an example of a business that will be taxed in the future because of the law, and added that churches which might be, aren't anxious to talk about it.

"Most that do it don't want particularly to advertise it. People might think it's kind of getting away with a special privilege," the Rev. Mr. Holman commented.

He said "there seems to be practically no concern" over the new law. "I haven't had more than two or three inquires from churches."

William R. Burke, legislative counsel for the Roman Catholic bishops of California, said he'd "be surprised if there is a great deal of tax money resulting from this bill."

State officials note that such things as cemeteries, publications, homes for the aged and so on directly related to a church's function won't be considered unrelated income, and thus will remain tax-free.

But if a church ran, for instance, a movie house devoted to family-type films, it would be taxed.

The new law also requires all churches to list their types and sources of income — but not the amounts, unless it was from unrelated businesses.

THOMAS AQUINAS COLLEGE

A New Tack Is Taken On Education

By JOANNE GRANT

Thousands of angry college students complain today that education is not relevant and seek change through demands, demonstrations and destruction.

A handful of college professors, equally convinced of the irrelevancy, have taken a different tack and founded a new college.

It is so new it hasn't opened yet, but a dozen faculty members have been hired, space has been found, students are interested and private contributions are coming in — in time to begin operations next fall.

It is Thomas Aquinas College on the campus of Dominican College of San Rafael.

It will be an unusual school, a radical departure from current educational efforts by private and public schools and its founders are convinced it is one answer to the "crises in education."

At Thomas Aquinas, students will receive a "liberal arts education in the traditional sense" with a curriculum reminescent of that studied at Harvard and Yale as far back as 1750, said Dr. Ronald P. McArthur, president of the college in an interview on the campus.

Included in the demanding course of study, the same for all students, will be four years each of mathematics, science, philosophy and a seminar which will include history, literature and psychology. Greek and Latin will be the only languages taught.

Textbooks in most cases will be the works of the old masters such as Euclid, Aeschylus and Aristotle, working up in the senior year to more modern ones such as Einstein, Freud and Marx.

There will be no electives and no majors, McArthur, a former teacher at St. Mary's in Moraga, explained.

Classes, which will be called tutorials, will be small, with a maximum of 15 students and there will be no more than 300 students in the whole school.

Teachers will be called tutors, with equal rank, and there will be no premium on publishing, he said.

They will be expected to know all parts of the curriculum so they can constantly show the relationship of the parts to the whole.

To this point, the college is not unique. St. John's College in Annapolis, Md., follows a similar plan and some private and state colleges have departments patterned after St. John's 30-year-old experiment.

But Thomas Aquinas will not stop at relating subjects to each other and examining their philosophical implications.

The new Catholic college will also examine and judge in the light of theology.

McArthur believes "Christian revelation not only shows how to live morally, but it also illumines the intelligence."

Philosophers such as Socrates will be compared with Catholic philosophers such as St. Augustine to help students understand revelation and to encourage the central role McArthur believes the church should play in the intellectual life of Catholics.

Catholic colleges require theology courses, but many have reduced the requirements in recent years and none intertwine theology with other subjects, as Thomas Aquinas plans to do.

How can McArthur's plan solve even a portion of the cur rent "crises in education'"

He sees the crises, aside from direct revolution, as part of "an attempt to make every part of life political, including the university which should prepare partisans . . . who can change society."

Traditionally, he contended, education has been free from politics. "To maintain education in that way is to keep it free from the things that make it a battleground."

John W. Newmayr, dean of the new college, maintained that many persons don't understand the ideologies, the foundations of today's politics and therefore are unable to analyze them.

Education has become vocational, superficial, he contended.

However, none of the men involved with the college believe the students who are noisily trying to force change will attend Thomas Aquinas.

"It is not the answer to education in general," McArthur said, but he believes it is a step toward restoring education to its "rightful place." You have to have understanding for change," he said.

"If you change things without understanding, it's madness," added Neumayr.

Obtaining understanding is going to be tough, the men from Thomas Aquinas warned, and along with standard requirements for intellect, students who attend Thomas Aquinas must have a deep desire to learn, Neumayr said.

The new school will be a men's college, but woman students from Dominican may enroll through the latter and will receive their degrees from it.

The two schools will share facilities such as the library and cafeteria and for the first year, Thomas Aquinas will use a Dominican building. By 1972, it hopes to have its own building on the east side of Forest Meadows.

REV. WILLIAM K. HARMAN
To Terra Linda church

New Team Ministry Is Formed

Rev. William K. Harman, who served as part-time youth director at Faith Lutheran Church in Terra Linda while working on a master's degree at the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, begins his duties next week in a new team ministry at the church.

Harman then attended Hartford, Conn., Seminary Foundation, prior to teaching church history at the Lutheran Theological College in Makumira, Tanzania. He held the post until last summer.

The Terra Linda church called Harman last month to join Rev. Bliss W. Bellinger in forming the team ministry under a three-year grant from the Board of American Missions of the Lutheran Church.

Of the new program, Bellinger said this week: "The national church offers this unique form of ministry, called Staff Ministry Program, to certain young congregations with a responsibility in a rapidly growing field. The purpose of the team ministry is to increase the effectiveness of the congregational staff and therefore increase the total ministry of the congregation to its membership and its service to the community."

Harman with his wife, Patti, and sons, Douglas and Derke, arrived this week.

Two Schools Of Thought On Morality

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

There are two schools of thought about morality.

One holds there are objective standards of right and wrong that apply to all people at all times. This is the traditional view, espoused by most religious bodies since the time of Moses and the Ten Commandments.

The other holds that morality is essentially subjective: a matter of doing what you feel is right under the circumstances which confront you at a particular time. This view—popularly expressed in the maxim, "Let your conscience be your guide"—has acquired a very wide following in recent years.

SOME PITFALLS

Pitfalls of the traditional view have been plainly marked since Jesus engaged in verbal tilts with the Pharisees. A morality based on observance of external rules is forever in danger of becoming legalistic and inflexible, of upholding the letter rather than the spirit of the moral law.

But reliance on "conscience" can also lead to some pretty horrible results.

That easily forgotten truth was brought home to many Americans last week by Paul Meadlo, 22, of West Terre Haute, Ind.

In an interview with Mike Wallace of CBS News, Meadlo said he and other American soldiers killed scores of South Vietnamese civilians—old men, women, children and even babies—by shooting them during an Army raid on a village at Song My in March 1968.

"They didn't put up any fight or anything," Meadlo recalled. "The women huddled against their children and took it. They brought their kids real close to their stomachs and hugged them and put their bodies over them trying to save them."

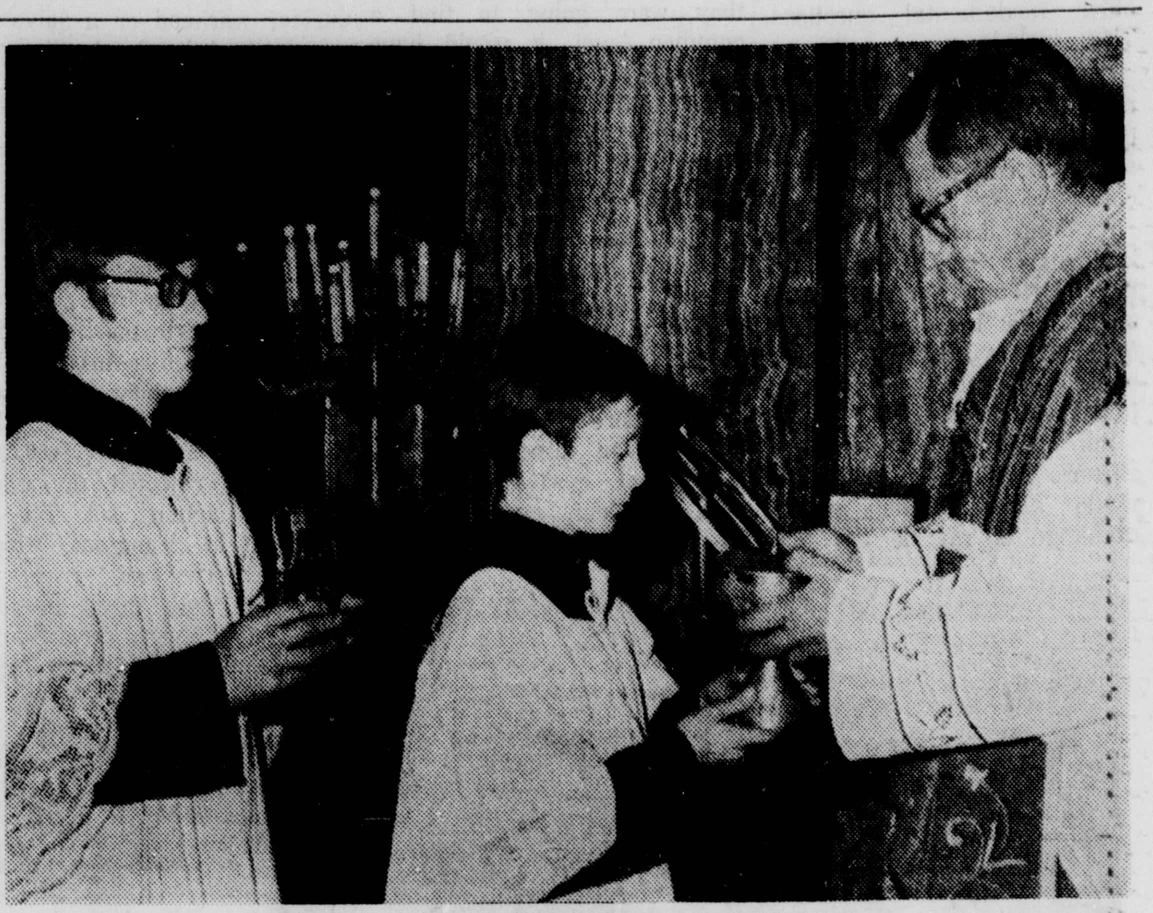
"Why did you do such a thing?" Wallace asked.

"Why did I do it?" Meadlo replied. "Because I felt like I was ordered to do it. And it seemed like I realized...at the time, I felt like I was doing the right thing."

GOOD BUDDY

Meadlo went on to explain that he had "lost a damn good buddy" in combat with Viet Cong guerrillas who had used Song My as a hideout, and "it was on my conscience" to avenge him.

"So after I done it, I felt good. But later on that day, it was getting to me."



NEW FORMAT IN ROME

Under new liturgical reforms in the Catholic Church, altar boys hand chalice and wine cruet to a priest celebrating the new format Mass in Rome's Sant 'Andrea delle Fratte Church. Until the reforms went into effect last Sunday in Italy, only the priest could handle the sacred vessels. Other countries are following the reforms, which will be universal probably within two years. Questions Unanswered On State's Church Tax

By JERRY RANKIN

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California soon begins taxing some church businesses, although the move is more a reflection of changing times than a big money-maker for the state treasury.

The tax takes effect Jan. 1, but no one knows exactly who will be taxed, where they are or how much money will be raised.

State Finance Director Caspar W. Weinberger summed up the situation in a recent report by listing the expected revenue from the new tax as "unknown."

The law, passed by the 1969 legislature and signed by Gov. Reagan, simply extends the state's seven per cent tax on corporate income to businesses directly operated by religious organizations, but unrelated to their theological function.

The problem is that no one, from the state officials charged with enforcing the law to the churches themselves, can — or is willing to — give a specific example of a business which isn't taxed now, but will be by the new law.

The law was sponsored by Democratic Sen. Anthony C. Beilenson of Beverly Hills, a Jew. He was surprised at the easy passage of a bill that in years past would have been a highly controversial matter.

This year, however, supporters noted that most major churches had endorsed such legislation, including the National Council of Churches. For that reason, he said, "the churches laid off" the legislation.

Beilenson says "nobody has any idea" how much money will be raised by the measure.

James T. Philbin, a Franchise Tax Board lawyer who will administer the law, remarks "we have absolutely no idea" how much money will come in. He said he is sending information on the law to all the church organizations he can find, and will seek help from the news media next year to publicize the law.

Rev. Glen A. Holman, lobbyist for the Northern and Southern California Councils of Churches, was asked if the revenue might hit $1 million a year.

"I would doubt it would be that high," he answered.

The law does not involve businesses which have a controlling interest held by a church, but which are actually run by lay management. These already are taxed.

Holman explains, "You really find that the big investment churches have is usually more in things they lease out, such as owning a hotel or motel. Or they have it in stocks and bonds. Your mainline denomination don't want to be bothered with operating businesses. Most aren't going to be affected."

He couldn't give an example of a business that will be taxed in the future because of the law, and added that churches which might be, aren't anxious to talk about it.

"Most that do it don't want particularly to advertise it. People might think it's kind of getting away with a special privilege," the Rev. Mr. Holman commented.

He said "there seems to be practically no concern" over the new law. "I haven't had more than two or three inquires from churches."

William R. Burke, legislative counsel for the Roman Catholic bishops of California, said he'd "be surprised if there is a great deal of tax money resulting from this bill."

State officials note that such things as cemeteries, publications, homes for the aged and so on directly related to a church's function won't be considered unrelated income, and thus will remain tax-free.

But if a church ran, for instance, a movie house devoted to family-type films, it would be taxed.

The new law also requires all churches to list their types and sources of income — but not the amounts, unless it was from unrelated businesses.

THOMAS AQUINAS COLLEGE

A New Tack Is Taken On Education

By JOANNE GRANT

Thousands of angry college students complain today that education is not relevant and seek change through demands, demonstrations and destruction.

A handful of college professors, equally convinced of the irrelevancy, have taken a different tack and founded a new college.

It is so new it hasn't opened yet, but a dozen faculty members have been hired, space has been found, students are interested and private contributions are coming in — in time to begin operations next fall.

It is Thomas Aquinas College on the campus of Dominican College of San Rafael.

It will be an unusual school, a radical departure from current educational efforts by private and public schools and its founders are convinced it is one answer to the "crises in education."

At Thomas Aquinas, students will receive a "liberal arts education in the traditional sense" with a curriculum reminescent of that studied at Harvard and Yale as far back as 1750, said Dr. Ronald P. McArthur, president of the college in an interview on the campus.

Included in the demanding course of study, the same for all students, will be four years each of mathematics, science, philosophy and a seminar which will include history, literature and psychology. Greek and Latin will be the only languages taught.

Textbooks in most cases will be the works of the old masters such as Euclid, Aeschylus and Aristotle, working up in the senior year to more modern ones such as Einstein, Freud and Marx.

There will be no electives and no majors, McArthur, a former teacher at St. Mary's in Moraga, explained.

Classes, which will be called tutorials, will be small, with a maximum of 15 students and there will be no more than 300 students in the whole school.

Teachers will be called tutors, with equal rank, and there will be no premium on publishing, he said.

They will be expected to know all parts of the curriculum so they can constantly show the relationship of the parts to the whole.

To this point, the college is not unique. St. John's College in Annapolis, Md., follows a similar plan and some private and state colleges have departments patterned after St. John's 30-year-old experiment.

But Thomas Aquinas will not stop at relating subjects to each other and examining their philosophical implications.

The new Catholic college will also examine and judge in the light of theology.

McArthur believes "Christian revelation not only shows how to live morally, but it also illumines the intelligence."

Philosophers such as Socrates will be compared with Catholic philosophers such as St. Augustine to help students understand revelation and to encourage the central role McArthur believes the church should play in the intellectual life of Catholics.

Catholic colleges require theology courses, but many have reduced the requirements in recent years and none intertwine theology with other subjects, as Thomas Aquinas plans to do.

How can McArthur's plan solve even a portion of the cur rent "crises in education'"

He sees the crises, aside from direct revolution, as part of "an attempt to make every part of life political, including the university which should prepare partisans . . . who can change society."

Traditionally, he contended, education has been free from politics. "To maintain education in that way is to keep it free from the things that make it a battleground."

John W. Newmayr, dean of the new college, maintained that many persons don't understand the ideologies, the foundations of today's politics and therefore are unable to analyze them.

Education has become vocational, superficial, he contended.

However, none of the men involved with the college believe the students who are noisily trying to force change will attend Thomas Aquinas.

"It is not the answer to education in general," McArthur said, but he believes it is a step toward restoring education to its "rightful place." You have to have understanding for change," he said.

"If you change things without understanding, it's madness," added Neumayr.

Obtaining understanding is going to be tough, the men from Thomas Aquinas warned, and along with standard requirements for intellect, students who attend Thomas Aquinas must have a deep desire to learn, Neumayr said.

The new school will be a men's college, but woman students from Dominican may enroll through the latter and will receive their degrees from it.

The two schools will share facilities such as the library and cafeteria and for the first year, Thomas Aquinas will use a Dominican building. By 1972, it hopes to have its own building on the east side of Forest Meadows.

NEW OLD EDUCATION — Enthusiastic Ronald P. McArthur, president of Marin's newest college, Thomas Aquinas, discusses his plans for making the school an in-depth study of the past and present, with emphasis on Christian revelation. (Independent-Journal photo by Jim Kean)

REV. WILLIAM K. HARMAN

New Team Ministry Is Formed

Rev. William K. Harman, who served as part-time youth director at Faith Lutheran Church in Terra Linda while working on a master's degree at the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, begins his duties next week in a new team ministry at the church.

Harman then attended Hartford, Conn., Seminary Foundation, prior to teaching church history at the Lutheran Theological College in Makumira, Tanzania. He held the post until last summer.

The Terra Linda church called Harman last month to join Rev. Bliss W. Bellinger in forming the team ministry under a three-year grant from the Board of American Missions of the Lutheran Church.

Of the new program, Bellinger said this week: "The national church offers this unique form of ministry, called Staff Ministry Program, to certain young congregations with a responsibility in a rapidly growing field. The purpose of the team ministry is to increase the effectiveness of the congregational staff and therefore increase the total ministry of the congregation to its membership and its service to the community."

Harman with his wife, Patti, and sons, Douglas and Derke, arrived this week.

Two Schools Of Thought On Morality

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

There are two schools of thought about morality.

One holds there are objective standards of right and wrong that apply to all people at all times. This is the traditional view, espoused by most religious bodies since the time of Moses and the Ten Commandments.

The other holds that morality is essentially subjective: a matter of doing what you feel is right under the circumstances which confront you at a particular time. This view—popularly expressed in the maxim, "Let your conscience be your guide"—has acquired a very wide following in recent years.

SOME PITFALLS

Pitfalls of the traditional view have been plainly marked since Jesus engaged in verbal tilts with the Pharisees. A morality based on observance of external rules is forever in danger of becoming legalistic and inflexible, of upholding the letter rather than the spirit of the moral law.

But reliance on "conscience" can also lead to some pretty horrible results.

That easily forgotten truth was brought home to many Americans last week by Paul Meadlo, 22, of West Terre Haute, Ind.

In an interview with Mike Wallace of CBS News, Meadlo said he and other American soldiers killed scores of South Vietnamese civilians—old men, women, children and even babies—by shooting them during an Army raid on a village at Song My in March 1968.

"They didn't put up any fight or anything," Meadlo recalled. "The women huddled against their children and took it. They brought their kids real close to their stomachs and hugged them and put their bodies over them trying to save them."

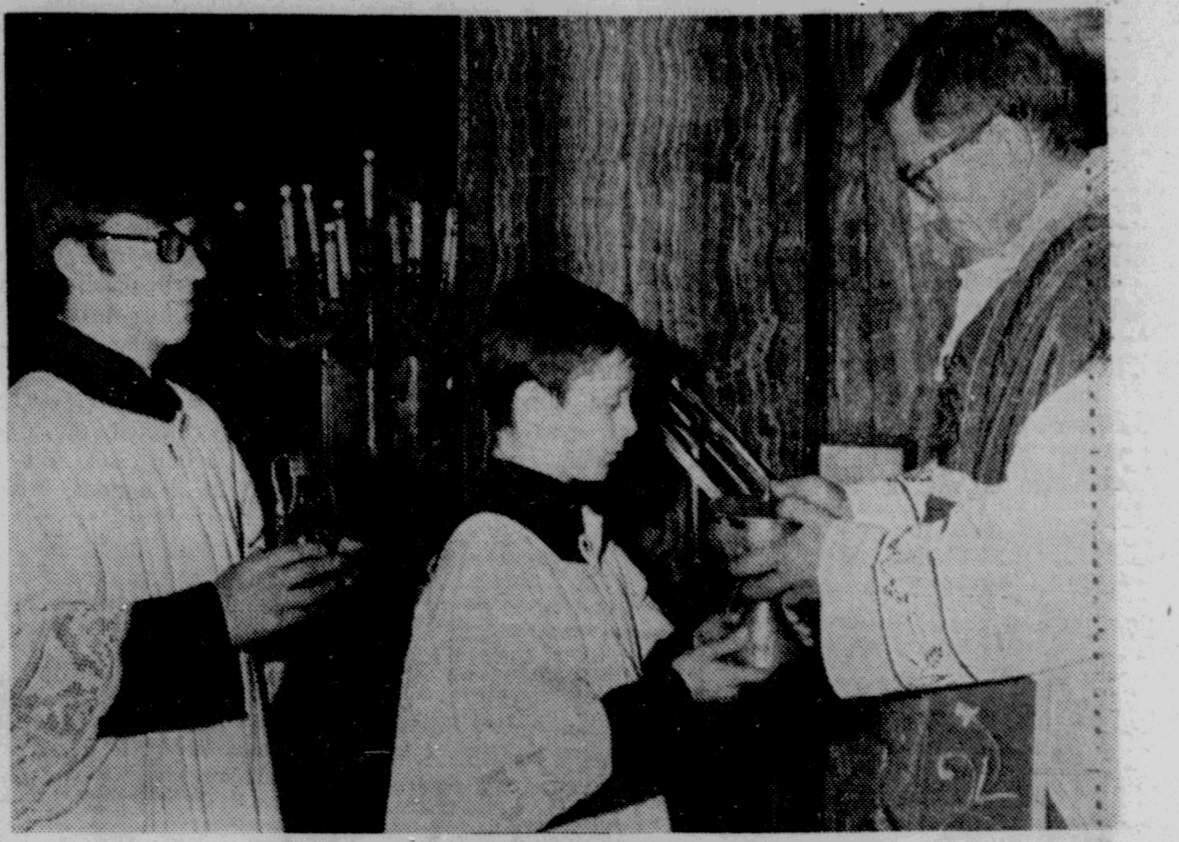
"Why did you do such a thing?" Wallace asked.

"Why did I do it?" Meadlo replied. "Because I felt like I was ordered to do it. And it seemed like I realized...at the time, I felt like I was doing the right thing."

GOOD BUDDY

Meadlo went on to explain that he had "lost a damn good buddy" in combat with Viet Cong guerrillas who had used Song My as a hideout, and "it was on my conscience" to avenge him.

"So after I done it, I felt good. But later on that day, it was getting to me."



NEW FORMAT IN ROME

Under new liturgical reforms in the Catholic Church, altar boys hand chalice and wine cruet to a priest celebrating the new format Mass in Rome's Sant 'Andrea delle Fratte Church. Until the reforms went into effect last Sunday in Italy, only the priest could handle the sacred vessels. Other countries are following the reforms, which will be universal probably within two years.

GUEST — Dr. Stanley E. Linquist, head of the psychology department at Fresno State College, is presenting a series of lectures at the Marin Evangelical Free Church, which meets at the Improvement Club, Fifth and H streets, San Rafael. He will speak at 7:45 p.m. tonight and again at 11 a.m. tomorrow on the general theme, "The Church as a Therapeutic Community."

Meeting Moratorium

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) -- A two-year moratorium on national church meetings is urged by the United Methodist Church's program council, which notes that the denomination has held a total of 19 national conferences or consultations since 1968.

Christmas Festival Is Set Dec. 21

Highlight of the Christmas season for the Marin Covenant Church will be its annual Christmas Festival, Sunday, Dec. 21, at 5:30 p.m. in the Marinwood Community Center.

Activities will include a smorgasbord dinner, Christmas carol singing, music by a guest group, and a brief meditation regarding the meaning of Christmas by the Gary R. Copeland, pastor.

Reservations need to be made early, Copeland said.

Performance Set For 'The Messiah'

Performances of Handel's "The Messiah" will be presented by the San Geronimo Valley Singers at the San Geronimo Valley Presbyterian Church at 8 p.m. Dec. 14 and at St. Columba's Episcopal Church, Inverness, on Dec. 28 at 3 p.m.

Soloists will be Robin Miller, soprano; Florence Bierman, contralto; Kent Weaver, tenor, and Walt MacNally, bass. The singers will be conducted by Darrell Parker with Faye MacNally as accompanist.

Christmas Cantata Scheduled Tomorrow

"Love Came Down at Christmas," a cantata by Carl W. Van Dre, will be presented at the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at the Bethel Baptist Church, 1929 Novato Boulevard, Novato.

Mrs. Leland Smith will be soprano soloist. A tenor and alto duet will be sung by Leonard Feaster and his daughter, Mary. Mrs. Philip Dickinson will direct.

Dance Group To Present Program

The Margo Jones dance group will perform a "Celebration of Life during the 9:30 a.m. service tomorrow at the Community Congregational Church of Belvedere-Tiburon.

The sermon by Rev. Frank Evans will be "He Comes That We Might See." A traditional worship service will be held at 11 a.m.

At 5 p.m. the third annual Advent Festival will be held with children of the parish making decorations for the church tree. The festival also will include Christmas caroling.

Novato Church Sets Israel Film Showing

"The Twentieth Century Miracle," a film of Old Testament prophecies, will be shown at 7 p.m. tomorrow at Bethel Baptist Church at 1929 Novato Boulevard, Novato.

The film, made in color in Israel, shows desolate land being reclaimed, Solomon's copper mines on the Red Sea being restored, ruined cities being rebuilt and the deep sea port of Ashod.

Ancient Celts started the Halloween mask tradition. They wore disguises as protection against witches and evil spirits who supposedly emerged from underground lairs to dance and play one night a year.

Church Slates Concert, Show

A chamber music concert will be presented at 7 p.m. Dec. 14 at the Santa Venetia Presbyterian Church.

The concert will include "Mozart's Piano Quintet in E flat," Prokofieff's Sonata for Flute and Piano," one of Handel's trios for two violins and the organ, Soprano Elsie Krinitsky performing a work by Maurice Ravel and two piano solos.

During the intermission, paintings by members and friends of the church will be on display.

The concert is open to the public without charge.

'The Messiah' Is Slated Tomorrow

The combined choirs of First Presbyterian Church, San Anselmo, and First Presbyterian Church, Berkeley, will present "The Messiah," by Georg Friedrich Handel, tomorrow at 7:30 p.m., at the San Anselmo church, 72 Kensington Road.

The presentation will be directed by John Milton Kelly of the Berkeley church, with Wilbur Russell of the San Anselmo church as organist.

Soloists will be Verna Snapper, soprano; Esther Chow Lee, contralto; Ray J. Tilley, tenor, and Byron Jones, baritone.

Novato Priest To Be Leader

A Novato priest has been chosen as spokesman for a group of Catholic priests from eight Western dioceses who favor such church reforms as optional celibacy for the clergy.

Father James M. Purcell, associate pastor of Our Lady of Loretto Church, will be the group's representative to the National Federation of Priest Councils.

He will represent priests from dioceses at Santa Rosa, Oakland, San Francisco, Monterey, Stockton, Salt Lake City, and Reno and the Archdiocese of San Francisco.

Church Slates Concert, Show

A chamber music concert will be presented at 7 p.m. Dec. 14 at the Santa Venetia Presbyterian Church.

The concert will include "Mozart's Piano Quintet in E flat," Prokofieff's Sonata for Flute and Piano," one of Handel's trios for two violins and the organ, Soprano Elsie Krinitsky performing a work by Maurice Ravel and two piano solos.

During the intermission, paintings by members and friends of the church will be on display.

The concert is open to the public without charge.

'The Messiah' Is Slated Tomorrow

The combined choirs of First Presbyterian Church, San Anselmo, and First Presbyterian Church, Berkeley, will present "The Messiah," by Georg Friedrich Handel, tomorrow at 7:30 p.m., at the San Anselmo church, 72 Kensington Road.

The presentation will be directed by John Milton Kelly of the Berkeley church, with Wilbur Russell of the San Anselmo church as organist.

Soloists will be Verna Snapper, soprano; Esther Chow Lee, contralto; Ray J. Tilley, tenor, and Byron Jones, baritone.

Novato Priest To Be Leader

A Novato priest has been chosen as spokesman for a group of Catholic priests from eight Western dioceses who favor such church reforms as optional celibacy for the clergy.

Father James M. Purcell, associate pastor of Our Lady of Loretto Church, will be the group's representative to the National Federation of Priest Councils.

He will represent priests from dioceses at Santa Rosa, Oakland, San Francisco, Monterey, Stockton, Salt Lake City, and Reno and the Archdiocese of San Francisco.

Christmas For Pioneer America Was An Occasion For Gratitude

It is startling to know that at one time Christmas was abolished legally in the United States but it is perfectly true.

In 1659, the General Court of Massachusetts, under the stern Puritan influence, forbade the keeping of Christmas. But despite a bitter fight on the part of the Puritans to keep and maintain the law, it was repealed in 1681.

WHAT WE KNOW in the U. S. as the traditional Christmas celebration dates back only about a hundred years.

The pioneers of this country really had what we would term a bleak Christmas. Turkey appeared on the board, true, because men went into the woods and shot wild turkey in order to have a feast of sorts. But in the rude sod houses, log cabins and huts of pioneer America, Christmas was not a gorgeous festival complete with presents, a groaning table and Dickensian cheer.

It was, rather, a prayer of gratitude for having survived yet another rigorous year. What foods were wrested from nature were prepared and stored with prayerful hope to reach the next harvest — a major concern of these self-reliant settlers.

IN THE Midwest, scarcity of wood obliged the homesteaders to gather buffalo chips; these were dried out and hauled by sledge to be stored in lean-tos. To provide against bitter cold winds and snows that heralded the coming of the Christmas season, the entire family worked hard and in harmony to lay in provisions.

Their "soddy" (home) and barn were weather-proofed and measures were taken to keep out small animals, birds and rattlers that sought the warmth of the open hearth that provided heat and cheer for its human inhabitants. Most notable of the problems were birdholes.

After all of the necessities of self-preservation were completed, the pioneer family turned to the holiday preparations. Father fashioned gifts of wood and clay for loved ones; his plucky wife secretly knit mittens, sweaters and scarves while the children slept in the loft.

A PIONEER Christmas was gladness, family cheer and thankfulness for God's benefices.

Candles, then as now, played an important part of Christmas. Each family prepared tallow tapers made of vegetable fibers and animal fats or beeswax to shine radiantly on the tree that lighted the church. Because of the scarcity of trees, the Christmas tree that stood in God's home was the only tree available to the pioneer family in some regions.

Acceptance has always been an obstacle to man's progress, the Christmas tree was no exception.

ON CHRISTMAS Eve in 1851, Rev. Henry Schwan stood before the front door of the little Zion Church in Cleveland, Ohio. As the members of his congregation arrived for the services he heard a child's delighted whisper, "Mother, look — the pastor's got a tree from Heaven!" It was Pastor Schwan's first Christmas with his new congregation, having recently arrived in this country, and the tree which the child thought the pastor had received from Heaven was the first tree to shine at an American Christmas service.

But, instead of heralding cheer it brought a storm of controversy. Objectors were determined it should be the last Christmas tree erected in an American church.

However, on Christmas Eve of the following year, after sadly abandoning his wish of having a tree at his Christmas service, he received the present of a new tree from the pastor of one of Cleveland's older churches. Joyfully, Reverend Schwan realized that the tree meant the acceptance of the custom by churchmen far more influential than himself, and once again a Christmas tree shone in Zion Church. Soon the custom spread all through the land.

The Happily-Married Expert On Divorce

Writer-Lawyer Is Specialist In Domestic Relation Field

A Tiburon man, who both by religious tradition and his own sentiments is a devout believer in the family unit, is, paradoxically, one of the leading authorities on the California divorce laws.

Walter T. Winter, sometimes called "Mr. Divorce," practices law in San Francisco and is one of the few attorneys in the country specializing in divorce and domestic relations problems.

His serious demeanor in a courtroom and behind a desk at the office is in sharp contrast to Walter Winter at home, as both husband and father, where he believes the family should engage in activities together.

JUST HOW many divorces he has handled in the 12 years he has been practicing law in California since graduating from the Golden Gate College Law School, Winter can't say.

"I stopped counting after the first thousand," he tells you.

He has written his third book on divorce which is just off the press and in which he is an outspoken critic of the "New California Divorce Laws." That also is the title of the book.

Indeed, the book almost never reached print, as Winter had many disagreements with the publisher, Sheridan Publishing Inc., because the author says, "the publisher thought I was far too critical of the new laws."

IN HIS BOOK, Winter makes no bones about his disappointment "because it was the first change in almost one hundred years and it was not done well."

"More time should have been taken, for what is really needed is an entirely new concept instead of rushing to change existing laws," Winter declares.

The new California divorce laws will be rougher on women because of the equal division of community property requirement; but, Winter says, it also will give women a license "to cheat" because misconduct cannot be brought up in alimony battles as a result of the new "no fault" amendments in divorce complaint.

WINTER, ALMOST a compulsive writer, published his first book, "Divorce and You," in 1963. It was a book designed to help people prepare for divorce.

He also wrote and published "A Manual of California Domestic Relations Procedures" for attorneys, in addition to having authored numerous articles on the subject of divorce.

The nemesis of the expert, today, is constant interruptions from numerous telephone calls by people wanting information, and Walter T. Winter is no exception.

He is continually besieged by telephone concerning divorce laws. Many of the calls are from fellow attorneys.

INDEED, a majority of his clients are referred to Winter by other lawyers.

"Most attorneys don't like divorce work, but I enjoy helping people with their marital problems," Winter explains.

"Many times you can help a couple in trouble resolve the difficulties before the two really decide to go to the divorce court," he declares. "In other cases, differences are so irreconcilable that dissolution of the marriage is the only course for

THE LIGHTS BURN late in the Tiburon study of attorney Walter Winter, who frequently works at his typewriter till 2 a.m., writing articles and books on divorce and domestic relations problems, or doing his homework for an upcoming legal case.

BUT EARLIER in the evening, Winter has found time for his own wife and children. Here, with the youngsters tucked away in bed, he and wife Linda relax, sometimes discussing family matters, sometimes enjoying music together. (Photos by Don Aron)

The Happily-Married Expert On Divorce

Writer-Lawyer Is Specialist In Domestic Relation Field

A Tiburon man, who both by religious tradition and his own sentiments is a devout believer in the family unit, is, paradoxically, one of the leading authorities on the California divorce laws.

Walter T. Winter, sometimes called "Mr. Divorce," practices law in San Francisco and is one of the few attorneys in the country specializing in divorce and domestic relations problems.

His serious demeanor in a courtroom and behind a desk at the office is in sharp contrast to Walter Winter at home, as both husband and father, where he believes the family should engage in activities together.

JUST HOW many divorces he has handled in the 12 years he has been practicing law in California since graduating from the Golden Gate College Law School, Winter can't say.

"I stopped counting after the first thousand," he tells you.

He has written his third book on divorce which is just off the press and in which he is an outspoken critic of the "New California Divorce Laws." That also is the title of the book.

Indeed, the book almost never reached print, as Winter had many disagreements with the publisher, Sheridan Publishing Inc., because the author says, "the publisher thought I was far too critical of the new laws."

IN HIS BOOK, Winter makes no bones about his disappointment "because it was the first change in almost one hundred years and it was not done well."

"More time should have been taken, for what is really needed is an entirely new concept instead of rushing to change existing laws," Winter declares.

The new California divorce laws will be rougher on women because of the equal division of community property requirement; but, Winter says, it also will give women a license "to cheat" because misconduct cannot be brought up in alimony battles as a result of the new "no fault" amendments in divorce complaint.

WINTER, ALMOST a compulsive writer, published his first book, "Divorce and You," in 1963. It was a book designed to help people prepare for divorce.

He also wrote and published "A Manual of California Domestic Relations Procedures" for attorneys, in addition to having authored numerous articles on the subject of divorce.

The nemesis of the expert, today, is constant interruptions from numerous telephone calls by people wanting information, and Walter T. Winter is no exception.

He is continually besieged by telephone concerning divorce laws. Many of the calls are from fellow attorneys.

INDEED, a majority of his clients are referred to Winter by other lawyers.

"Most attorneys don't like divorce work, but I enjoy helping people with their marital problems," Winter explains.

"Many times you can help a couple in trouble resolve the difficulties before the two really decide to go to the divorce court," he declares. "In other cases, differences are so irreconcilable that dissolution of the marriage is the only course for

THE LIGHTS BURN late in the Tiburon study of attorney Walter Winter, who frequently works at his typewriter till 2 a.m., writing articles and books on divorce and domestic relations problems, or doing his homework for an upcoming legal case.

BUT EARLIER in the evening, Winter has found time for his own wife and children. Here, with the youngsters tucked away in bed, he and wife Linda relax, sometimes discussing family matters, sometimes enjoying music together. (Photos by Don Aron)

the happiness and sanity of both parties."

THE MORE divorce cases he handles, the more Walter Winter realizes he does not know the answer to why people get divorced.

"There are as many reasons for people getting divorced as there are divorces," he explains.

What irritates Walter most, however, are the many platitudes and trite phrases used by so-called experts in explaining why marriages both succeed and fail.

Winter's desire to help people, to become involved in their problems, may have been influenced by his family's religious traditions, for the men in the Winter family have been rabbis and cantors dating back to the 15th Century. His father and two brothers are rabbis, and his nephew is currently attending rabbinical school.

BORN IN Germany, Winter and his family escaped from the country in 1939 when he was 8, and Walter grew up in Oakland.

To support himself while attending college, Winter found work as a private detective and it was this investigative work that actually inspired him to study law.

Equally as dedicated as a family man and father as he is as a hard-working attorney, Walter T. Winter's day begins at 7 a.m. He is generally in his San Francisco office by 8:30 a.m., where he may handle as many as four to five cases in the morning when not in court; he seldom returns home before 7 p.m.

AFTER PLAYING with the family German shepherd, Plato, and his two children, Wendy, 8, and David, 5, along with some assorted pets that include a bird and a turtle, until the youngsters' bedtime, Winter will frequently write or catch up on his legal work until 1 or 2 a.m.

While Walter goes about his busy schedule, his wife Linda follows her own many interests and pursuits, in addition to running a home and looking out after two children and the family menagerie.

Her community activities include active participation in the Sunny Hills School, and, until recently, she was a Blue Bird leader.

LINDA WINTER also bowls once a week, plays duplicate bridge and when her husband is not working, the two play party bridge.

Weekends belong exclusively to Winter's family. All are avid cyclists, equestrians, skiers and sailors.

It is not an uncommon sight to see Linda and Walter bicycling along the Tiburon-Belvedere roads with the two children perched on the seats in back of each pedaler.

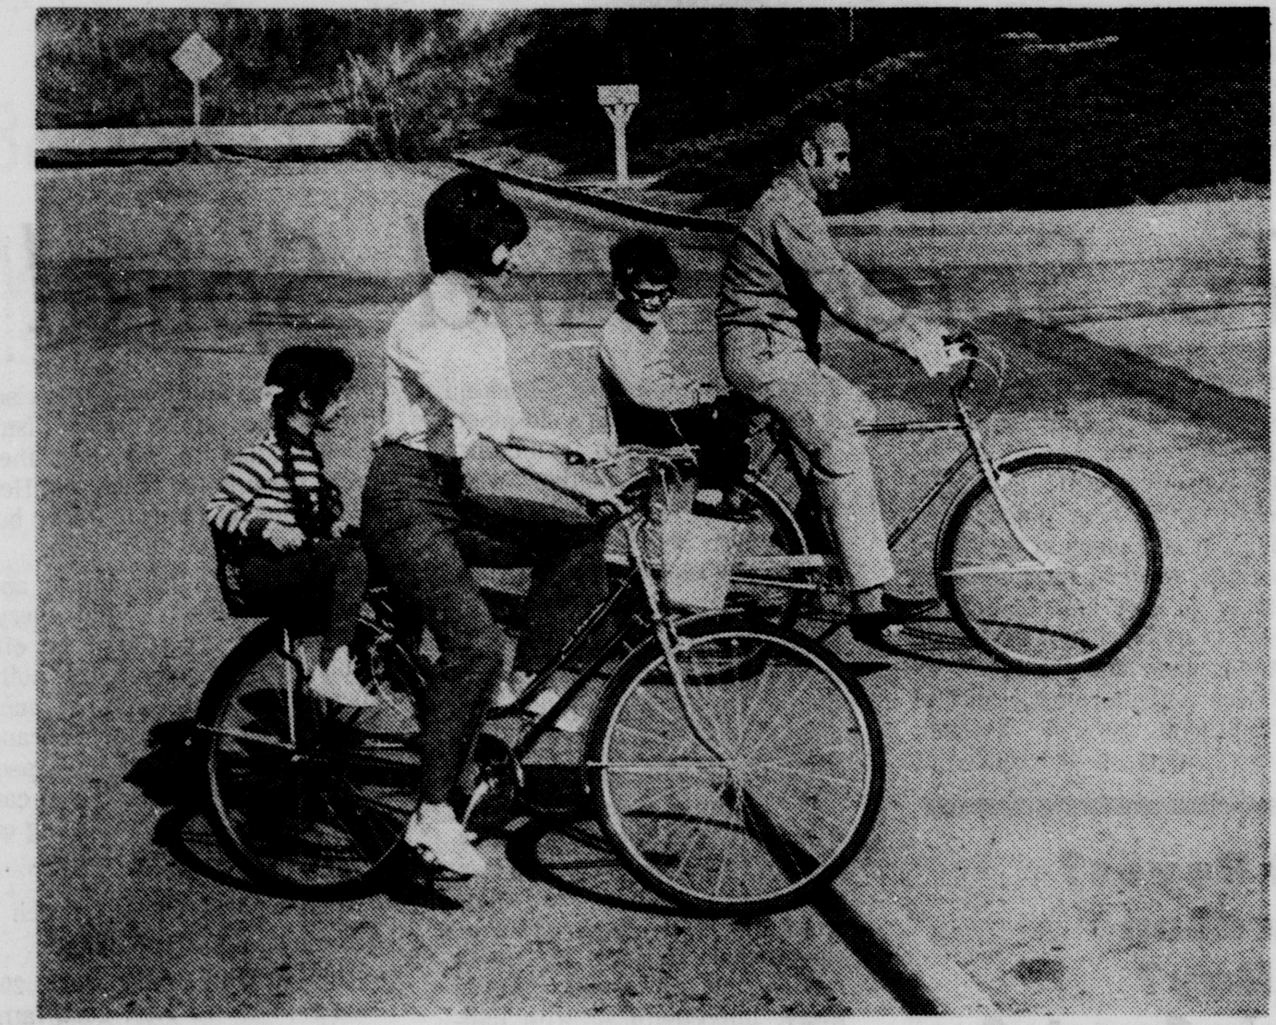
WHEN THE weather's right and the mood strikes, the family boards Walter's 30-foot Rawson sailboat, the Sabrina.

Winter's dream is someday to sail leisurely around the world with his family.

In winter, the family packs off to the snows for skiing, and in the spring and summer, it's off to Inverness and horseback riding along the many trails.

ATTORNEY Walter T. Winter may be "Mr. Divorce" in the courtrooms, but he is very much the family man around his own Tiburon home.

And, who can say if the problems of others only magnify his own enjoyment of his home.



HIS WEEKENDS belong to his family, and so it is a common sight for Tiburonites to see Walter Winter with wife Linda, 8-year-old Wendy and 5-year-old David enjoying themselves on their bicycles, or perhaps on board their 30-foot sailboat.

A family must pay tribute in its own way — expressing devotion and finding comfort to its own satisfaction. Recognizing this, no two Russell & Gooch funeral services are ever alike. Each service is the beautiful, inspiring fulfillment of the family's wishes alone, selected by them to fit their individual specifications.

- Regular service provides all the facilities of our modern mortuary and attentions of an experienced staff.
- Budget service provides selection of only those facilities and aspects of service desired by the family.
- Minimum service . . . an accommodation for those families holding memberships in various burial associations as well as others desiring this type of service.

All details are fully explained in advance so the family has full understanding of the services provided with each funeral and the total cost.

"Can My Husband's New Silk Tie Be Cleaned?"

Your husband will have to take more careful aim at his mouth when wearing these new wide silk ties. Many of them, like the one your husband has, will bleed when in contact with any liquid, water or cleaning solvent.

There is no way to restore the color and design after the color has bled. The only help is preventive. Perhaps the old-fashioned habit of tucking a napkin under the chin when eating will return to fashion along with sideburns, moustaches and these wide, colorful neckties.

There is an old thing about rare wines, gems and clear notes.

You have to know something about boiled potatoes, open-air vegetable racks, broken drums and 20-year-old hats before you can savor them.

So first, take a trip. Pretend that you haven't been there for a while, even if you have a lot.

SAY IT'S A Friday night in the city, and it's cold enough to almost make you trot up Geary Street, past the bars and grocery stores and freezing, stray hippies. And take a few turns and burst onto Broadway, the place where everything is just a little bit more.

More cops, more tourists, more hustlers, gawkers, beepers, squawkers, per square curbstone and billboard.

There's Lawrence Ferlinghetti's City of Lights bookshop competing with some of the more exotic stuff available, decked out in neat plastic coverings. It is a place of mediocre shadings, touched by something akin to an ugly kind of beauty. There is more of less here, top, bottom, back and front and in-between and the most beautiful girl around may be a man. They're lining up like snakes at Finocchio's, but just sneaking a look at Carol Doda's old place. And suddenly you remember that the topless mother is no longer with us, and you skip the smug scowl, politely, because you're no different.

It was in the summer, 1969, at a place called the El Matador, next to Finocchio's, close to Carol's place, across the street from the stark Robin Galaxie, surrounded, in fact, by fleshy fantasy. It is small, tucked away, unpretentious, with half-way decent drinks and fully-clothed barmaids.

Broadway, San Francisco can make you feel any number of ways — ashamed, foolish, hungry, righteous, sick or just like a wet ashtray, but these two can pick you up and make it mellow.

TRUTHFULLY enough, they make you work. You have to be open to a little feeling, not be committed totally to the Rolling Stones, remember a certain amount of joy, be prepared to listen as well as keep your eyes open, be ready to recognize something on the special side.

"I THINK WE both did it because it was sort of expected of us," Bobby says. "It's a thing like you graduate from high school and you go on to college, just like that."

Somewhere in Bobby's senior year at the University of Pacific, a fellow named Ken Fishler was looking for a girl singer for his group and somehow, through a friend, got Bobby's name.

"It was really lucky," he says. "She was the only person in her dorm that night. But it

Part if what came out of that job was the record, which both consider a mixed blessing.

"LET'S JUST say it was very educational," Ken says. "We learned a lot from doing it. We enjoyed it. There were a lot of problems, and people worked on it."

It is a pretty good album, but unless you've seen them perform, it won't help you. They come through, but right behind them seem to be Dimitri Tiomkin's relatives in the production room. Still, some of the charm, some of the bright things, the good songs are there.

Part of the good thing about their particular act is that they seem to dig, know and respect each other. That makes everything else all right. And that's something that is difficult to capture on stereo, to package and bring back through a needle.

BOBBY HAS a certain quality that is at once girlish, mischievous, a little on the prankish side, surprising and quick. But there is nothing flighty there, no Goldie Hawn scatterbrain. She is solid and knows what she wants.

"What she is is a person. The first thing I noticed about her is that she has taste; she is sophisticated, impeccable in manners, graceful and totally feminine. She has a kind of strength that looks very good. Musically, she's unsurpassed in the quality of her voice, how she uses it, in her technical ability. She will and can do anything she sets out to do. She has a very special quality."

That's Ken on Bobby. Now Bobby on Ken or them:

"WE'RE REALLY good friends. We have basically good communication, a relationship that works together. I'm impressed with him personally; he has fantastic technique. He can be straight ahead, business-like, he's most anxious to do something. I've never known a more honest, sincere, intelligent person."

Watch them out from under the fake lights of a set — on the wooded Dominican campus for a picture taking session. They romp a little, delighted with the whole thing, she like the girl coming back to old haunts, he a little bemused, wry. Like a set, they're pretty real.

It's the kind of thing that works even in way-out, out-of-the-way, or right-at-home places. They can make you feel good, or just feel.

Which is what their business is all about. Or should be.

Marin Continues A Ritual From Antiquity

The gathering of the greens is a holiday custom dating back into antiquity.

Members of the Decorations Guild of the Marin Art and Garden Center have been going through that yuletime ritual for only some 15 years. But it is a well established tradition with the women as yearly they collect the materials that will go into the decorative pieces to be offered for purchase at their annual Christmas Greens Sale at the art and garden center in Ross.

The 1969 sale will be held next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

THIS YEAR the guild women have had the assistance in the gathering and the sorting of the greens from another group taking part in that ritual for the first time — the members of the Garden Society of Marin, one of the founder groups at the art and garden center.

Together, the guild and society memberships were carrying out a tradition that began in primitive times, but not for decorative purposes as it is practiced now. Then, to early man, the vitality he saw in the evergreen leaf in winter time suggested some strange power — as if that leaf somehow contained some magic from the sun.

Also some evergreens, such as holly, ivy and mistletoe, which bear recognizable fruit only in the winter suggested to the primitive peoples a triumph of fertility over adverse elements.

TO THESE ancients, then, the evergreen loomed as a symbol of some magic hope for a fruitful year to come.

Evergreen garlands were so closely connected with pagan rites that they were forbidden in early Christian church celebrations.

IN 575, Bishop Martin Bracae condemned their use as "another dangerous Calend custom." It wasn't until the 16th Century that Christians began decorating their houses. After that, it became the rage and Thomas Tusser, a sort of "Dear Abby" poet of his day, counseled the ladies of England to:

"Get ivy and hull, woman, deck up thine house."

By "hull," he was talking about what we call "holly." Our word is a derivation of its many early names, including holin, holver, hollin, holm and hull.

OLD TUSSER, who was a veritable storehouse of homey commands and bits of wisdom, had something to say about almost everything. He had such a gift for turning a bit of verse that many of his rhyming wisdoms are still in use today. It was he who first commanded:

"At Christmas, play and make good cheer
For Christmas comes but once a year."

On a more sober note he was the first to observe:

"The stone that is rolling can gather no moss
For master and servant, oft changing is loss."

HOWEVER, long before Mr. Tusser appeared on the couplet circuit, "holly" or "hull" had made its mark on the world. The Druids loved it. They felt it attested to the fact that the sun never deserted them.

Later came the legend that Christ's crown of thorns was made of holly leaves and thus

FOR THE 1969 Christmas Greens Sale of the Decorations Guild, to be held next weekend at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross, the men of the Garden Society of Marin took over part of the task of pruning and gathering the greens which were then trucked to the center. At work on a pruning jaunt are Alfred H. Dewees, left, and Walter Andersen, both of San Anselmo. Garden society members suggest that home owners delay pruning their evergreens until the holiday season so that they can then use the trimmings in their holiday decor. Evergreens Lend Yule Spirit To Marin Homes came our popular custom of fashioning it into wreaths. Whether that is true or not, its thorns, together with the redness of its berries, has tended to associate it with the Christ story.

In Denmark, it is known as "Kristdorn" or "Christ Thorn."

IN SOME early legends holly was known as a man's plant, while ivy, the clinger, was the plant of the woman. The two were represented in early carols in a kind of sex battle for mastery of the house.

"Holver and Heivy make a grete party" was a saying of the day.

One old Roman custom included decking the house with branches for the Kalendae of January — a pre-Christian feast day. The same was done in Northern Europe, but fir was used almost exclusively.

In Greek Chios, an old and ancient custom was to take around a pole wreathed with myrtle, olive and orange leaves, while the Circassians carried a young pear tree into their houses, topped by a cheese and covered with candles. From this, it was an easy step to the Christmas tree of the Anglo-Saxon world.

THE TREE, as we know it, is said to have started when Martin Luther, so moved by the brightness of the stars on a winter's night, brought a tree inside and set candles on it, in an effort to re-create the scene. That's a pleasant tale, but not substantiated.

The hard record discloses the first tree, as we know it, showed up in homes in Strasbourg in Alsace in 1605. The custom is not even recorded in England until the end of the 18th Century when the Prince Consort Albert, originally from Germany, introduced it into the royal family of Queen Victoria.

Historians point out that the custom of decorating it was easily enough explained. Most of the early day trees were fir, whose cones were on the dull looking side. Once in the house it was easy to substitute a more colorful decoration — at first paper flowers, gilded nuts and apples. Later came the colored balls and tinsel.

ANOTHER favorite Christmas green is mistletoe whose curious history is both as a killer and a curer. The Druids called it an "all heal." Country tradition has since fed it to sick cattle and also used it as human medicine. Yet, in the old Norse sun god myth, its wood was used to make the dart Loki threw to kill the beautiful god, Balder.

A similar inheritance has passed into Christian lore with the belief that the Cross was made from mistletoe wood, after which the plant shrank with shame to its present size. As such, it was generally banned from Christmas church decorations.

However, its "kissing" myth has made it popular for home and party use. In New York, one famous store sold green mink mistletoe at an exhorbitant price, advertising it "for the man who has nothing — but money!"

AN INTERESTING bit of natural history is the fact that the missel thrush, who some say the plant was named after, runs a mortal race with its favorite food. The bird gorges on the berries and those he misses are collected for use in bird lime.

Nicholas Culpepper, an English writer on astrology and medicine in the early 1600s, recommended it in its powdered form as a cure for the "fallin sickness" (epilepsy). Modern pharmacology warns that the berries are purgative, emetic and even ecbolic, and in large doses, the whole plant is a cardiac depressant.

Even so, mistletoe is the holiday favorite for use in "kissing balls" or "kissing bunches," an ornament many writers feel was actually the real forerunner of the Christmas tree.

IN EARLY days, the "kissing ball" consisted of a circlet or cage of mistletoe hoops, studded with candles and embellished with apples. It hung from the ceiling and often served as a simplified manger scene. Like the Christmas tree, but less accessible to prying small fry fingers, it often served as a safe place to hide small gifts.

The use of clusters of this parasitic plant in today's kissing balls or kissing bunches is easily traceable to the Druids' winter solstice rites. It was said that only the mistletoe that grew on the sacred oak could be used for sacrificial ceremonies. When it was gathered it was divided into small portions for distribution on the first day of the new year, and to be hung over the entrances of houses to please the gods and to offer them shelter.

The "kissing" under it, was actually an innocent and very tame survival from the Saturnalia of the ancients, a celebration billed as a really "swinging happening" at it mildest, and a good deal more at its peak.

ROSEMARY was the most prized of Christmas decorative greens until around the mid-19th Century. Then it lost out to the brightly decorated Christmas tree. Until then, it was used for its scent and its purple prettiness as well as for its sentiment that "rosemary is for remembrance."

It was also the traditional flavoring for the holiday festive boar's head.

Another green no longer used is the Rose of Jericho, whose dried leaves and flowers unfurled when moistened. These were said to symbolize the opening and closing of the womb of Mary.

Today, ivy, laurel, yew and bay are no longer as popular for housegreens as they were once. Writers say this is because each had connotations of either Bacchus, poison or death. As holly became more available, they fell into disfavor.

AS FOR holly, Culpepper felt it was a good deal more than just a decorative green with both pagan and Christian heritage. He recommended holly tea as a cure for measles and whooping cough. The berries, he said, alleviated rheumatism, gout and asthma. He reported that the ripened berries were a "purge for gross and clammy phlegm."

Meanwhile, the Argentinians tango along quite happily on the high caffeine content of mate tea — made from holly leaves.

At this year's Christmas Greens sale at the Marin Art and Garden Center visitors will find wreaths, swags, garlands and "take home" bundles, made from a long list of evergreens that grow here in Marin County, including fir, pine, cedar, deodar, holly, cypress, juniper, huckleberry, boxwood, redwood, cryptomeria and arborvitae. And, yes, the mistletoe.

They will also find other decorations — yule logs, kissing balls, sugar plum tree items, as well as table bouquets, plaques and many kinds of ornaments.

SO WHETHER we follow Mr. Tusser's command: "Get ivy and hull, woman, deck up thine house."

Or heed later rhymes promising:

"With holly and ivy
So green and gay
We deck up our house
As fresh as the day."

Or even prefer a more modern message:

"Deck them halls."

The message transcends time and age. It can be either: "At Christmas, play and make good cheer," or: "Have a real cool Yule, Man."

ANTIQUE PIECES from the San Rafael home of Mrs. Richard Murphy fit the mood of the 1969 Greens Sale theme of "A Country Christmas" as Mrs. Robert J. Barecut, left, and Mrs. Harold Bickerdike work on their decorations.

The Travel Pages

Japan's Expo '70 Is Right On Schedule

All Will Be Ready For The March 15 Grand Opening Date

A little more than a year ago, the Senri Hills outside Osaka, Japan, were still covered with bamboo trees and rice pattys. The surrounding countryside reflected the peaceful organized landscape so typical of the country.

Today, just three months before its scheduled grand opening, the area has been turned into a gigantic 815-acre fantasy land which will be Expo '70.

Expo '70 will be the largest world exposition ever staged, and the first in Asia, with some 77 countries plus a host of cities, states and international organizations showing exhibits in some of the most extravagant pavilions ever seen.

The construction of this Japanese exposition is currently right on schedule. By January, the exteriors of over 75 per cent of the buildings will be complete, and on opening day, March 15, 1970, the interiors will be ready to begin accepting the first of an expected 50 million visitors.

THE FAIR will run for six months, closing on Sept. 13, 1970.

The theme of the fair, "Progress and Harmony for Mankind," already has been put into action. A visitor to the site has to be impressed with the orderly fashion in which the hundreds of Japanese workers go about bringing this spectacle to life.

The roadways are clear and clean. Even now, tourists by the bus load arrive daily to view the progress and stretch their imaginations to visualize the finished products.

AS IN PAST fairs, many of the pavilions will be a mass of surealistic superstructure. Some resemble larger than life tinker toy arrangements, and erector sets, while others are being draped and covered with huge plastic sheets, giving a weird and exciting futuristic look.

The Fiji Islands Pavilion resembles an enormous orange caterpillar.

Dominating the southern area is the USSR Pavilion which looks like a vanilla Dairy Queen with the center scooped out. On the top is a red hammer and sickle.

The USA Pavilion, in contrast, is almost flush to the ground. The entire exhibit will be below ground under a plastic waffle-patterned bubble, filled with compressed air.

IN PREPARATION for Expo '70, the Japanese government sent a number of observers to Montreal to glean ideas and improve upon concepts to insure their own fair's success. As a result, the entire fairgrounds are surrounded by 2.7 miles of monorail tracks. Offered free of charge to all visitors, the monorail will complete the entire circle with seven stops in just 15 minutes.

Perhaps the most exciting innovation and one which will be most appreciated by visitors is the moving sidewalk. Serving six stations throughout the fair, the moving sidewalk is 2.3 miles in length and is completely enclosed in an oversized air conditioned glass tube.

The average person walks about three miles an hour and the sidewalk will move at a comfortable one mile per hour. Capable of carrying a total of 8,750 persons in any given hour, the riders will not only save shoe leather and leg muscles, but will have a continuing view of the fair while in transit. This also is free.

THE FAIR site is divided into two main areas.

The largest and central one has broad avenues lined with pavillions and includes a 64-acre Japanese garden. The smaller area to the north, called "Expoland," is devoted to fun.

The main attraction here is the "Daidarasaurus." This jet coaster ride whisks visitors all around 41 acres of the Expoland. It is actually five rides which operate at different speeds so they can be enjoyed by all ages.

Eating will present no problem, unless it is choosing which of the 145 restaurants you will visit. A leisurely lunch may also be enjoyed in one of the Gondola snackbars. Visitors may take their lunch, step into one of these Gondolas and dine during a 20-minute ride through the air up and over the 102-foot tall tower, giving them a fantastic view of the fair below.

SPEAKING OF towers, the main observation tower, rising 396 feet into the sky, will afford visitors an unrivaled view of the fair, surrounding countryside and the Kita Settsu Mountains which rim the valley.

In order to avoid a housing situation similar to Montreal, the Japanese embarked on a huge hotel building program.

On opening day, there should be some 11,000 Western style rooms with 18,000 beds within a 10-mile radius of Osaka. Individual reservations, even at this date, are impossible to come by. All the space has been booked by wholesalers who are offering them to their clients through travel agents.

For the adventuresome, however, another 13,000 rooms in Japanese style inns within an hour of the site have been registered with the government as tourist hotels. In addition, there are about 500 rooms in nearby homes which have been made available. English is spoken in each of these homes.

OF THE EXPECTED one-half million visitors predicted by fair officials, 550,000 are expected to come from the United States, with another 50,000 coming from Canada. According to American Express Co., which is the exclusive general sales agent for admission tickets in the United States, Canada and Mexico, their bookings for tours to Expo '70 are ahead of projections, indicating a great interest in the fair.

Tickets to the fair are available prior to the opening at a discounted rate of $2 for adults and $1 for children.

Transportation to the fair from Osaka will be by two rapid transit systems. Travel time is about 20 minutes and will cost about 35 cents. The trains leave from stations in downtown Osaka and go directly to the fair.

FOR THOSE driving, a new super highway from Osaka is nearing completion and will connect directly with the expressway to Tokyo. Parking facilities for 21,500 cars next to the site will give easy access.

For those staying in Tokyo, the famous Bullet Train runs down and back twice a day. This ultra-modern train, which reaches speeds of 150 miles per hour, gives the visitor a fine picture of the Japanese countryside as well as comfort and efficiency unrivaled on any train in the United States.

The old Imperial City of Kyoto and the Deer Park at Nara abound with temples and should not be missed. It is here that the Buddhist and Shinto shrines proclaim to the world the very essence of Oriental culture. Both are within easy traveling distance from Osaka.

The Bullet Train also stops in Kyoto and day tours can be easily planned.

'Bed And Breakfast' In Britain

Most overseas-bound vacationers book accommodations in hotels as the simple way to assure themselves of rooms.

It takes a little inside know-how to discover other ways of doing things. Take Britain, for example:

In every town and village, and on the outskirts of big cities, scores of discreetly curtained windows in private homes carry the sign "Bed & Breakfast."

For a cost of around $2.40 you will be given a clean, comfortable bedroom for the night, and a full English breakfast the next day.

Elderly widows, or couples whose children have grown and flown, make an extra bob or two this way.

Bookings rarely are necessary. On a driving tour of Britain you can stop off at a town at 5 p.m. and in a short time find satisfactory lodgings for the night.

A tip: if you need help in finding a good "B & B," ask a policeman. His knowledge will almost certainly point you toward the best choice.

NOTES TO TRAVEL BY

Alpine County's Bear Valley resort is offering new three-day ($35 a person), five-day ($59) and seven-day ($83) packages for skiers that include accommodations in the Mega Bear-Tamarack Lodge, daily breakfast and lift tickets. . . . Danish restaurants and hotels no longer add tips to their bilis, and instead the gratuities are included in the prices shown on the rate sheets and the menus. . . . North American tourists without visas can now enter and remain in India for 21 days on temporary landing permits issued upon arrival.

P&O Lines' passenger ships will call at San Francisco a total of 29 times next year, as compared to 17 calls in 1969. . . . Holland-America Line and German Atlantic Line have combined their trans-Atlantic schedules for 1970 and will offer a total fo 15 such sailings. . . . Canadian Pacific Airlines will initiate at Toronto Airport on Jan. 1 its new system by which passengers arriving and staying in C.P.-owned hotels will be able to go directly to their rooms without personally handling their baggage.

Nearly 37,000 tourists visited Singapore last August, a 17 per cent increase over August, 1968, according to latest statistics. Most of the tourists were from the United States, Britain, Australia, Indonesia, Malaysia, Japan and India. More than 90 per cent came by air.

A Eulogy To A First Family

THE BYRDS OF VIRGINIA: An American Dynasty, 1670 to the Present, by Alden Hatch; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 535 pages, $10. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Dynasties are strikingly rare in American history.

Notable individuals we've had aplenty, but great families spawning leaders in diverse fields over many generations are very hard to identify in our short history. Adams, Lowell, Cabot, Roosevelt come to mind. Alden Hatch suggests that "The Byrds of Virginia," completing their third century in the "Old Dominion," deserve to be included in the select circle of American dynasties.

Although the Byrds have been leading citizens of Virginia over most of the time since the first William arrived from England in 1670, their greatest prominence has been achieved at the extremes of the three-century span.

Before the Revolution they were important participants in the political, economic and social oligarchy that shaped and ran the colony of Virginia. Then a combination of loyalty and an understandable inability to anticipate the colossal capacity of England for colonial blundering led them to support the Tory cause.

After this unfortunate choice of allegiance, 150 years passed before an explorer and a politician once again made the Byrd name one to be reckoned with on the American scene.

The first three Williams illustrate the phenomenon described in the cliche "from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves in three generations."

The first American Byrd was an English goldsmith who aspired to a higher station in life. His own acumen and ability, combined with the help of an influential and generous uncle, enabled him to jump from artisan in England to membership in the colonial aristocracy. His son built handsomely on this excellent foundation.

The second William became a huge landowner and political power and was an extremely learned man for his time. He is, incidentally, the only member of the clan whom Hatch makes at all human. Perhaps this is because this worthy kept a secret diary, since published, which catalogs his follies as well as his triumphs. William II fought with his first wife, seduced his servant girls and hated his political opponents with a gusto that even Hatch's pollyannaish tendencies do not camouflage.

His son, pampered in a houseful of women, was of weak character and managed to lose both land and position through self-indulgence, poor investments and loyalty to the Crown past the time of prudence.

The later Byrds, particularly the senator, are more eulogized than presented as interesting and accomplished human beings. Adm. Richard E. Byrd's tenacity in pursuit of the Poles is described, but we are always in the presence of the hero and never of the man. Harry Flood Byrd, who controlled Virginia politics as his personal fief for over 30 years, might as well have done it with mirrors for all of the dynamics of this political tour de force that Hatch exposes to view.

It is no doubt true that Senator Byrd loved his wife and children, cherished his fiscal conservatism and did his economic homework, but political machines are not built and controlled across generations by these admirable acts alone.

Hatch does his subject and his readers a disservice by his surface presentation of men who were not at all superficial.

In sum, this is an uneven book. It is at its best when Hatch is helped by the second William's diary. Without this aid, Hatch tends to present Horatio Alger heroes rather than men of flawed flesh who, along with their real accomplishments, sweat, connive, lose their tempers, think base thoughts and commit base actions on the road to glory.

The Jekyll And Hyde Of The Vegetables

THE WHITE POPPY by J. M. Scott; Funk & Wagnalls, 205 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Shirley Graves.

The "white poppy" is, of course, the opium flower, which the author calls the Jekyll and Hyde of the vegetable world. Compounds manufactured from it have been used in murder and suicide and to lead addicts to degeneration and crime; but at the same time they have also been used by physicians to relieve pain and suffering.

J. M. Scott has covered the story of opium completely in a non-technical manner that is surprisingly enjoyable to read. Opium has been around a long time — 6,000 years ago in the Middle East the Sumerians "wrote" about it in their ideograms.

The historical references are remarkably well-documented. The events surrounding the "Great Opium War" of 1839-42 between the English and the Chinese are related mostly through quotations from the writings of those who had been on the scene.

Attention is drawn to the thoughts of well-known writers who often wrote under the influence of opium. The early writings of such men as DeQuincy, Coleridge and others are contrasted with their later works. The author draws the conclusion that at the beginning of their association with the drug they were too happy and stimulated to settle down and write very often, and as the hold grew on them, their minds were so tortured they could write only of their fears.

It is interesting to find that while through the ages opium was often prescribed by medical men and available without restriction, there is no record of widespread addiction among non-Orientals until the latter part of the 19th Century. The author blames scientific progress for this, specifically the hypodermic injection. While a boon to medical treatment, it also appealed to the Occidental tastes as the opium pipe had not.

The spread of addiction alarmed the public and finally led to the international conferences in the early 1900s which culminated in laws, drafted for participating countries to enact, to control the cultivation and distribution of opium and other drugs. That these laws were of questionable success is discussed in the chapter on smuggling.

While this book contains some information as how to prepare poppies, and lists some tested smuggling techniques, J. M. Scott also gives plenty of valid reasons for not taking up with "The White Poppy."

A Look At The Theater Without Any Sacred Cows

THE SEASON, A CANDID LOOK AT BROADWAY by William Goldman; Harcourt, Brace & World, 432 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by James Williams.

Sacred cows do not exist as far as writer William Goldman is concerned. He tells it like it is.

He opens doors, which are normally closed, in his dissection of a theater season on and off Broadway.

His first look is into the late Judy Garland cult, a chapter worth the price of the entire book. He attempts to pinpoint her tragic success and her devoted — mostly from the homosexual world. From this chapter he wanders through the nation's theatrical city, leaving no corner of Broadway unturned. He is not arrogant in his approach nor biting when personalities are concerned.

Of course he throws some pretty good punches. No doubt Clive Barnes, who is on top of the New York Times drama totem pole, winced a few times along with a few scalpers, show angels and stars.

Goldman's credentials for this undertaking are excellent. He has authored such novels as "Soldier in the Rain," and "No Way to Treat a Lady," which were turned into entertaining films.

Goldman should put out another like this every season or so just to keep Broadway on its toes and alive.

A Rum Lot Is Made Yet Rummer

THE WILD, WILD WEST by Peter Lyon; Funk & Wagnalls, 146 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Debunking the ersatz heroes of the Old West has become a rather common game, but Peter Lyon does it amusingly and well in "The Wild, Wild West."

To make the job easy, he has chosen a rum lot of heroes: Joaquin Murietta, Wild Bill Hickok, Jesse James, Wyatt Earp, Bat Masterson, and Billy the Kid. Except for Earp and Masterson, they died with their boots on, as they richly deserved. Wyatt struck oil and made some money out of mining properties, to survive to the age of 80 in relative quiet and prosperity. Bat finished out his career in the relatively respectable role of sportswriter on a New York newspaper.

To make his rum lot rummer, Lyon has added a few notes about two of the Old West's most notorious females: Belle Starr and Calamity Jane.

What television has done with these names has, of course, no resemblance to either fact or folklore. It seems to gall Lyon.

This, plus utter lack of appreciation of the West's favorite form of humor, the tall tale, somewhat spoils an otherwise enjoyable book. And, like most debunkers, Lyon is guilty of doing even less research than the glamorizers he lambastes. He makes up for it, however, by generally clever if occasionally bitter writing.

Redemption Seeking At The Fat Farm

SING, CHOIRS OF ANGELS by George Cuomo; Doubleday, 214 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Suzanne D. Stamler.

Seraphim and Cherabim are teams of fallen and frustrated fatties who seek redemption through purification and transformation at Wonder Week Lodge, a posh fat farm rating high in Ry-Krisp and low in morale.

Edna Bollington, the dowdy wife of the trim manager of Byrne-Walters, a smart custom clothiers for men, is driven to the depths of depravity when her craving for sweets exceeds her yearning to be sleek. At a mock trial held by the Seraphim — the so-called angels of her slenderizing team — the fallen angel in a tragic comic way falls prey to the unfed appetities of long-wed and unloved women.

"Sing, Choirs of Angels" is one of many loosely connected episodes revolving in and out of a clothing store for men, with characters ranging through executive managers, salesmen, clerks, cashiers, buyers, wives, mistresses, daughters and dads.

Each story catches a glimpse of man's eternal quest for redemption either through love, renewed dignity, recaptured youth, birth, artistic creation, death or self-sacrifice.

Author George Cuomo has a talent for lightly touching on heavy truths about ourselves and deftly pokes fun at our foibles in such a way that the reader is carried from a somewhat bland recounting of a hum-drum marriage in "Oceans Apart" where we first meet Edna and Tom Bollington, into subsequent tales of sparkling wit, well controlled sequences, and ironic twists of fate. Characters cleverly emerge, submerge, and merge again and again, always struggling to survive in a fragmented world of loosely connected ties held together by lies, money and status seekers, mechanized routine and martyred souls.

"Sing, Choirs of Angels" may pierce the skin of the paper thin soul who is sensitive enough to be hurt but often too timid to listen. As for the thick-skinned, there's enough here for laughter until we meet the comedian in the episode of the "Sophisticated Lady" who succeeds in cracking the veneer of the cool, the coy and the punster by confronting his audience with an excruciatingly painful silence . . . a state few of us could endure for long.

A Eulogy To A First Family

THE BYRDS OF VIRGINIA: An American Dynasty, 1670 to the Present, by Alden Hatch; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 535 pages, $10. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Dynasties are strikingly rare in American history.

Notable individuals we've had aplenty, but great families spawning leaders in diverse fields over many generations are very hard to identify in our short history. Adams, Lowell, Cabot, Roosevelt come to mind. Alden Hatch suggests that "The Byrds of Virginia," completing their third century in the "Old Dominion," deserve to be included in the select circle of American dynasties.

Although the Byrds have been leading citizens of Virginia over most of the time since the first William arrived from England in 1670, their greatest prominence has been achieved at the extremes of the three-century span.

Before the Revolution they were important participants in the political, economic and social oligarchy that shaped and ran the colony of Virginia. Then a combination of loyalty and an understandable inability to anticipate the colossal capacity of England for colonial blundering led them to support the Tory cause.

After this unfortunate choice of allegiance, 150 years passed before an explorer and a politician once again made the Byrd name one to be reckoned with on the American scene.

The first three Williams illustrate the phenomenon described in the cliche "from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves in three generations."

The first American Byrd was an English goldsmith who aspired to a higher station in life. His own acumen and ability, combined with the help of an influential and generous uncle, enabled him to jump from artisan in England to membership in the colonial aristocracy. His son built handsomely on this excellent foundation.

The second William became a huge landowner and political power and was an extremely learned man for his time. He is, incidentally, the only member of the clan whom Hatch makes at all human. Perhaps this is because this worthy kept a secret diary, since published, which catalogs his follies as well as his triumphs. William II fought with his first wife, seduced his servant girls and hated his political opponents with a gusto that even Hatch's pollyannaish tendencies do not camouflage.

His son, pampered in a houseful of women, was of weak character and managed to lose both land and position through self-indulgence, poor investments and loyalty to the Crown past the time of prudence.

The later Byrds, particularly the senator, are more eulogized than presented as interesting and accomplished human beings. Adm. Richard E. Byrd's tenacity in pursuit of the Poles is described, but we are always in the presence of the hero and never of the man. Harry Flood Byrd, who controlled Virginia politics as his personal fief for over 30 years, might as well have done it with mirrors for all of the dynamics of this political tour de force that Hatch exposes to view.

It is no doubt true that Senator Byrd loved his wife and children, cherished his fiscal conservatism and did his economic homework, but political machines are not built and controlled across generations by these admirable acts alone.

Hatch does his subject and his readers a disservice by his surface presentation of men who were not at all superficial.

SEN. HARRY BYRD
A state as his fief

In sum, this is an uneven book. It is at its best when Hatch is helped by the second William's diary. Without this aid, Hatch tends to present Horatio Alger heroes rather than men of flawed flesh who, along with their real accomplishments, sweat, connive, lose their tempers, think base thoughts and commit base actions on the road to glory.

The Jekyll And Hyde Of The Vegetables

THE WHITE POPPY by J. M. Scott; Funk & Wagnalls, 205 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Shirley Graves.

The "white poppy" is, of course, the opium flower, which the author calls the Jekyll and Hyde of the vegetable world. Compounds manufactured from it have been used in murder and suicide and to lead addicts to degeneration and crime; but at the same time they have also been used by physicians to relieve pain and suffering.

J. M. Scott has covered the story of opium completely in a non-technical manner that is surprisingly enjoyable to read. Opium has been around a long time — 6,000 years ago in the Middle East the Sumerians "wrote" about it in their ideograms.

The historical references are remarkably well-documented. The events surrounding the "Great Opium War" of 1839-42 between the English and the Chinese are related mostly through quotations from the writings of those who had been on the scene.

Attention is drawn to the thoughts of well-known writers who often wrote under the influence of opium. The early writings of such men as DeQuincy, Coleridge and others are contrasted with their later works. The author draws the conclusion that at the beginning of their association with the drug they were too happy and stimulated to settle down and write very often, and as the hold grew on them, their minds were so tortured they could write only of their fears.

It is interesting to find that while through the ages opium was often prescribed by medical men and available without restriction, there is no record of widespread addiction among non-Orientals until the latter part of the 19th Century. The author blames scientific progress for this, specifically the hypodermic injection. While a boon to medical treatment, it also appealed to the Occidental tastes as the opium pipe had not.

The spread of addiction alarmed the public and finally led to the international conferences in the early 1900s which culminated in laws, drafted for participating countries to enact, to control the cultivation and distribution of opium and other drugs. That these laws were of questionable success is discussed in the chapter on smuggling.

While this book contains some information as how to prepare poppies, and lists some tested smuggling techniques, J. M. Scott also gives plenty of valid reasons for not taking up with "The White Poppy."

A Look At The Theater Without Any Sacred Cows

THE SEASON, A CANDID LOOK AT BROADWAY by William Goldman; Harcourt, Brace & World, 432 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by James Williams.

Sacred cows do not exist as far as writer William Goldman is concerned. He tells it like it is.

He opens doors, which are normally closed, in his dissection of a theater season on and off Broadway.

His first look is into the late Judy Garland cult, a chapter worth the price of the entire book. He attempts to pinpoint her tragic success and her devoted — mostly from the homosexual world. From this chapter he wanders through the nation's theatrical city, leaving no corner of Broadway unturned. He is not arrogant in his approach nor biting when personalities are concerned.

Of course he throws some pretty good punches. No doubt Clive Barnes, who is on top of the New York Times drama totem pole, winced a few times along with a few scalpers, show angels and stars.

Ireland's Petite Patriot

BERNADETTE DEVLIN, daughter of a working class family, was in the front ranks of the Northern Ireland struggle for civil rights while still in her teens, and was elected to the British Parliament when only 21. She tells her story and outlines the expectations of a new breed of Irish patriot in her book "The Price of My Soul."

By DON KEOWN

THE PRICE OF MY SOUL by Bernadette Devlin; Alfred A. Knopf, 224 pages, $4.95.

Elected from Northern Ireland to the British Parliament at age 21, the youngest M.P since William Pitt, Bernadette Devlin has become the symbol of the civil rights struggle in Ulster.

Yet this petite and outspoken patriot is not entirely pleased by the recognition and adulation accorded her, both in her own land and elsewhere.

Too often, she believes, such support is based upon an empty-headed misunderstanding or lack of information on her true position. She is most generally pictured as a champion of a Roman Catholic minority. But the contest, as she sees it, is not a religious one at all, but rather a class struggle. And she offers herself as an upholder of the working class, both Catholic and Protestant. Her dearest wish is to heal the ugly breach between these two segments of the Irish population so that they can move together against the common foe.

She is a sworn enemy of partition. But she does not seek union with the Irish Free State to the south, simplistically. A condition of any such merger, she says, must be a major social, economic and political overhaul in both the north and south.

"Economically," she writes in her book, "The Price of My Soul," "I believe the South of Ireland is worse off than we are."

Socialism is the solution she espouses for rescuing both sections of Ireland from stagnation. And, she adds, this movement for the economic rights of an underprivileged people must be carried out on an island-wide basis and without regard to religion.

She is bitterly critical of the wealthy Protestants who have not only lorded it over Ulster, but also worked to keep the Protestant and Catholic working classes at each others throats. And of the extremist Ian Paisley she says: "His hatred is not of the Catholic Church; his hatred is of everything on the left, and his love is his own power."

But she can be equally caustic in her comments upon the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church to which she belongs. Terming the leadership "ultra-conservative," she continues: "Among the best traitors Ireland has ever had, Mother Church ranks at the very top, a massive obstacle in the path of equality and freedom. She has been a force for conservatism, not on the basis of preserving Catholic doctrine or preventing the corruption of her children, but simply to ward off threats to her own security and influence."

While admitting that "it will take a long time to achieve anything," she predicts: "In the end . . . it will come to a clash — for at no time have those in authority relinquished their position without a struggle. But when it comes to that, it must be fought not in the Six Counties by Catholics, but in Ireland as a whole by the working class. Only if it's an all-Ireland working-class revolution, are there enough of us to overthrow the powers that be."

These are the kinds of things this young firebrand has been uttering over and over again. Yet, she notes with frustration, her words go largely unheeded, and audiences judge her instead on her appearance, her youth, her sex, on the basis of nationality and outdated, emotional concepts.

Undoubtedly, she is quite correct. For instance, how many who cheered her and made financial contributions to the cause during her recent trip to the United States were even aware of her insistence that socialism is an absolute requisite for the salvation of her country?

Few of these contributors would have responded with that same enthusiasm to similar radical theories voiced by one of our own shaggy-haired revolutionaries.

But underneath the romanticized Joan of Arc myth that has been created around Bernadette Devlin by press and public is a very real and heroic person. She has far more in common with the New Leftist movement, that is international, than she does with the traditional Irish struggle for independence and reunion. Consistently, the older generations have judged these young activists by their appearance and from isolated incidents, on the basis of past concepts, rather than by their words and objectives and within the framework of today's realities.

It is, however, most difficult for even the most muddleheaded to misunderstand Bernadette Devlin any longer, after reading "The Price of My Soul." Nor is it easy to disagree with most of the points she makes, although one wishes she might have paid greater attention to the price Ireland may be called upon to pay in lost and precious tranquility in claiming its share of late 20th Century affluence and prosperity.

Her book is autobiographical. But its main focus is not upon her person but upon the land in which she has lived and its peculiar problems. It is well-written with her ideas advanced with force and spirit. One finishes its pages with the first real appreciation of just how complex is the Irish question. And with the firm belief that in its Bernadette Devlins Ireland may well have hatched a new kind of patriot capable of achievements of which its old rebels only dreamed.

A BLOCKBUSTER in size, "The United States Marine Corps in World War II" (Random House, $17.95) is a mosaic of more than 100 pieces telling in great detail the role played by one of the world's most formidable and most colorful military organizations in the defeat of European Fascism and Japanese militarism.

The editor of this 965-page work is S. E. Smith, ex-newsman and television editor, now a freelance writer specializing in military and naval subjects.

"The United States Marine Corps in World War II" is in the pattern of "The United States Navy in World War II," which Smith edited earlier.

Rather than attempt to tell this huge story himself by re-writing the sources, Smith has chosen from among those sources, edited that material, and then reprinted the best of it verbatim. His contributors include men who took part in the action described and discussed, as well as analysts, historians and other after-the-fact experts.The range is from Gen. of the Army Douglas MacArthur to Marine Corps sergeants and privates. From John Hersey to Col. Gregory (Papa) Boyington. From Hanson Baldwin to Ernie Pyle.

For the average layman, it tells a great deal more about the men they call "the leathernecks" than they most probably will be able to digest. But for military buffs, for students of World War II and, no doubt, for ex-Marines, it will be a feast of information, covering as it does actions large and small, and working in a surprising amount of insight into the very human side of these celebrated fighting men.

"HOME & Garden Calendar 1970" from Hearthside Press Inc., 381 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y., 10016, also qualifies as an appointment pad and as a book as well.

It provides a page for each week of the year, with provision for engagement memoranda morning, afternoon and evening of each day. There's a Christmas card register, space for additional notes, and a listing of 1970 and 1971 holidays as well as other important dates.

But what will catch the eyes of gardeners are the illustrations on the 52 pages facing the weekly calendar pages. Each bears a photograph of an award-winning floral arrangement with a brief description of the materials and how they were assembled. Some are shown in color. And it serves splendidly as a source of ideas and inspiration for other flower arrangers.

No price was listed on the review copy of the compact spiral-bound book-calendar which would make a nice gift for any flower-lover.

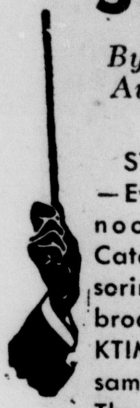
HI-FI STEREO

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer



STEREO BROADCAST — Every Sunday afternoon from 2 to 3, Catania Sound is sponsoring a one hour stereo broadcast over station KTIM FM, and at the same time on KTIM AM. The program is "KEYBOARD IMMORTALS PLAY AGAIN." We are bringing you this musical adventure in cooperation with Sony Superscope.

Keyboard Immortals is a unique listening experience. It allows you to hear piano performances as if the artists themselves were sitting at the piano. In 1904, Edwin Welte, a 20-year-old scientist demonstrated a piano music reproduction mechanism that was far ahead of its time. He created an electrified piano using mercury under each key and a carbon plunger connected to each key that would dip into the mercury to make electrical contact. The circuit measured both duration and dynamics. Welte's electrified piano picked up the pianist's exact interpretation. The electrical impulses were recorded on a seismograph-like instrument, with an inking device for each key and pedal, that would trace the performance onto a paper roll mounted onto a slowly-revolving drum. After the performance, the ink tracings were punched out by hand, thus capturing forever the performances of the great pianists of that time.

To play back these rolls, Welte invented a robot piano player. This is a huge wood box with 80 fingers and two feet for the pedals. He called it a vorsetzer. The vorsetzer sits in front of the piano and its wooden fingers, each the length of a man's finger and felt-tipped, play the piano as if the original pianist himself were sitting there. Thus, this time machine has recorded for all time outstanding piano performances from some of the world's greatest artists.

Mr. Joseph S. Tushinsky, President of Sony Superscope, created "Keyboard Immortals." In 1960 after a long search, Mr. Tushinsky located a vorsetzer. Although it was quite battered, technicians after much work were able to rebuild the time machine. Now at Mr. Tushinsky's home it sits in front of a Bosendorfer Imperial Concert Grand Piano. Mr. Tushinsky, a professional musician himself, made stereo tape recordings of these fabous works using Sony microphones and tape recorders. You can hear them every Sunday from 2 to 3 in the afternoon. Please let us know if you like our program. Tape it off the air and keep it.

Especially For Women

By MAXINE KEOWN

Some new books of special interest to women:

"A FEAST OF FLOWERS" (Funk & Wagnalls, $6.95) by Francesca Tillona and Cynthia Strowbridge is a compilation of recipes with flowers among the ingredients — swordfish steak stuffed with rose or violet petals, marigold rice pudding, violet-periwinkle salad, daylilies Oriental-style, etc. Most of the recipes date back into times when flowers were more commonly used in cookery, but the co-editors have attempted to bring them up to date. There is also some brief discussion of the roles of flowers in medicine and cosmetics. The book will probably be more read than used, but flower gardeners with the non-spray approach may well be tempted to try a number of the suggested delicacies. Anyway, it is fun as a curiosity piece.

"METHODS & MANNERS OF COOKING" (Funk & Wagnalls, $7.95) by Bruce Axler, former editor of The Chef, is not a cookbook in the usual sense of collected recipes, but rather a cooking book in that it discusses techniques and procedures for the kitchen. Braising, for instance, is the subject of a chapter. So are stewing, baking, thickening, broiling, seasoning, etc. Axler then takes up specific foods — gravies, puddings, sweet sauces, beef, fish, etc. — discusses their special qualities at length, and goes into the specifics of their preparation. This is an especially useful book for the beginning cook — one that will help her over those problem spots where the regular cookbooks are to skimpy on details or instructions.

"THE WALDORF ASTORIA COOKBOOK" (Bobbs-Merrill, $12.50) by Ted James and Rosalind Cole is exactly what the title implies. The two authors have worked closely with Eugene R. Scanlon, director of food and beverage operations for the Waldorf-Astoria, in assembling the recipes for some of the dishes for which the New York hotel has long been famous. They tend to be on the gourmet side. Yet they promise to be well worth the special effort involved. And since hotel cooking puts a premium on efficiency, there are a number of dishes with a gourmet flair that are nevertheless quite simple to prepare. Along with a cookbook, you also get a brief history of the Waldorf-Astoria. Persons who have enjoyed a stay or stays there will be particularly appreciative of the book, finding in it, as they will, their favorite specialties of the house.

"THE LUSCHER COLOR TEST" (Random House, $6.95) is a translation from Dr. Max Luscher's German into English by Ian Scott of a book setting forth the fundamentals of color psychology, a somewhat controversial theory more in use professionally in Europe than in America. "It is not a parlor game," the jacket advises emphatically. Yet you can bet it will be used as such by many. With the book you get the color cards to be used in carrying out the intricate procedure developed by the Swiss psychologist in probing the personality. It is a fascinating concept, and, apparently, one with considerable professional acceptance.

"ASTROLOGY FOR ADULTS" (Holt, Rinehart, $7.95) by Joan Quigley, on the other hand, is quite another matter. Few, if any, psychiatrists or psychologists put any stock in astrology. Yet it is a belief that has persisted through centuries, periodically rising to new peaks of interest. Seemingly, we are riding one of those crests now, with astrology very much an "in" thing. Miss Quigley, a San Franciscan, learned her astrology, we are told, "from an elderly Scots lady." And her book purports to instruct you in how to develop and interpret your own horoscope. This one is strictly for believers, but apparently they are legion in numbers. Certainly, Miss Quigley approaches her subject with utmost seriousness.

"THE QUICK & EASY ELECTRIC SKILLET COOKBOOK" (Hawthorn, $5.95) by Ceil Dyer is a first-rate cooking manual that points up the unsuspected versatility of this particular method of cooking. From your electric skillet can come far more than bacon and eggs — dishes as varied as corncakes with blueberry syrup to Jamaican banana fritters and rum puffs with rum ice cream sauce. Mrs. Dyer claims the electric skillet "is the first really new way to cook since the old wood stove," perhaps a bit of an overstatement. But certainly her book is a big selling point for the electric skillet, with its growing popularity.

"BEAUTY AND HEALTH THE SCANDINAVIAN WAY" (Hawthorn, $6.95) is by Gunilla Knutson and Bill Gale, and if you don't recognize Miss Knutson's name, you'll have no difficulty placing the face which is on the book cover. She's the blonde temptress of the "Take it off, take it all off" Noxema television commercials. A teacher of gymnastics in new native Sweden and a representative of that country in the Miss Universe contest, she outlines Scandinavian principles in exercise, diet, grooming and health habits. It is a good book, based upon sound and proven practices of peoples long known for their robust good health. And Miss Knutson herself makes a most fetching model for the illustrations.

Linda Clark is firmly established as one of the favorite writers of the health food and exercise crowd. Her newest book, "SECRETS OF HEALTH AND BEAUTY" (Devin-Adair, $5.95), is largely a restatement of her earlier "Stay Young Longer" and "Get Well Naturally," directed particularly toward the women. The emphasis is upon "natural" materials and techniques with nutrition in the forefront. And if many experts disagree with or minimize her teachings, it remains a fact that she commands a large and loyal following of apparently well-satisfied readers and students. Linda Clark fans will know what to expect. The message is unchanged.

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

There is an abundance of books designed to acquaint children with what other lands and their peoples are like. There are far fewer aimed at illuminating life in differing sections of our own country.

McGraw-Hill has set out to fill that void with a new Our Living Neighborhoods Series.

Four books tell about four American children, their interests, activities and adventures in their own neighborhoods.

There are "Sam's Country" by Frances Priddy, illustrations by Taylor Oughton, set in a small Minnesota town that "smells good . . . of long grass and growing things"; there is "Casey's Cove" by Michael Mason and John Hanna, about a lad in a New England seacoast village who thinks of the ocean as a friend but knows it has its dangerous side; there is "Sandra's View" by Barbara Rinkoff and Ethel Gold, telling of a small apartment-dweller in suburban Riverdale, N.Y.; and "Carlito's World" by Veronica Nash and David K. Stone, set in a block of teeming Spanish Harlem.

All the books are attractively illustrated and published with a soil resistant, washable and durable binding. All have been classroom tested with beginning second or third level readers. And all offer authentic, down-to-earth, yet interesting insights into one particular way-of-life among America's rich diversity.

The series is off to a splendid start.

Some other new books for children:

"Who Will Comfort Toffle?" is a charming story for the young readers, written by Tove Jansson, printed in Great Britain and published by Henry Z. Walck ($14). It is full of Scandinavian creatures of the woods and seashore. In whimsical verse and charming illustration the sad Toffle and his companions tell a sweet story. Perhaps the lonely Toffle can forget his own troubles when he feels compelled to help another creature.

"Apricot ABC," written by Miska Miles, illustrated by Peter Parnall, (Atlantic Monthly Press, $4.95) starts with "A for apricot" but is more than just another alphabet book. The life of a meadow, the tiny creatures, the plant and animal life provide a simple story of their own — including a proper villain, a fat monster of a clucking hen who finds the apricot a delicious meal. The illustrations are outstanding and complement the text, which is delightful.

"The Dirt Book" by Eva Knox Evans is an everything book that should fascinate and inform young readers (10-14). Published by Little Brown and Co., ($3.75) and illustrated by Robert Quakenbush, it is a fund of information on dirt and the many reasons why dirt is so important to us. It tells where dirt came from, how it was formed, the kinds of dirt and what each kind does for people. Included are simple experiments that should intrigue young scientists.

STEREO BROADCAST — Every Sunday afternoon from 2 to 3, Catania Sound is sponsoring a one hour stereo broadcast over station KTIM FM, and at the same time on KTIM AM. The program is "KEYBOARD IMMORTALS PLAY AGAIN." We are bringing you this musical adventure in cooperation with Sony Superscope.

Keyboard Immortals is a unique listening experience. It allows you to hear piano performances as if the artists themselves were sitting at the piano. In 1904, Edwin Welte, a 20-year-old scientist demonstrated a piano music reproduction mechanism that was far ahead of its time. He created an electrified piano using mercury under each key and a carbon plunger connected to each key that would dip into the mercury to make electrical contact. The circuit measured both duration and dynamics. Welte's electrified piano picked up the pianist's exact interpretation. The electrical impulses were recorded on a seismograph-like instrument, with an inking device for each key and pedal, that would trace the performance onto a paper roll mounted onto a slowly-revolving drum. After the performance, the ink tracings were punched out by hand, thus capturing forever the performances of the great pianists of that time.

To play back these rolls, Welte invented a robot piano player. This is a huge wood box with 80 fingers and two feet for the pedals. He called it a vorsetzer. The vorsetzer sits in front of the piano and its wooden fingers, each the length of a man's finger and felt-tipped, play the piano as if the original pianist himself were sitting there. Thus, this time machine has recorded for all time outstanding piano performances from some of the world's greatest artists.

Mr. Joseph S. Tushinsky, President of Sony Superscope, created "Keyboard Immortals." In 1960 after a long search, Mr. Tushinsky located a vorsetzer. Although it was quite battered, technicians after much work were able to rebuild the time machine. Now at Mr. Tushinsky's home it sits in front of a Bosendorfer Imperial Concert Grand Piano. Mr. Tushinsky, a professional musician himself, made stereo tape recordings of these fabous works using Sony microphones and tape recorders. You can hear them every Sunday from 2 to 3 in the afternoon. Please let us know if you like our program. Tape it off the air and keep it.

JANIS JOPLIN
She's as electrifying as ever

The Stereo Scene With Sunier

By JOHN SUNIER

Herewith my choices of the cream of the rock crop in recent weeks:

THE BEATLES "ABBEY ROAD" — Apple SO-383:

The boys have done it again. A warm feeling of wit and humanity exudes from the Beatles' latest LP. The foursome have never really lost the good-natured mood which others such as Bob Dylan have recently embraced.

In common with Dylan, they are also charging an additional dollar for this album, which has incensed many of their fans. However, the good feeling of such tracks as "Here Comes the Sun," and "Golden Slumbers," and the groovy changes of the major tune "Because" dissipate any annoyance over opportunist record companies.

Though no printed lyrics are included this time, the words are very clearly heard throughout, and some of them are real mind-bogglers.

JANIS JOPLIN — "I GOT DEM OL' KOSMIC BLUES AGAIN MAMA!" — Columbia KCS-9913:

The long-awaited new Janis LP is out!

Side 2, with "To Love Somebody," and a wild version of the standard "Little Girl Blue" in addition to the title tune, finds rock's top gal vocalist in the best form she's ever evidenced on records. From sexy whisper-breathing to 100-decibel tonsil-terrorizing, Janis is electrifying as ever.

Though her old guitarist, Sam Andrew, is featured in the new group backing her, the musical level of the group is shockingly low. But Janis is the thing, and she makes it easy to tune out the backing.

CROSBY, STILLS & NASH — Atlantic SD-8229:

A real gem of an album with everything going for it! The vocal lines, meaning and blend, is uppermost here. While "Marrakesh Express" has been the big hit, the 10 tunes all feature lyrics of the highest level. "Long Time Gone" strikes me as the best recent protest-type song. Printed lyrics are included for poring over the often wildly-surreal word-pictures of the three composer-performers.

WEST — "BRIDGES" — Epic BN 26433:

West is a soft-spoken, countrified, jazz-tinged rock sextet of great skill and good taste. They are next to impossible to describe, except that I know I dig them. My two favorites on the album were "Funeral on the Beach," and the lovely "Looking Back Johanna." There are no notes on the very individual-sounding group, but at least one of the members is an occasional Marinite.

2 Schools Of Thought On Painting Ceilings

There are strong advocates and equally strong opponents of the method of painting a ceiling while standing on the floor.

Those who favor it say that it is easier, faster and safer. Those who are against it say that it is more likely to cause dripping and that it is more difficult and more tiring.

PAINTING A ceiling in this manner involves the use of a roller attached to a long handle, permitting the user to stand on the floor during the operation except for the careful work necessary at the points where the walls meet the ceiling.

The first time we tried this method, we weren't too enthusiastic about it, especially when an after-job stiff neck developed. The second time, after a professional painter showed us the necessity of keeping the roller well ahead of us, we found it easier and faster.

Regardless of whether you paint a ceiling from the floor or a ladder or whether you use a roller or a brush, there are certain steps that should be taken to produce good results. Possibly the most important is to prepare the surface for the paint by filling all cracks and patching all gaps, using one of the powdery materials that requires only mixing with water, after dirt and dust have been removed.

CEILING SHOULD be painted across the width rather than the length. This is true whether using a roller or brush, a latex, oil or any type of paint.

No matter what you have heard about paints that don't leave lap marks, it's still better to work across the narrow part of the ceiling.

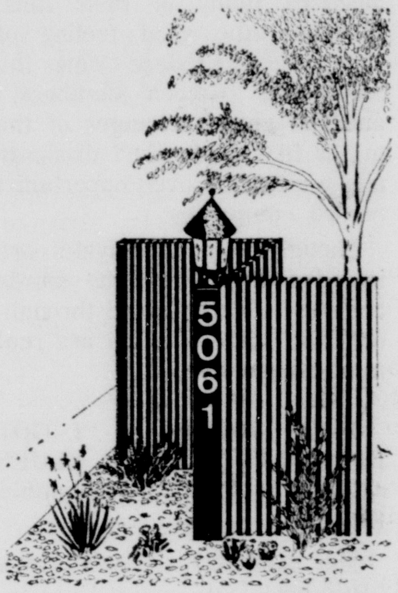
Paint should always be rolled or brushed from a dry area into a wet one, insuring that there won't be an excessive amount of paint where the overlaps occur. When using a roller — and especially with latex paint — apply a narrow strip around the perimeter of the ceiling.

If the walls are not being painted and you want to protect them, use a handy metal strip known as a painter's time saver. Or you can use pieces of cardboard of the type sometimes placed in new men's shirts or those returned from a laundry.

FLAT PAINTS are recommended for most ceilings because they reflect light without a great deal of glare. Gloss or semi-gloss enamels are preferred in kitchens and bathrooms because of their high resistance to moisture, steam, fumes and grease.

Consider carefully whether you want to paint the ceiling of a room without painting the walls. A newly painted ceiling often makes the walls of a room appear dingy unless the walls are in very good shape.

HUNTER'S HELP



ON DARK nights, it is easy to see house numbers, if they are affixed to an attractive lamp post near the street so that they are illuminated by the light. The lamp here is set into a low screen of spaced cedar one-by-fours nailed edge out. The installation also calls attention to the front walk.

PAINTING A ceiling in this manner involves the use of a roller attached to a long handle, permitting the user to stand on the floor during the operation except for the careful work necessary at the points where the walls meet the ceiling.

The first time we tried this method, we weren't too enthusiastic about it, especially when an after-job stiff neck developed. The second time, after a professional painter showed us the necessity of keeping the roller well ahead of us, we found it easier and faster.

Regardless of whether you paint a ceiling from the floor or a ladder or whether you use a roller or a brush, there are certain steps that should be taken to produce good results. Possibly the most important is to prepare the surface for the paint by filling all cracks and patching all gaps, using one of the powdery materials that requires only mixing with water, after dirt and dust have been removed.

CEILING SHOULD be painted across the width rather than the length. This is true whether using a roller or brush, a latex, oil or any type of paint.

No matter what you have heard about paints that don't leave lap marks, it's still better to work across the narrow part of the ceiling.

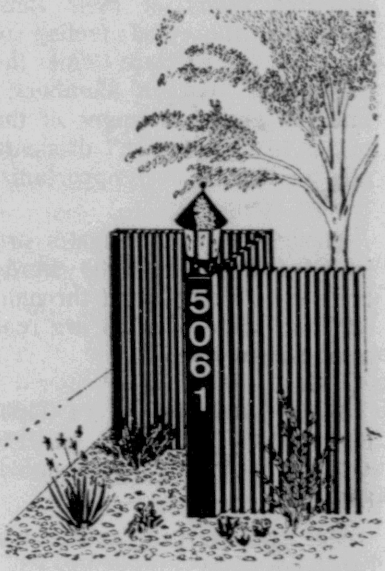
Paint should always be rolled or brushed from a dry area into a wet one, insuring that there won't be an excessive amount of paint where the overlaps occur. When using a roller — and especially with latex paint — apply a narrow strip around the perimeter of the ceiling.

If the walls are not being painted and you want to protect them, use a handy metal strip known as a painter's time saver. Or you can use pieces of cardboard of the type sometimes placed in new men's shirts or those returned from a laundry.

FLAT PAINTS are recommended for most ceilings because they reflect light without a great deal of glare. Gloss or semi-gloss enamels are preferred in kitchens and bathrooms because of their high resistance to moisture, steam, fumes and grease.

Consider carefully whether you want to paint the ceiling of a room without painting the walls. A newly painted ceiling often makes the walls of a room appear dingy unless the walls are in very good shape.

HUNTER'S HELP



ON DARK nights, it is easy to see house numbers, if they are affixed to an attractive lamp post near the street so that they are illuminated by the light. The lamp here is set into a low screen of spaced cedar one-by-fours nailed edge out. The installation also calls attention to the front walk.

LANDSCAPING A sloping lot can be an opportunity as well as a challenge for the home owner because it gives him a chance to showcase a variety of plant materials. By incorporating groundcovers and trailing-type plants with other shrubs and trees, it is possible to overcome the problems of the terrain.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ If you can still find flower bulbs in the nurseries, some of the lesser-known ones, such as sparaxis, watsonias, muscari, snowdrops, will give you a lot of color mileage, planted now in informal drifts or groupings.

✓ Special crabgrass controls should be applied this month.

✓ Don't overlook the traditional and beautiful poinsettia when it comes to decking the halls with holiday decor.

✓ Every garden should have some type of "Christmas berry" shrub. Pyracantha, cotoneaster and holly are some deserving of your consideration.

✓ Peaches and nectarines will be subject to leaf curl next spring if not sprayed now, and again in February or March.

✓ Don't overlook plants when you shop for Christmas gifts.

✓ And pick up that living Christmas tree right away. The rush is on for these beautiful evergreens.

Take Advantage Of Your Sloping Lot

Its hills and rolling terrain are among the features that make Marin so marvelous.

It also means that more than a few Marin home owners are confronted with the property problem of a sloping lot when they go about their landscaping. Not all of them know how to deal with it.

But fortunately, nurseries offer such a wealth of plant materials suited to dressing up these slopes that it is relatively easy to transform such ground into an attractive asset to your property and your neighborhood.

ONE APPROACH is to terrace the slope and arrange your plantings accordingly.

Low retaining walls built from brick or masonry blocks, redwood, broken concrete or even railroad ties can be constructed along the contours of the slope. Then treat each level in planting as if it were a raised bed.

This is where the variety of plant materials can be used with special advantage — dwarf and trailing plants, choice shrubs, succulents, rock garden specialities, etc.

THERE ARE two important factors to take into consideration in selecting your plants — water and climate.

Unless a sprinkling system is to be installed, drouth-resistant plants should be planted closer to the outdoor living area where their needs can be more easily satisfied.

With both mild summers and mild winters, climate is a less limiting factor in Marin than almost anywhere else in the country. The nurseries literally are crammed with plantings that will flourish under our growing conditions.

IN OUR coastal gardens, ivy geranium is a dependable choice to fill in a hillside and provide color. Dwarf bougainvilleas are also used there, although these do not do as well on Marin slopes as they do at some other places in the state.

Inland a little, either gazanias or ceanothus can be relied upon to decorate a grade or embankment without requiring any great attention from their growers.

Junipers and vincas are tough plantings that will do the job for you anywhere.

BUT THERE are a host of other planting opportunities for hillside gardeners, awaiting them at the nearest nursery. For instance, take a careful look at the larger-growing shrubs that can be used to complement and supplement the lower-growing ones already enumerated.

The thing is to look at that sloping lot, not as an insurmountable obstacle to good landscaping, but as an asset that is going to contribute to your objective.

Flat can be awfully dull. A slope rarely is — unless its gardener has given up too soon.

Gardening Page

A Border Calls For Some Creative Gardening

In the East, gardeners plant a traditional perennial border, and enjoy it during the warm months — when the border isn't covered with snow.

In Marin, gardeners can ejoy such a planting every season and have an enviable opportunity to create something extra special — to express themselves in garden terms.

A foundation planting is relatively stable, requiring little more than shaping the permanent shrubs. The perennial border differs, in that it is a workshop for innovations. The border undergoes changes as the gardener seeks to achieve his goal of year-round interest — or color.

NURSERYMEN agree there are many combinations of plants that work well for the border planting.

Beautiful results are achieved in California by combining annuals, perennials, shrubs and bulbs. The various combinations are up to the gardener and offer him a chance to show a creative flair.

No one flower or shrub should dominate the garden border. Group plantings of certain plants can be repeated, if desired, to afford continuity.

FOR INSTANCE, groups of delphinium can be spotted here and there in sunny borders for spring and summer bloom. A Chinese magnolia can be planted nearby to balance the color palette in spring.

Add to this several groups of daffodils, irregularly spaced around the border for an even more spectacular springtime border.

By selecting material and grouping it this way you can arrange to have color in each section of the border on a year-round basis. No one area is completely in bloom or completely out at any given time.

SEASONAL COLOR bearers are plentiful at nurseries. Some, such as roses, provide continual garden color. Marguerites and other perennials are a source of many, many heavy-flowering annuals.

Bulbs, both spring and summer-flowering, are majestic border beauties.

Fall? Rely on dahlias and chrysanthemums — and red-berried pyracanthas for background color. Within the border use scarlet Japanese barberry and crimson heavenly bamboo.

Winter color comes from a surprising number of sources — camellias and azaleas, fragrant daphne, and flowering quince. Winter also gives us heathers, and a gardenful of annuals such as calendulas and Iceland poppies.

When you come right down to it, there are so many possibilities, one's imagaination is the only limiting factor.

FALSE TEETH
KLUTCH holds them tighter

KLUTCH forms a comfort cushion; holds dental plates so much firmer and snugger that you can eat and talk with greater comfort and security; in many cases almost as well as with natural teeth. Klutch lessens the constant fear of a dropping, rocking, chafing plate . . . If your druggist doesn't have Klutch, don't waste money on substitutes, but send us 10c and we will mail you a generous trial box.

FALSE TEETH
KLUTCH holds them tighter

KLUTCH forms a comfort cushion; holds dental plates so much firmer and snugger that you can eat and talk with greater comfort and security; in many cases almost as well as with natural teeth. Klutch lessens the constant fear of a dropping, rocking, chafing plate . . . If your druggist doesn't have Klutch, don't waste money on substitutes, but send us 10c and we will mail you a generous trial box.

Tribulations Of A TV Producer

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — What does the television producer of a hit show do when one of his stars;

1. —Drops dead
2. —Quits in a rage
3. —Breaks a leg.

"You pray a lot," said producer Don Fedderson of "My Three Sons," "Family Affair" and "The Lawrence Welk Show."

He also buys insurance by the carload lot.

"IT'S VERY expensive insurance because you need at least three quarters of a million dollars by mid season," Fedderson explained. "If something happens to your star and you have no show, you are out of business."

Fedderson added a few gray hairs this season when Anissa Jones, the dimpled 11-year-old blonde of "Family Affair," broke her leg when the show was on hiatus.

The producer considered replacing her, as he did Bill Frawley with Bill Demarest in "My Three Sons," and Sebastian Cabot temporarily with John Williams when the former was hospitalized for nine weeks.

"I KEPT Anissa because the public fell in love with her," Fedderson said. "She broke her leg in May and was supposed to be able to perform without cast or crutches when we began shooting in June.

"The doctors miscalculated so we delayed the start of production. Finally specialists told us it might take longer. So we shot our first four shows with Anissa in a cast, hope it would be all over."

Sure enough, Anissa healed and the CBS-TV series rolled along for another seven shows depicting the little girl without a cast.

UNFORTUNATELY Anissa was not covered by insurance because the accident took place during hiatus when the policies are lifted.

Fedderson bore the loss.

All was well until Aug. 2 when a mended Anissa spent a Saturday at the beach, dashing in and out of the surf.

Fedderson continued with a catch in his throat: "A giant wave crashed onto the beach and turned Anissa upside down. When she came to the surface her leg was broken in exactly the same place as before."

THE PRODUCER stifled what might have been a sob.

He was then stuck with four shows featuring Anissa with a cast on her leg and seven without it. Plans for beaming the first four episodes with the cast were junked and will be tacked on later in the year.

"We'll have 15 segments with Anissa in a cast," Fedderson said. "That's an awfully long time for a broken leg to mend, but we don't have too many options."

Unfortunately, Fedderson can't collect insurance for the second broken bone. Anissa was at the beach and not on the sound stage.

"Ah, well," Fedderson concluded. "Nobody forced me to become a television producer."

Tribulations Of A TV Producer

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — What does the television producer of a hit show do when one of his stars;

1. —Drops dead
2. —Quits in a rage
3. —Breaks a leg.

"You pray a lot," said producer Don Fedderson of "My Three Sons," "Family Affair" and "The Lawrence Welk Show."

He also buys insurance by the carload lot.

"IT'S VERY expensive insurance because you need at least three quarters of a million dollars by mid season," Fedderson explained. "If something happens to your star and you have no show, you are out of business."

Fedderson added a few gray hairs this season when Anissa Jones, the dimpled 11-year-old blonde of "Family Affair," broke her leg when the show was on hiatus.

The producer considered replacing her, as he did Bill Frawley with Bill Demarest in "My Three Sons," and Sebastian Cabot temporarily with John Williams when the former was hospitalized for nine weeks.

"I KEPT Anissa because the public fell in love with her," Fedderson said. "She broke her leg in May and was supposed to be able to perform without cast or crutches when we began shooting in June.

"The doctors miscalculated so we delayed the start of production. Finally specialists told us it might take longer. So we shot our first four shows with Anissa in a cast, hope it would be all over."

Sure enough, Anissa healed and the CBS-TV series rolled along for another seven shows depicting the little girl without a cast.

UNFORTUNATELY Anissa was not covered by insurance because the accident took place during hiatus when the policies are lifted.

Fedderson bore the loss.

All was well until Aug. 2 when a mended Anissa spent a Saturday at the beach, dashing in and out of the surf.

Fedderson continued with a catch in his throat: "A giant wave crashed onto the beach and turned Anissa upside down. When she came to the surface her leg was broken in exactly the same place as before."

THE PRODUCER stifled what might have been a sob.

He was then stuck with four shows featuring Anissa with a cast on her leg and seven without it. Plans for beaming the first four episodes with the cast were junked and will be tacked on later in the year.

"We'll have 15 segments with Anissa in a cast," Fedderson said. "That's an awfully long time for a broken leg to mend, but we don't have too many options."

Unfortunately, Fedderson can't collect insurance for the second broken bone. Anissa was at the beach and not on the sound stage.

"Ah, well," Fedderson concluded. "Nobody forced me to become a television producer."

SUICIDE

I sit alone with eyes on the bay,
and wonder how it was with you,
before—

White-faced, grief stricken:
Was it that you suddenly knew,
the emptiness as people turn away
leaving only a sick smile,
throat-frozen words and terror?

Would it have made a difference,
had you known,
across cold water, locked in a fortress,
there lived one soul who needed
whatever it was you had to give?

RELIEF CHORES — Troops carry ammunition to a gun emplacement at Bu Prang, near the Cambodian border, during a lull in combat. Although North Vietnamese artillery has pounded the camp since the last week in October, South Vietnamese combat authorities today speculated that the siege may have ended, with no shellings in two days. (UPI Telephoto)

Red Siege Eases; Viet Brass Killed

Chopper Downed, 11 Lost

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist gunners failed for the second successive day today to shell the Bu Prang Special Forces camp and commanders on the scene said the lengthy seige appeared to have ended. They declared South Vietnam had won an important victory.

Farther north in the Central Highlands, six Americans and five South Vietnamese including a top government commander were killed when their helicopter was shot down over a battlefield.

The Bu Prang Special Forces camp, a hilltop outpost 112 miles northeast of Saigon, had been besieged since Oct. 28 by up to 5,000 North Vietnamese regulars who had pounded the camp with as many as 200 mortar and artillery rounds on some days.

"It looks like this thing is about over," one U.S. officer said. "This one was an ARVN (South Vietnamese Army) show, and for once they took the ball and ran. We consider it an important victory."

AIR STRIKES

Military sources placed Communist deaths in the 37-day battle at about 1,350, many of them as a result of massive air and artillery strikes. The Allies lost some 200 dead, including at least 12 Americans.

Many observers saw the battle as a test of South Vietnam's ability to fight alone without U.S. infantry support. The defenders were supported by American warplanes and artillery but this was in keeping with the "Vietnamization" plan, sources said.

With no Communist shells having been fired into Bu Prang through 8 p.m. today, the camp's 400 defenders were using the respite to rebuild the battered outpost and to dig deeper bunkers.

VIET VICTIM

The South Vietnamese officer killed in the helicopter crash was identified as Col. Nguyen Ba Lien, 36, who commanded 10,000 government troops as head of the 24th Special Tactical Zone. Informed government sources said the

SATURDAY SESSION

Hobby Farmer's Tax Break Safe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, hammering out a tax reform bill in a rare Saturday session, today rejected a proposal designed to crack down on businessmen who go into farming for the tax losses they can derive from it.

The proposal, offered by Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., as a substitute for a far less restrictive provision in the Senate's massive tax reform bill, was defeated 50-29.

Metcalf said his proposal would affect 14,000 well-to-do owners of "hobby farms" and raise $205 million for the government, compared to $20 million that would be raised from 3,000 persons under the Senate bill.

Hobby farmers use paper losses on their farms to offset profits from their non-farming businesses. The Metcalf proposal would have limited deductions for farm expenses to no more than $15,000 of non-farm losses.

DEADLINE FADES

The Senate hoped to complete action on tax reform today, a possibility that diminished as the debate waned on.

Republicans said the bill had become so generous in its tax cuts and its boost in Social Security benefits that it invited a veto by President Richard M. Nixon.

Democrats discounted the possibility of a veto, however.

Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., estimated the bill would cost about $9.95 billion more than when it came to the Senate floor last week.

The measure, which started out as the most extensive reform of the nation's tax laws in history, has become so laden with benefits some Republicans said it left Nixon no choice but to reject it.

"I wouldn't bet against it," said Republican Whip Robert P. Griffin of Michigan. Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., said the bill was so costly it virtually invited a national depression.

SECURITY BOOST

But over Nixon's objections and the Republicans' misgivings yesterday, the Senate voted 73 to 14 — with all the opposition coming from Republicans—to grant perhaps the biggest Social Security boost since the first checks (of $22.60 for a single person) were mailed in 1940.

Under the measure, all 25 million Americans on Social Security would receive an across-the-board 15 per cent

A TAXPAYER'S TWIST SHAKES APPEALS BOARD

Marin's Assessment Appeals Board, composed of veteran attorney Julius H. Selinger and real estate men James F. McConnell and Edward P. Morphy, normally acts with cool efficiency.

But yesterday, a property owner from Woodacre almost shook them out of their chairs at the Civic Center.

Walter E. Anderson of 17 Oakgrove Avenue demanded, not a lower assessment, but a $9,000 increase in the assessed value of his home.

County appraisers had set the value at $22,000. Anderson testified he had added a deck and improved landscaping and argued it should be raised to $31,000.

Assistant Assessor Herschel W. Johnson and his deputies said the improvements had added considerably to the home but he balked at the $31,000 figure. A value of $29,000 was recommended and the appeals board approved.

Anderson said he wanted a higher assessment because he planned to sell the home.

If that fails, he'll be faced with paying about $150 more in taxes next year as a result of his successful appeal.

$750,000 Offer For Courthouse

A Marin businessman wants to buy the Courthouse square in San Rafael for $750,000 cash, with full payment within nine months, County Administrator Alan Bruce disclosed yesterday.

Bruce and County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney will recommend to the board of supervisors Tuesday morning that a date be set for bid opening to receive the offer and any other bids, as required by law.

Maloney said the person who made the informal offer requested anonymity. Maloney said he does not know what the prospective buyer plans to do with the property.

An appraisal of the courthouse square four months ago showed that the property is currently worth about $750,000.

All bids would be accompanied by a deposit of 5 per cent of the amount bid. The rest of the purchase price must be paid to the county within nine months from the date of the bid award.

The county has failed to sell the downtown property, being abandoned in a shift of county offices to the new Civic Center, despite prolonged attempts.

Rolling Stones Play; Cars Don't Roll

COMBINED AP & UPI

TRACY—Thousands of young people converging on a rock concert in a remote hilly area near here created mammoth traffic jams today.

A free concert featuring the Rolling Stones and several other rock groups got under way at 10 a.m. at the Altamont Speedway with an estimated 40,000 persons able to be at the site off U.S. Highway 50.

As the concert got underway, eastbound traffic was backed up nearly 20 miles to the Alameda County prison farm at Santa Rita.

Even before daylight traffic had backed up eight miles in both directions. Then as the jam was seeming to clear up, concert-bound motorists began abandoning their cars on the shoulders and center strip of the highway — the only one in the area — and starting to walk to the concert.

Radio reports from the site said a young woman went into labor at the concert. Her baby was delivered by medical personnel there.

Westbound traffic moved at near normal speeds as the crowd pulled into the speedway area as fast as the two-lane entrance permitted.

Promoters of the event expected 200,000 in the isolated area 50 miles east of San Francisco.

Site of the concert was settled upon only yesterday after hectic negotiations with the British rock group and Ameriman bands participating, Grateful Dead, Jefferson Airplane and others.

The eight-hour event at the 80-acre Altamont Speedway, 50 miles southeast of San Francisco, already had been dubbed "Woodstock West" in reference to the rock festival which attracted 300,000 in New York last summer.

The California Highway Patrol said it was unable to get its vehicles into the race track area.

"It's a free concert, not for profit," said the Rolling Stones' spokesman, John Jaymes. "It's a Christmas and Chanukah gift from the Stones and other groups to American youth."

Today's event was first set for Golden Gate Park in San Francisco and then Sears Point in Sonoma County before being shifted yesterday to its final site.

Thousands of rock fans started pouring into the speedway area last evening on foot, in cars, hitchhiking, by motorcycle, truck, and broken-down bus.

Sleep was difficult to obtain because of a motorcycle show at the speedway and the night-long sounds of construction to get ready for today's concert. Hundreds of youngsters pitched in as volunteers.

The show was to include such U.S. groups as the Grateful Dead; Jefferson Airplane; Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young and dozens of others.

Dick Carter, owner of the concert site, said he was donating the property "for the publicity and to prove I'm a good guy." He added: "Of course, if it works out, I'll probably be presenting my own paid rock concerts there in the future."

Jaymes discussed the "staggering logistics of shifting the concert site on short notice. At that very moment, he said, cargo helicopters were transporting to the new site 33,000 pounds of equipment—ranging from sound systems to lumber for the stage to 200 portable toilets. Some 400 private guards and workers also had to shift location.

Jaymes charged that the last-minute move from Sears Point would cost "at least $100,000." Negotiations between the Stones and Filmways, the Sears Point owner, broke down.

Captain Denies Ever Ordering A Massacre

NEW YORK (UPI)—Army Capt. Ernest Medina said yesterday he ordered his troops at My Lai to destroy and burn the village, kill the livestock and battle the Viet Cong. He said he never gave any orders to massacre women and children.

In a taped television interview with Mike Wallace, broadcast last night on CBS-TV's evening news with Walter Cronkite, Medina replied to a question concerning his alleged order to "level" My Lai by saying:

"The orders that I passed to my company was orders that I had received, instructions to destroy the village, burn the village, to kill the livestock and to engage the 48th V.C. battalion. I did not give any orders to massacre or shoot any women and children."

Medina said reliable intelligence sources informed him all women and children would be out of My Lai at the time of the attack. He said intelligence reports said that on March 16, 1968, the women and children would go "to market either at Song Tin or Quang Nai."

The 34-year-old native of New Mexico said he received his orders from Col. Frank Barker, task force commander, who died in a helicopter crash later in 1968.

In Washington, 1st Lt. Wiliam L. Calley Jr., the only man officially accused so far of murdering South Vietnamese villagers at My Lai last year, was advised to say nothing about his role in the alleged massacre when questioned yesterday by Pentagon investigators.

Calley's civilian lawyer, George Latimer, said he told the

will be held at the Holiday Inn, just north of San Rafael on Sunday, December 7th from 2 p.m. until 9 p.m. Sponsored by the Terra Linda Art Association. It will offer a collection of art by its members for public viewing and an opportunity to purchase art for Christmas gifts. This pre-Christmas showing will provide the traditional holiday atmosphere. There is no admission charge.

HILL-TO-HILL PEOPLE — By daybreak today, traffic was backed up for miles and thousands of people waited outside the Altamont speedway where the Rolling Stones and other famed rock groups opened an eight-hour concert before noon. The rock event was to have been held at the Sears Point race track in Southern Sonoma County, but arrangements fell through Thursday night. (AP Wirephoto)

Hub Officials, Merchants Spar Over License Fees

San Anselmo city officials defended the city council yesterday against charges that action in amending the proposed business license ordinance was improper.

The ordinance, opposed by at least 80 businessmen who have signed a petition against it, would set business license fees at $20 plus 30 cents per $1,000 of gross receipts.

The measure, subject of prolonged discussion by the council, was amended Dec. 2 at an adjourned session of the body. The original fee proposed was $20 plus 40 cents per $1,000 in gross receipts.

At that meeting, Mayor Woodrow V. Capurro and Councilman Robert M. Scott opposed taking any action, with Capurro saying that the meeting was intended to be a "work session" and that "if they (the businessmen) knew we were going to vote, there would be 100 persons out there."

Jack H. Feller Jr., a partner in a San Anselmo consulting firm, said few businessmen were present at the meeting because the council had indicated "no public participation in this session was to be expected or permitted."

Although billed as a "work session," the meeting was technically an adjourned meeting, which gives public bodies power to conduct any business that would normally be proper at a

and wonder how it was with you,

White-faced, grief stricken:
Was it that you suddenly knew,
the emptiness as people turn away
leaving only a sick smile,
throat-frozen words and terror?

Would it have made a difference,
had you known,
across cold water, locked in a fortress,
there lived one soul who needed
whatever it was you had to give?

ST. LOUIS GLITTERS FOR CHRISTMAS

While the city's 85-foot Christmas tree glows in downtown St. Louis and the huge Gateway Arch gleams by reflected light in the background, a party of St. Louis citizens was arguing with Tacoma, Wash. boosters over who has the nation's tallest tree. The Westerners claimed to have a tree 100 feet tall. (UPI Telephoto)

'Chicago 7' Defense Gets Its Inning

By TONY FULLER

CHICAGO (UPI)—The prosecution completed presentation of its case against the "Chicago Seven" yesterday, on the trial's 50th day. The defense immediately asked for a directed acquittal.

Government presentation ended in the unconventional style which has been the hallmark of the trial.

The announcement by U.S. Attorney Thomas A. Foran that "the government rests" came after U.S. District Court Judge Julius J. Hoffman shut off cross-examination by the defense of the final witness. Hoffman finally told defense attorney Leonard Weinglass to sit down when he persisted in a line of questioning the judge deemed improper.

The judge dismissed the jury and asked defense attorneys if they had "anything to say." The defendants broke into laughter and chief defense attorney William Kunstler said, "Just a sigh of relief, your honor."

But Kunstler quickly added the motion for a directed verdict and said defense argument on the request would be "extensive."

"It will be only as extensive as I permit it to be," Hoffman replied.

Kunstler asked Hoffman if the defendants would be required to appear Monday, the date set for consideration of the motion.

"Yes, sir, I think it's important that they be here," the judge said, smiling. "After all, I may grant your motion."

Defendants Abbie Hoffman and Lee Weiner waved their hands in the air. "Ya, ya," Abbie Hoffman said. "We'll be waiting for that."

The judge, still smiling, walked out the door.

Earlier Hoffman quashed a defense subpoena of confidential records of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and a demand that FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover testify.

The subpoena demanded Hoover produce all FBI reports on the defendants and alleged coconspirators, including reports resulting from electronic surveillance, and the addresses of all agents and informers.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Schultz called the request "a fishing expedition . . . a fantastic request."

Kunstler said the FBI is "a huge federal agency with an army of informers and agents who have been utilized in every state against these defendants." He said the defense "can't possibly know the names" of agents whose testimony might help the defendants' case.

The government presented 54 witnesses in its effort to prove the defendants conspired to incite riots during the 1968 Democratic National Convention. The trial transcript already includes nearly 10,000 pages of material, which costs the government about $1 a page.

An additional $50,000 bill has been run up at the hotel where 14 jurors and alternates have been sequestered since late September. And pay for jurors, at $25 a day, adds $24,500 to costs.

Grand Jury Hears Murder Tale; Girl Fears Manson Witchcraft

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The strange story of "The Manson Family," whose members are prime suspects in the bizarre Sharon Tate murders, was described yesterday to a county grand jury by a pretty 21-year-old member. But Susan Atkins now fears a mystical spell will be cast on her by the group's hypnotic leader.

Miss Atkins appeared before the grand jury without being granted immunity from prosecution. She testified behind locked doors for two hours and 15 minutes, relating her earlier story of the "band in black" which she saw stab and shoot and kill actress Sharon Tate and four others in August.

Miss Atkins was asked how she felt about informing on the weird, nomadic cult whose members are accused in a total of eight senseless slayings.

"Dead," she replied before being escorted away by her attorney, Richard Caballero.

Caballero said later Miss Atkins fears her testimony may make her a "marked woman" through the black magic and mystical spells with which the leader of the "family" commune, hypnotic-eyed Charles Manson, 35, once held his followers.

"Charlie would, in effect, conjure up a vision detrimental to her in his mind and then transfer it to her mind and then she would know if she is marked," the attorney said.

Caballero persuaded the slim brunette to testify, hoping her information would aid her in escaping the death penalty. He said she cooperated fully with the 21 jurors, telling them "whatever they asked her about."

The prosectuion is seeking indictments in the Tate murders and, the murders of supermarket owner Leno La Bianca and his wife a night later in their exclusive Los Feliz District home.

In addition to Miss Atkins and Manson, who is now in jail in Independence (Inyo County), on auto theft charges, murder indictments are being sought against Charles Watson, 24; Patricia Krenwinkel, 21; Linda Kasabian, 20; Steve Brogan, 23, and Leslie Sankston, about 20.

Miss Atkins was among seven witnesses to appear before the grand jury. Also testifying was Terry Melcher, 27, son of Doris Day, who lived in the Benedict Canyon estate before Miss Tate and her husband, director Roman Polanski, rented it. Manson is said to have a grudge against Melcher because he thwarted a songwriting ambition of the bearded cultist.

Gwen Stone Art Work On Display

An exhibition of collages and sculpture by San Rafael artist Gwen Stone is now on display at the Newman Gallery, 2700 Dwight Way in Berkeley.

The sculpture consists of three pieces of hollow core polychromed plywood construction which have not been shown together previously. The largest six by nine feet, is called "Rasmusen Facade" for Mill Valley artist Henry Rasmusen, whose suggestion inspired the sculpture.

The collages are book linen and are of larger format than the artist's earlier work in the same medium. The show runs through December, with gallery hours from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. seven days a week.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Lodge Comes Home

PARIS (AP) — Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge left for home today after 10 months as head of the U.S. delegation at the deadlocked Vietnam peace talks.

Among those seeing him off were Philip Habib, his former deputy who now becomes acting head of the U.S. delegation, and Pham Dang Lam, head of the South Vietnamese delegation.

Russ Plan Car

MOSCOW (PA) — The Soviet Institute for Automobiles and Roads has set its sights on building the world's fastest car. The newspaper Pravda Ukrainy reported engineers are designing a car to reach the speed of sound, 742 miles an hour.

The vehicle will have gas turbine engines capable of delivering 5,500 horsepower. It will be about 30 feet long.

Because of the high speeds, the first tests are to be made using radio signals rather than a human being, chief engineer Vladimir K. Nikitin said.

Protest Sentence

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Vietnam war protester was sentenced to a lesson in American history yesterday as an alternative to a term in jail for his part in disorders at an antiwar rally last year.

Judge Robert A. Latrone ordered the 19-year-old offender, Willie Newsome, to visit a citizenship ceremony, the Pennsylvania Historical Society, Independence Hall and the Betsy Ross house. He also was told to attend three classes on constitutional law at Temple University and spend a day with the city archivist, then return to court with proof he had heeded the order.

Pig Bowl Sales

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Sponsors of the "Pig Bowl" between Ann Arbor police and Washtenaw County sheriff's deputies say they have sold 2,000 tickets.

The price for a ticket to the tackle game is $1.50 or a toy of equivalent value. Proceeds will go to needy children.

Censorship Lifted

NEW DELHI (AP) — Censors cut kissing and nude love scenes from movies in India, but the ban has beenlifte d for the 4th international film festival which opened a two-week run last night. The city's 11 movie houses are jammed, lines are long outside and scalpers report good business.

Moon Rocks Draw

NEW YORK (AP) — Three-quarters of an ounce of moon rock helped attract the greatest monthly attendance in the history of the American Museum of Natural History, 405,000 visitors, during November.

The rock was brought back by the Apollo 11's first men on the moon. It is on loan from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Russ Moon Hopes?

LACONIA, N.H. (AP) — Dr. Wernher von Braun says he is "convinced the Russians tried to beat us to the moon and lost."

The German-born rocket scientist, director of the Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala., made the comment in a speech before the Laconia Chamber of Commerce last night.

He did not detail the reasons for his conclusion.

Thai Peril Told

BANGKOK (AP) — Two divisions of Communist Chinese troops in northern Laos pose a direct threat to Thailand, the commander-in-chief of the Thai army said today.

Treaty Pledge

TOKYO (AP) — Government officials said today Japan will sign the nuclear nonproliferation treaty early next year if Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's Liberal-Democratic party wins the Dec. 27 general election.

Although Japan has been urged to sign, some members of Sato's party are opposed. They say they are concerned that unilateral inspections by an international group might hamper the development of nuclear power in Japan for peaceful uses.

Traffic Troubles

ROME (AP) — Rome's new traffic commissioner presented his constituents with a bittersweet Christmas present today.

For pedestrians he banned cars from the Trevi Fountain piazza of "Three Coins in the Fountain" fame. For drivers, Carlo Rosato promised heavy fines for rush hour parking violations and more towaways.

Rush hour parking is banned but thousands of motorists have obtained special permits from the city or arrange for a freelance parking attendant to make a deal with the cop on the beat. The result is traffic chaos from dawn to dusk in the ancient city's streets.

Rosato's "turn of the screw," as the city's newspapers nicknamed it, will be in effect from Dec. 8 to the 24, but if successful, he said he may make the measures permanent.

Panther Scuffle

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Four members of the Black Panther party battled with eight policemen in a short, violent struggle outside the door of Police Chief C. M. Kelley's office yesterday afternoon.

The Panthers said they wanted to attend a news conference Kelley had called in his office. Kelley had issued orders that they were not to be admitted, so the eight officers barred their way, leading to the scuffle.

In the news conference, Chief Kelley repeated his denial that he had allowed confiscated firearms to be transferred to right-wing groups as the Panthers have charged.

Sunday Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sunday will be a working day for senators who sit on Sen. William Proxmire's financial institutions subcommittee.

Proxmire, D-Wis., called the unprecedented session yesterday after Republicans refused to allow his subcommittee to meet then. The GOP senators objected to a Friday session because the tax reform bill was under consideration.

The subcommittee will conduct a hearing on problems caused by mailing millions of unsolicited credit cards. "There is no other time open to us," Proxmire said.

Ships Tied Up

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A crew dispute between Matson Navigation Co. and the Marine Firemen's Union had 22 ships stalled today in the western states.

Two more vessels were tied up yesterday: the President Harding in Los Angeles and the Guam Bear in San Francisco.

The dispute involves the number of men Matson will hire aboard the unlicensed engineering departments of two container ships under construction in Baltimore.

Matson says six men in each ship will be sufficient. The union demands nine crewmen for each of the "super sophisticated" freighters.

Drug Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight manufacturers have been ordered by the Food and Drug Administration to recall about 40 million capsules of a widely used drug used to fight infection because of doubts about its effectiveness.

The FDA's action yesterday against the drug oxytetracycline may spark a controversy over whether all drugs of the same chemical compound are equally effective.

The decision followed up a complaint by Charles Pfizer Co., original patent holder of the drug, that equal doses of it now manufactured by other companies failed to produce the same blood levels as its version.

The FDA said it confirmed Pfizer's findings on the basis of its own studies.

Aid Bill Stalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will have to wait until next week to wind up action on the foreign aid bill because of a vanishing act by its chairman, Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark.

Fulbright, in no hurry to complete action on the measure, sent word yesterday he thought the committee should quit until Monday. When the chairman didn't show up, the committee gave up.

"We had about 15 minutes to go" to complete action on the bill, said Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt.

Star's Son Guilty

INDIO (UPI)—The 37-year-old son of the late actor John Barrymore yesterday pleaded no contest to a charge of possession of dangerous drugs, found in his car after an Aug. 4 accident. He will be sentenced Dec. 29.

James Healey, the attorney for John Drew Barrymore, changed an innocent plea before Superior Court Judge Karl Lynn Davis and requested the charge be reduced from a felony to a misdemeanor.

Davis said he would decide on the request before sentencing Barrymore. Under a felony possession charge, Barrymore could receive from one to 10 years in prison, but the sentence on a misdemeanor could not be more than one year in the county jail.

Battlewagon Role

BREMERTON, Wash. (UPI) — The retired U.S. battleship Missouri has been designated a public fallout shelter and stocked to accommodate 2,200 persons with food, water, medical supplies, sanitary equipment and radiological monitoring devices.

The Missouri lies in berth at the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard as part of the Navy's mothball fleet.

Reagan To Travel

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan will attend the Republican Governors' Conference at Hot Springs, Ark. Thursday through Saturday. Reagan is conference chairman.

He'll return to Sacramento on Dec. 14.

Two Public Discussions Planned On Poverty War

Marin residents will have a chance to discuss programs and goals of the county's antipoverty program at two public meetings scheduled next week.

The programs are sponsored by the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council, according to EOC executive director, W. Robert Lomax Jr., to "give the people of Marin their best opportunity to influence the course of the war on poverty in this community."

The meeting for southern Marin will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Manzanita Center, 630 Drake Avenue, Marin City. A northern Marin meeting will be Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at 875 Grant Avenue in Novato.

Persons needing transportation to the Novato meeting may use a free bus which will leave from in front of the Courthouse in San Rafael at 7 p.m.

Sun Lamps Counteract Chemicals In Hair

MONTREAL (AP) — Experts say a daily two-minute session under an ultra-violet lamp will give new life to limp hair which has been abused with constant coloring, setting, teasing and spraying.

Five or 10 minutes of direct sunlight on the head and scalp each day is also a good conditioner.

Sonomans Set Guns-Butter Town Meeting

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — People for a Better Society, a Sonoma County group, has called a public meeting to plan a countywide "town meeting" to discuss the conflict between the nation's military and domestic needs.

The planning meeting will be at 2 p.m. Dec. 14 in the faculty cafeteria at Santa Rosa Junior College's Student Union Building.

The society is a "nonpartisan political action group," said its president, Jacques Levy of Santa Rosa. Its membership is more than 100, he said.

The aim of the town meeting, to be held early in January, is to draw up a list of specific local needs in such fields as education, health, housing, pollution control, transportation and recreation. This list, and the limited funds available for such needs, then will be contrasted to the amount of money spent on the armed forces.

The list will be forwarded to Washington, where a coalition of nationwide groups, from churches to labor unions, is planning a "national assembly" and lobbying drive in the next congressional session.

The average insured family has $21,080 of life insurance.

LONDON (AP) — U.S. Secretary of the Treasury David M. Kennedy met today with British Chancellor of the Exchequer Roy Jenkins for talks on gold and other financial questions.

Pleads Guilty To Amphetamine

Thomas Keynard Driskill, 20, of Novato, has pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of possessing marijuana July 29 in Mill Valley. A second charge of possessing marijuana at the same time was dismissed.

Judge Peter Allen Smith on Thursday ordered Driskill to appear in superior court Dec. 15 for setting of sentencing date on the felony conviction.

Driskill was arrested after he ran from police who were trying to arrest him on a traffic warrant. A search revealed the suspected weed and amphetamine, they said.

ROCKET TRAIL IN MARIN SKY

Marin County residents, as well as others throughout Northern California and Nevada, were treated to a colorful spectacle about 5:45 p.m. yesterday when an intercontinental ballistic missile launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base roared into space. I/J photographer Jim Kean captured the rocket's journey through the Marin sky. Vandenberg officials said the twilight phenomenon was caused by exhaust from the rocket solidifying into ice above 3,000 feet. Sunlight illuminating the ice crystals made the missile's trail visible from the ground.

Road Mishaps Injure Four Motorists

Four persons, including a year-old baby, have been treated for minor injuries in separate accidents on Marin roads, according to California Highway Patrol reports.

Nancy Harris, 18, of 123 Esmeyer Drive, San Rafael, was treated at Marin General Hospital for minor scalp cuts.

According to the CHP, she was a passenger in a car driven by Anthony J. Bricca, 19, of Sylvan Lane, Ross, which was westbound on Kent Avenue at 11:40 a.m. yesterday when it collided at Bridge Road with a car driven by Janice C. Woolston, 18, of St. Isabelles School, Terra Linda.

Angela L. Horn, 12 months, a passenger in a car driven by her mother, Catherine D. Horn of 772 Ignacio Boulevard, Novato, was treated for facial cuts at Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital.

The Horn car was eastbound on Nave Drive at the Highway 101 offramp at 4:15 p.m. yesterday when it collided with a car driven by Robert G. Waldman, 49, of 445 Alameda de la Loma, Novato, which was traveling on the highway exit, the CHP reported.

Mountford J. Mardevich, 36, of 43 Bereas Drive, Kentfield, was treated for a scalp cut at Marin General Hospital. His car hit a center divider in front of Marin Catholic High School as he was westbound on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard at 2:20 a.m. today according to the CHP.

Grant F. Garl, 17, of 853 Tamalpais Avenue, Novato, was treated for a fractured shoulder and cut chin at Novato General Hospital. His southbound car skidded on a curve on the Petaluma-Point Reyes Road 1.5 miles south of Novato Boulevard at 11 p.m. yesterday, according to CHP reports.

One of Canada's outstanding collections of totem poles is displayed in British Columbia's Thunderbird Park in Victoria.

LSD Sale Count Is Reinstated

A charge of selling LSD—dropped last month against Frank Joseph Bonomolo, 22, of Petaluma, when the district attorney's office lost the evidence — was refiled yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

The district attorney's office reported that the alleged LSD, sold to a drug agent, had been located again.

Bonomolo again pleaded innocent to the charge of selling seven capsules and his case was set for preliminary hearing Jan. 9.

His younger brother, George Tipton Bonomolo, 19, is scheduled to go on trial the week of Dec. 15 in Marin Superior Court on a charge of selling marijuana.

Authorities have said the pair sold narcotics at their father's Novato service station.

Three Arrested On Drug Charges

Three persons were arrested on suspicion of possession of marijuana by Sausalito police early today, but details of the arrests were not available.

James Charles Erwin, 22, of 90 Hoag Street, San Rafael, and Joan Susan Barnett, 19, 72 The Alameda, San Anselmo, were arrested about 1 a.m. Neither was able to post $500 bail and will appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Judith Ann Thomas, 20, of 645 North San Pablo Road, San Rafael, was arrested about 3 a.m. She was unable to post $750 bail and will also appear Monday in court.

Whiplash Victim In Good Condition

WHIPLASH VICTIM 114-2

A 25-year-old Novato woman was reported in good condition today at Marin G neral Hospital, where she is recovering from a severe whiplash received Thursday in a San Francisco automobile accident.

Injured was Joan Seeback of 49 San Felipe Way. Details of the accident were unavailable.

WAR

victims also included an American colonel and two South Vietnamese majors.

The U.S. Command said the names of the American victims would not be released until their families had been notified.

Government spokesmen said the "Huey" chopper was shot down about 16 miles north-northeast of Kontum or 275 miles north-northeast of Saigon while observing an operation of the 42nd South Vietnamese Regiment and a Civilian Irregular Defense Group militia unit.

Lien was the government commander in the fighting at Hill 875 in October-November of 1967. That fight, the bloodiest of the war, cost the lives of more than 700 Americans and about 1,641 Communists west of Dak To, about 30 miles north of Kontum.

Lien also was the South Vietnamese commander during the 56-day siege at the Ben Het Special Forces camp earlier this year. That action left about 1,850 Communists dead.

He was one of the junior officers involved in the November 1963 coup which overthrew the late President Ngo Dinh Diem.

regular session.

"To take such action, in stealth, is demonstrative of the contempt the city council must have for their constituent, overburdened, businessmen-taxpayers," Feller charged. "Such action is certainly undemocratic, although it is probably legal."

City Mgr. Alfred C. Kaeppel, supported by City Atty. John G. Buresh, defended the city council's action. He said the ordinance was properly amended under adjourned meeting provisions and that first and final reading and adoption is set for Tuesday night's regular council session.

He said the ordinance does not require two readings, as is the usual procedure, because the measure is an emergency one, set to go into effect Jan. 1. That is when business license fees are regularly due.

Tuesday night's meeting is set for 8 p.m. in city hall.

Youth Convicted On Weed Charge

Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court found Mark W. Goldberg, 19, of Lagunitas, guilty yesterday of possessing marijuana Jan. 27 when arrested for shoplifting.

Hearing the case without a jury, the judge ruled, however, that Goldberg was innocent of a charge of possessing a pipe for smoking the marijuana.

He set sentencing for Jan. 26

The shoplifting charge dismissed earlier when Judge Wilson ruled that superior court had no jurisdiction over the misdemeanor offense.

Goldberg was arrested when owners of an antique shop in San Rafael complained to police. Officers said they found marijuana when searching him.

Two More Victims Of 'Death Squadrons'

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Two more bullet-riddled bodies found yesterday brought to 13 the unidentified presumed victims of Brazil's so-called death squadrons discovered in the past 48 hours.

The death squadrons, said to be composed of policemen who act as vigilantes in off-duty hours, are believed responsible for 500 killings in recent years. Their motto is "the best criminal is a dead criminal." Brazil has no death penalty except for terrorism.

MY LAI

26-year-old soldier not to discuss the subject during his appearance before a special board established to determine whether a low-level Army inquiry soon after the March 16, 1968, incident amounted to little more than a whitewash.

The investigating panel headed by Lt. Gen. William R. Peers, interrogated Calley in absolute secrecy for nearly three hours and the content of his testimony was not made public. When the questioning ended in mid-afternoon, Calley, accompanied by Maj. Kenneth Raby, his military attorney, flew back to Ft. Benning, Ga., without speaking to reporters.

Calley, a platoon leader in the My Lai engagement, has been ordered court-martialed on charges of premeditated murder of at least 109 civilians the day of the assault. His trial is expected to begin early next year at Fort Benning, where he is stationed.

Trio Selected To Help Pick Schools' Chief

A three-man subcommittee to establish criteria for selection of a permanent district superintendent was appointed yesterday by the Tamalpais High School District board.

At a special meeting, the board named Frank A. Cassou, district financial officer; Dr. Walter Lee, a district psychologist, and Duane F. Miller, a teacher at Sir Francis Drake High School to the committee. All are members of Next Stop Analysis, a 12-member committee including principals, teachers and board members, which has been working on procedures for choosing a superintendent.

The board also discussed who should be included on a screening committee to interview prospective candidates for the position and planned to hire three professional consultants to aid in the screening.

The text of a brochure to announce the position was approved at yesterday's meeting.

Licenses To Get Orange Stickers

One-by-two-inch orange stickers will be mailed to vehicle owners renewing their registrations for 1970, the Department of Motor Vehicles has announced.

Statewide distribution of gold-on-blue license plates will not be made this year, a DMV spokesman said.

Transition from the yellow-on-black plates is being geared to the rate of replacement of old cars by new and by licenses issued to cars that have come here from out of state, he explained.

Blue-on-gold plates may be obtained for a fee of three dollars beginning March 1, he added.

Deadline for registration renewal is Feb. 4.

Sale Of LSD Is Admitted

Terry Tsegelatos, 25, of San Francisco, admitted yesterday in Marin Superior Court that he sold LSD to a Fairfax policewoman on May 20, 1968.

A second charge of offering to sell her mescaline was dropped.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson set sentencing for Feb. 2.

Two Honored For Acting Abilities

Kathy Noyes and John Melvin, both seniors, were named best actress and actor last night at Marin Catholic High School for their performances in three one-act plays.

Lisa Purcell, a sophomore, and Dan Yarbough, a junior, were named best supporting actress and actor.

increase. The 3.5 million who get the minimum benefits would receive $100 for a single person and $150 for a married couple. The minimums are now $55 and $82.50.

The increase would be effective Jan. 1. But retired persons would not get the money until March, with a retroactive check representing the increases for January and February arriving in April.

San Rafael High Club Visits Rock

The Indians occupying Alcatraz received a visit yesterday from members of the Interact Club of San Rafael High School, who carried clothing, food and coal.

The students collected the goods at school and stored them in a classroom.

Making the trip, called a "humanitarian effort" by the students, were Charles Parmele, club president; Paul Robinson, Richard Scatena, Dane Faber, Robert Aroyan, Richard Haenggi, and a faculty adviser, Richard Delgado.

The Interact Club is Rotary-sponsored.

Crash Injures Fairfax Woman

A 24-year-old Fairfax woman sustained minor injuries today in a two-car collision at the Hub intersection.

San Anselmo police reported that Kathleen M. Lakusky, of 124 Toyon Drive, was injured about 12:10 a.m. when a car driven by Adolf Hengesbach, 33, of 216 Humboldt Street, San Rafael, turned into a one-way lane accidentally, causing a head-on collision.

Miss Lukusky was treated for a cut lip and scalp at Marin General Hospital.

More Honors For Neil Armstrong

BEVERLY HILLS (UPI) — Astronaut Neil Armstrong, the first man on the moon, was presented with the Kitty Hawk Memorial Award yesterday at the annual Wright Brothers memorial banquet attended by some 800 aviation pioneers.

The occasion was the 66th anniversary of powered flight by man.

Armstrong accepted similar awards for "outstanding contributions to the advancement of flight" on behalf of his companions on the Apollo 11 flight, astronauts Edwin F. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins.

Overdose Victim Out Of Hospital

A 51-year-old Mill Valley man has been discharged from Marin General Hospital after being treated for an overdose of pills.

Jack Wesley Newman of 107 East Strawberry Drive was taken to the hospital Wednesday after park rangers found him unconscious in a car at Stinson Beach State Park. The rangers called sheriff's deputies, who said that Newman's car contained a half-empty liquor bottle and partially filled vials of pills.

Sound Equipment Taken From Auto

A car radio, stereo and an unspecified number of stereo tapes were reported stolen Thursday from Kathy M. Jack, 4 Miramar Drive, San Rafael.

She told sheriff's deputies the items, valued at $295, were taken from her car while it was parked at the Koch Luggage Co. in Corte Madera.

San Quentin Aide Stabbed On Job By An Inmate

A San Quentin Prison factory superintendent was stabbed in the back, though not seriously, with a pair of six-inch scissors yesterday.

Associate Warden James W. L. Park said David Kahl, 42, of 1418 Debra Drive, Petaluma, was standing at a work table in the clothing factory about 3:45 p.m. when stabbed with trimming scissors that had been taped wide open.

Park said that Kahl, a civilian employee at the prison, was treated first at San Quentin then released to his own doctor.

Prison officials are holding Harland L. Black, 23, a life termer convicted of kidnapping in Orange County, in connection with the stabbing. Black has been at the prison for just over a month.

Park said there was apparent motive for the stabbing.

Conviction of assault by a life termer carries a possible death penalty.

Jail, Fines For Drunken Driving

Three persons were sentenced for drunken driving yesterday by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court.

George Wevster MacKinnon, 40, of 609 Wilson Avenue, Novato, was sentenced to five days in jail and placed on three years' probation. He was arrested July 21 in Novato.

Diana Laura Lopes, 20, of 457 Tennessee Valley Road, Mill Valley, was placed on six months' probation and fined $75. She was arrested Oct. 18. in Sausalito.

Albert William Josephs, 34, of San Bruno, was placed on one year probation and given a 15-day suspended jail sentence. He was arrested Aug. 22 in San Bruno.

Youth Denies Trio Of CHP Charges

Marc Torvend Ford, 22, of Mill Valley, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to charges of possessing a dangerous drug, destroying evidence and resisting arrest lodged by California Highway Patrol officers Wednesday.

A preliminary hearing was set for Tuesday.

His brother, George Shiff Ford III, 23, also of Mill Valley, pleaded innocent to the misdeameanor offense of resisting arrest and his case was set for jury trial April 6.

Narcotics Fine, Probation Granted

William Robert Herman, 21, of Fairfax, was placed on one year probation and fined $100 yesterday by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court. Herman had earlier admitted possessing a device for smoking narcotics at his home Sept. 15.

He had originally been charged with possessing marijuana afte drug agents searched his house upon getting a tip that 15 or 16 marijuana plants were visible through a window.

Youth Admits Theft From Music Store

Andrew Lawrence Stitch, 18, of San Rafael, pleaded guilty yesterday in Marin Superior Court to a charge of stealing a guitar from a San Rafael music store May 21.

He was ordered to appear in court Feb. 6 for sentencing on the grand theft conviction.

MOUNT TAMALPAIS CEMETERY
Natural Marin Beauty
for those who've loved our county

The beauty of Mount Tamalpais Cemetery is typically Marin. Here in a setting of soft, rolling hills and lovely vistas are Marin's native trees and shrubs, accented by beautiful lawns and flowers.
For over 90 years leading Marin families have chosen Mount Tamalpais as a final resting place. One good reason is the substantial endowment fund which assures the care and maintenance of this cemetery in the years ahead.
We invite your inspection of this peaceful site. Our staff is always ready to answer your questions and describe Mount Tamalpais facilities

'THE HOUSE OF BERNARDA ALBA'

Three members of an all-female cast are shown in a scene from the College of Marin's play. "The House of Bernarda Alba" which opened last night and is scheduled for its second showing tonight at 8:30 p.m. in the studio theater of the Fine Arts Building. At left is Karen Garrison, who portrays Bernarda Alba, a Spanish matriarch who rules her daughters, Marry Little (center) and Carla Sarvis, sternly. The play will also be performed tomorrow night and next Friday, Saturday and Sunday. (Independent-Journal photo)

Black Mayor Fires Pair For Marriage

DETROIT (AP) — A woman who was the only white public official in Fayette, Miss., says the city's Negro mayor fired her when she married a Negro city policeman.

Mrs. Martha Jenkins and her husband, Monroe, said they were both fired after their marriage by Mayor Charles Evers, a Negro.

"Mayor Evers said Fayette wasn't ready for mixed marriages and he would have to fire us," Mrs. Jenkins said in an interview with the Detroit News.

"He called a meeting of town aldermen and advised them to discharge us," the 28-year-old lawyer said. "And they did."

The News said Evers was not in Fayette and could not be reached for comment. However, it said a member of Evers' administration confirmed the firings but would not discuss the reason for the action.

Jenkins, also 28, joined the Fayette force last July after working in Milwaukee. His wife was an unpaid member of the mayor's staff and helped handle the city's legal problems.

Mrs. Jenkins, a native of Lansing, Mich., once worked on Mississippi cases for the Law Students Civil Rights Research Council.

The couple said they are seeking jobs in Michigan now.

Probation Granted On Reduced Charge

A 22-year-old San Anselmo man, who pleaded guilty in October to being in a place where narcotics were used, was placed on six months' probation yesterday by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court.

The charge, against Michael Brand Galvin, had been reduced from possession of marijuana, lodged when Galvin was arrested Aug. 25 on San Anselmo Avenue in San Anselmo.

Censorship By Selectivity Claim Raised By Yorty

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty has told a group of state newspaper publishers, "I don't think there is an urban problem that even compares with this war."

Mayor Yorty spoke last night at an annual banquet of the California Press Association, which also honored two publishers for leadership.

Stuart S. Taylor, of the Santa Barbara News-Press, received the publisher of the year award named for Justus F. Craemer, late co-publisher at the Independent-Journal, and William F. Knowland, of the Oakland Tribune, received a special citation for local and national leadership.

Because of the problems of space limitations and the publications' political affiliations and predilections, there "is great opportunity for censorship by selectivity," Yorty said.

He said "much of the reporting on Vietnam is one-sided."

He asked the publishers to "dig back" and locate quotations by newsmakers and then "quote back what they said.

"They said 'halt the bombings and the Communists would come to the negotiating table,' " Yorty said.

Calling the Vietnam war one in which the United States "telegraphs" punches, the mayor said "I would not want to go to Vietnam and fight under restrictions" such as de-escalation.

"But it is not just the Vietnam war," Yorty said. "I see a great national effort to discourage the United States from international participation. . . . from helping other nations." Later, he said the national effort is by the "international Communist party."

Yorty told the publishers they should "educate the people" instead of publishing "so much sensationalism."

Delegates to the 99th annual winter CPA conference elected Carroll W. Parcher, Glendale News-Press, as vice president and Ferdinand Mendenhall, Van Nuys Green Sheet, to the board of directors.

Reelected were Lowell E. Jessen, Turlock Journal, chairman of the board; J. Hart Clinton, San Mateo Times, president; Phillip N. McCombs, San Francisco, secretary-treasurer, and Jack Craemer, San Rafael Independent-Journal, recording secretary.

Error Kills Marinite's G.I. Son

Pfc. John A. Bossom, 20, son of Mrs. Theresa Williams of 600 Red Hill Avenue, San Anselmo, was killed Nov. 30 in Vietnam by "friendly forces," according to the Defense Department.

Bossom was taking part in a combat operation when he was "mistaken for a member of a hostile force and fired on by friendly forces," a telegram to Mrs. Williams said.

Born in Ukiah, Bossom had lived most of his life in Portland, Ore., and graduated from high school there.

He entered the service when he was 17 and was serving his second year in Vietnam.

In addition to his mother, Bossom is survived by a brother, Marine Sgt. Walter Bossom, serving on the USS Constellation in the South Pacific, and five sisters, Mrs. Shirley Comenrind of Medford, Ore.; Mrs. Carol Shroel of Newberg, Ore.; Mrs. Theresa McGuire of Vancouver, Wash.; Mrs. Barbara Benton and Mrs. Joyce Parmeter, both of Portland, Ore.

Burial will be in Willamette National Cemetery in Portland. Zoeller's Chapel of Roses in Portland, Ore., is handling funeral arrangements.

Both Alioto, Unruh Talk To Publishers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Assembly Minority leader Jess Unruh and San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, who may be opponents in a Democratic gubernatorial primary, talked to California publishers about some of the problems of seeking public office.

Unruh appeared before yesterday's 99th annual winter convention of the California Press Association as an announced candidate for nomination to oppose incumbent Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Alioto has not yet announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination, but committees of his supporters already are working to win him backing.

Unruh said the state's new campaign disclosure law will most likely spawn a "public revulsion" bringing about new forms of campaign financing for politicians.

"I don't know if anyone can be elected governor today without becoming so indebted to contributors" that he is obligated in the office, Unruh said. He quickly noted that his own campaign is "an experiment" to discount such observations.

Alioto, plaintiff in a $12.5 million libel suit against Look Magazine, said anyone seeking political office must accept "some defamatory statements."

"If he can't take it, he shouldn't seek the office."

Alioto said he knows of no one on the horizon better able to defeat Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Ailing Youth Missing, Needs Medication

A 21-year-old San Rafael man, who could die unless he receives medication to minimize convulsions from an undiagnosed illness was still missing today, 10 days after he left home without needed pills.

Michael Raymond Arnold was reported missing Saturday night by his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Arnold, with whom he lives at 1330 Fourth Street.

According to Arnold, his grandson left Nov. 24, the day after he quit his job as a file clerk for the State Compensation Insurance Fund in San Francisco. He told his grandparents he was going to visit a friend in San Francisco's North Beach.

Without medication, the young man, who contracted the sickness while in the service, is in danger of a fatal fall or convulsive suffocation, according to an Air Force doctor who has treated Arnold since his medical discharge.

Capt. Robert Blackwood of the Hamilton Air Force Base clinic said a convulsion could be expected within a week of the last medication.

Arnold is six feet, one inch tall, weighs 165 pounds and has brown hair and brown eyes. He has the word "Mother" tattooed on his left arm and a pair of dice tattooed on his right arm.

The young man's father, Raymond E. Arnold, arrived in San Rafael today from his home in Tacoma, Wash., and plans to join police in the search.

An Honest Waiter Gets Large Reward

HONG KONG (UPI) — A waiter who found and returned $27,000 worth of diamonds got a $350 reward for his hone sty yesterday.

Waiter Law Ping found the diamonds in the hotel room of a Japanese businessman last month and turned them into the hotel manager. The owner returned to Hong Kong to reward Ping.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

It's Going Too Far To Search Students For Teacher's Money

DEAR HELEN:

Quite a sum of money was stolen from our teacher. The principal came in and gave us a big fat lecture. He was so sure that one of us had taken the money that he decided to search us.

First our purses were turned upside down. Then he looked in all our shoes and pockets. As if that wasn't enough, the girls were taken to the nurse's office and practically stripped, and the boys got the same treatment.

Nothing was ever found. One teacher said that if we were innocent we shouldn't object to a little search to prove it.

Don't you think this was going too far? — BOILING

DEAR BOILING:

I certainly do. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

My folks say we can't get new furniture until I teach my cat not to scratch the davenport.

I made a really great rug-covered stand that any normal feline would flip over. I even rubbed catnip on it. What does ours do? He rubs his nose against it and purrs, then stalks over and scratches the holy heck out of cur sofa. I spank him, I yell, I even squirt him with a water pistol, but he waits until I'm out of the room and he's at it again.

Can anyone please tell me how you train a cat? — FED UP WITH A SHREDDER

DEAR FED:

Very slowly — if at all. You can lead a cat to a scratching board but you can't make him scratch — unless he wants to. Especially if he has discovered a favorite sofa-arm. Suggestions, anyone? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Everybody seems to be getting in on the act, so here's my "What Is A" contribution:

What Is A High School Athlete?

He's the one person who never brags about how much good he does for the team.

He's the one who spends long hours at practice but never complains about a single one (though you do, to yourself!)

He's that big strong guy who'd do anything for you — even to explaining the game — but you just don't understand.

He's the one you get to see least often, but then he makes up for it most.

He comes to your house to see you, and ends up watching "a very important game" on TV.

He's the one who calls you long enough to say, "I'm still alive," then rushes off to either homework or practice.

He's the one who reminds you of that terrific play he made, but just smiles if you didn't catch it.

His intentions are the greatest, but somehow the games always get in the way.

He's the one who makes you feel so proud, but you can't tell him because he'll blush.

He's the one important person in your life and you're awfully glad he's important to the school and all those other cheering people too. — STEPHANIE

Shelving

Metal strips fastened on the wall with adjustable brackets make shelving more flexible. In a long, narrow room, shelves on the shorter wall can help to improve the proportions of the room.

HELP To Distribute To Families

Christmas is a time when Marin individuals and groups wish to donate food, toys, clothing and furniture to help less fortunate families in the community.

This year Project HELP has taken on the responsibility to distribute the donated goods to low income families throughout the county, and has set up three Marin distribution centers to receive donations: in North Marin at 875 Grant Avenue, Novato; in Central Marin, at 918 C Street, San Rafael; and for Southern Marin at St. Andrew Presbyterian Church, Drake Avenue, Marin City.

Project HELP has been organized by the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council. Its work goes on year-long, but it making a special effort to coordinate the Christmas gifts, in conjunction with the Volunteer Bureau of Marin.

Many families cannot afford Christmas dinner and HELP will try to assist. Cash gifts will be converted into food certificates which are honored at local grocery markets, it reports.

Mrs. V. W. Sterling Is New President Of Novato Club

Being with her family and friends is most enjoyed by Mrs. Victor W. Sterling, newly elected president of the Novato Hostess Club.

MRS. VICTOR STERLING

Pat Sterling, the wife of the director of television station KRON, also enjoys golf, art and dancing. They have four sons. Steve is 17, Gary, 16, Rickey, 13 and Bill, 10 years old. The family, also known as Holshevnikoff, has lived in Marin more than two years.

A member of the hostess club for two years, Pat has also been chairman of the arts and crafts group and publicity.

The club helps acquaint new arrivals and present residents with the community. Any resident of Novato is eligible for membership.

The club members are raising funds for the Novato parks and are making plans for their holiday dinner-dance to be held on Dec. 27.

Officers elected to serve with Mrs. Sterling are Mmes. Archie Patton, vice president; Michael Stricklin, treasurer; John Ray, recording secretary, and Kenneth Place, corresponding secretary.

SEW SIMPLE

Furry Pillows Are Wonderful Gift Idea

By EUNICE FARMER

Here's a great "security blanket" for your boys and girls as they grow a little older. It goes with any type decor of their rooms and makes a wonderful Christmas gift idea.

There's nothing quite like the feel of fur to stir warmth in even the toughest little guys. Cover pillows in fake fur, and you'll have a friend for life.

You may buy inexpensive pillows or use ones that have outlived their covers. Either make a slip-cover type cover with a zipper on one end or, if you can't sew or don't want to spend that much time, simply hand whip the fur cloth to the pillow.

Even an amateur can look professional because the fur hides a multitude of errors. After seams have been stitched, pull out the fur fibers from the seams on the right side, and the seam will be completely disguised. This would also make a college boy or girl very happy.

DEAR EUNICE:

I have learned to cut corduroy the way you have suggested, but in the attractive ready-to-wear garments the nap seems to be running every which way. Many times the pants will be cut with the cross grain. Can the home sewer do the same thing? — JUDY R.

DEAR JUDY R.:

The important rule on corduroy is to remember to cut all the pieces of your pattern in one direction unless you are trying to achieve an unusual effect. Some of the most attractive sportswear this fall were made with the corduroy cut in many different directions. Cutting part of the garment on the bias can also give an interesting effect.

One of the most attractive I have seen was a tunic and pants. The tunic was worked in large patches from side to side and up and down to form the new patchwork look. The pants in this case were cut with the lengthwise grain of the corduroy. Today, it seems that anything goes, so get your imagination to work and have the courage of your creativity.

DEAR EUNICE:

Up until now I have always been a mere "hem-shortener sewer," but your column has inspired me so much that now I have the confidence to do anything. Sure, I have a few failures, but it's surprising how well my sewing does turn out since I have lost my fear of it.

Lately, I have seen a type of velvet I was never aware of. It is much like velveteen only much thicker and is called velour. Does this type of velvet have to be lined, and what is the purpose of having a heavier fabric that costs so much more? — MRS. V. J.

DEAR MRS. V. J.:

Velour has a much deeper pile that velveteen; because of this it is not only heavier but also much more beautiful. It is usually not underlined. If you prefer a lining for a dress, make it separate.

This velour is also waterproof and makes lovely dressy coats that can be worn for afternoon or evenings. Even though this velour has a pile instead of the smoother nap, all pieces of your pattern must be cut in the same direction.

Faye Margaret Brown Becomes Bride Of Sandor H. Straus

MR. AND MRS. SANDOR H. STRAUS
(Camera Center photo)

Faye Margaret Brown became the bride of Sandor Howard Straus last Saturday in a ceremony at the First Unitarian Church of Berkeley in Kensington.

She is the daughter of Frank M. Brown and Mrs. Margaret N. Brown of Greenbrae, and the bridegroom's parents are the Meyer Strauses of Philadelphia, Pa.

Madeleine Brown was her sister's maid of honor, and bridesmaids were the bridegroom's sisters, Esther and Barbara Straus.

Best man was Jack London of Berkeley, and the bride's brother, Geoffrey Brown, ushered.

A reception at the church followed the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of Redwood High School and the University of California, where she was affiliated with Alpha Xi Delta sorority and elected to Phi Beta Kappa honor society. Faye is employed with the Food Stamp Program of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in San Francisco. Her grandmothers are Mmes. Ida Brown of San Francisco and Mabelle Purser of Greenbrae.

Sandor is a graduate of the Akiba Academy of Philadelphia. He received the B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Pennsylvania and is working toward a Ph.D. degree in mathematics at the University of California. He is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Following a wedding trip to Hawaii the couple will live in Berkeley.

For Baby

A dampened washcloth and a bar of soap in a plastic bag ought to be standard equipment in the carrying case of a baby stroller or carriage. The items make quick clean-ups a breeze.

Fraser-Carlson Rite Held In San Rafael Church

Kathleen J. Carlson became the bride of Jesse Fraser last Saturday in an afternoon ceremony at Trinity Lutheran Church in San Rafael.

A reception followed at the San Rafael Yacht Club.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Carlson of Kodiak, Alaska, former residents of San Rafael. Jesse is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cullie Manning of Ignacio.

Mrs. Charles Tooth of South San Francisco was matron of honor, and the bridesmaid was Georgia (Muff) Mallin of San Francisco.

Larry Gruver of Fort Bragg was best man, and guests were ushered to their seats by the bride's brother, Carl W. Carlson of Mill Valley, and Frank Maguire of Petaluma.

Kathleen was graduated from Marin Catholic High School and Dominican College. She is employed at Children's Hospital and Adult Medical Center in San Francisco.

The bridegroom was graduated from Sir Francis Drake High School. He is employed by Operating Engineers in Concord. George Fraser of Encino and Mrs. James Deffendall of Indianapolis, Ind., are his brother and sister.

The couple will live in San Rafael following a wedding trip to South Lake Tahoe and Tahiti.

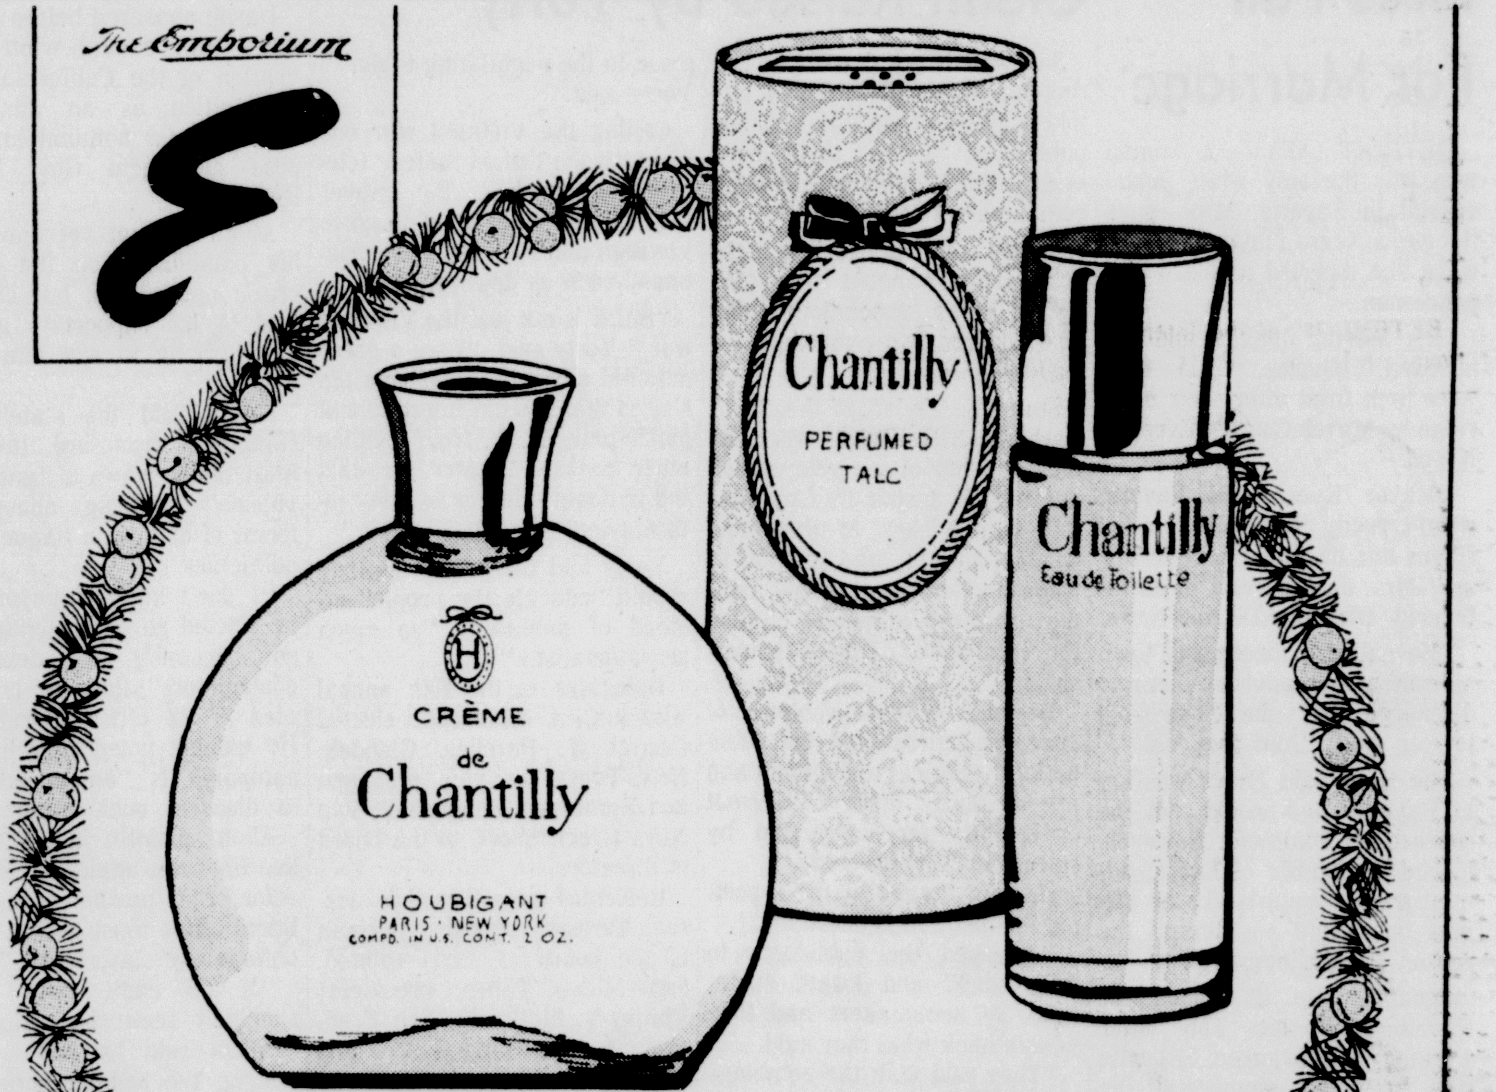
The Emporium



Chantilly . . . from the world's oldest house of fragrance

In Paris in 1775, Jean-Francois Houbigant took the flowers of the fields and created perfumes that enraptured the royalty of Europe. Chantilly, a woodsy, mossy and leafy perfume is an expression of this era, when love was forever and a fragrance could say more than words. Isn't it for someone you love! 3 pc. set—toilette water, talc and creme de Chantilly, for 4.50, bath powder, 3.50 and Spray Mist, 6.50.

FURRY HIDEOUT

For getting away from it all for awhile fur designer Jacques Kaplan has created a fur tranquilizer. Model Suzzane McDonnell demonstrates how one goes about retreating in the large, macaroni-shaped tunnel covered in steer skin and lined in lush caramel Majorca lamb, which Kaplan displayed yesterday along with his other fur-furniture creations.

When Decorating Your Home Be Honest About Yourself

An honesty about oneself is the most important thing in decorating, Carelton Varney, 32-year-old president of Dorathy Draper and Co., told an A. M. Lecture Series audience yesterday in San Anselmo.

A home should have a scrapbook look, Varney said, rather than a showcase look.

"Good decorating is not off a magazine cover. It is what you reflect of your own personality in that room. There is no style that is now. Now is you." The young decorator recently designed the stage sets for "Goodbye Mr. Chips" and has done the sets of "A Man For All Seasons" and "Oliver." He has won the Design Achievement Award and also designs men's hats, fabric and furniture.

Photographs of family members and friends belong in the living room, he said. "I've never relagated the important people in my life to the back hall."

Some of his other suggestions for decorating a home to reflect your life include:

"Hang children's art anywhere in your house. The frame is wiser spent on a painting by a child than on an expensive imitation of someone else's.

"When I'm working with someone I immediately go to their linen closet and look at the towels. They chose them immediately and it shows what colors they like.

"Sky Blue is the most neutral color there is. There is nothing that will not work with it.

"Let children chose their own colors. They have a wonderful eye color sense and can select plaids and patterns that will go beautifully.

"We overdo balance. Just because we like a table that doesn't mean we have to have two of them.

"You cannot chose paint colors from those little samples at the paint store. You have to see the paint on the surface. The surface will make a difference. And light colors go on darker.

"Windows are the eyes of the house and should look as good from the outside as the inside. Use window boxes and painted frames.

"If you have a picture window make sure it has a picture. And if it does don't hide it with cascading drapery.

"Mirrors should reflect something beautiful. Don't hang them to reflect a hallway.

"Plastic furniture has its place in the swimming pool and a very few other places. We will never come to a disposable world.

"Make your own fur rugs out of old coats from second hand stores. Cut them into squares and sew them together with twill tape, clean and line them."

Menotti Yule Classic Set By College

The traditional Christmas opera, "Amahl and the Night Visitors," will be presented in Marin and Southern Sonoma by the Sonoma State College Opera Workshop beginning next week.

Under the direction of Dr. Peggy Donovan-Jeffry, assistant professor of music, the opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti will be fully staged and costumed.

Performances in Ives Hall at the college have been scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday at 4:15 p.m.; Dec. 12 at 8 p.m.; and Dec. 13 at 2:15 and 8 p.m. Performances at San Rafael High School have been set for Dec. 20 at 3 and 7:30 p.m.

The lead role of the young cripple Amahl will be sung by four boys including three from Marin. They are Jack Packard, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Packard of Corte Madera; Cyril Hofmeister, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Hofmeister of San Rafael; Charles Gavin Jr., 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Gavin of San Rafael, and Marty Klatt, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor M. Klatt of Santa Rosa.

Other Marin and Southern Sonoma cast members include Marianne Rios of Novato, Mary Beard of Cotati, and Victor Parker and Dr. Allan Querin of Petaluma.

The Sonoma State Madrigal Singers, under the direction of E. Gardner Rust, will perform before the Friday and Saturday evening curtains go up.

Reservations may be made by contacting the offices of educational services at the college. Special rates are available for groups of 25 or more students.

"THIS IS MY BOX"—Gifts of jewels brought by one of the three kings in the Christmas opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors" enthral two Marin boys in the cast, Cyril Hofmeister (left), 11, of San Rafael, and Jack Packard, 12, of Corte Madera. Robert Moore of Santa Rosa plays one of the kings in the Sonoma State College Opera Workshop production which begins next week.

Church Has Use Of Console Organ

The Church of the Nativity in Marinwood has the use of a $10,000 console organ for a year and possibly two, according to Rev. David Barnette, vicar.

The organ was loaned to the church because of the building's "fine accoustics" by the Baldwin Organ Co., which hopes to use the church for demonstration purposes, Barnette said.

The organ was installed recently and the cost of installing the speakers was contributed by the Episcopal Church Women's organization.

Bach To Mozart Concert Series To Open Dec. 14

First of the three Bach to Mozart concerts in the 10th annual candlelight series sponsored by the Homestead Valley Community Association will be presented at Brown's Hall, Mill Valley, Dec. 14 at 8:15 p.m.

At 2:30 that afternoon in the same place some of the group will perform in the first of the three children's concerts sponsored by the association this year for the first time.

Highlight of the evening program will be "Pimpinone," a baroque chamber opera by Telemann, which will feature soprano Gwen Curatilo and baritone Edgar Jones. It will be narrated by Donald Pippin of Old San Francisco Spaghetti Factory fame, who has also prepared the translation and orchestra parts.

Though not a fully staged production, it will have dramatic action and costumes.

Instrumentalists will open the program with the Sonata in D Major by Petronio Franceschini and perform between the acts of the opera the Sonata for Trumpet by Domenico Gabrielli, featuring Edward Haug, and Concerto for Oboe by Tomaso Albinoni, featuring Raymond Duste.

For the afternoon children's concert works by Handel, J. S. Bach, Vaughan Williams, J. Quantz and Franceschini will be performed.

Duste will explain the instruments and use of the voice and comment on the music.

Ticket information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Martin Goldschmidt of Mill Valley or Ursula Davidson of San Rafael.

Jury Deadlocks In Fraud Case

A jury in Marin Superior Court deadlocked yesterday in the case of Gilbert Loris De Costa, 30, of San Rafael, accused of signing another person's name to a stolen credit card at a San Rafael gas station in July.

He allegedly used the card to purchase about $6 worth of gasoline.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner said a new trial date would be set Monday.

DRAMA REVIEW

'Enter Laughing' An Amateur's Vehicle?

By KARL BARRON

PETALUMA — "Enter Laughing," Joseph Stein's dramatization of Carl Reiner's autobiographical novel, may become to the '70s what "The Torchbears" has been to the Torchbearers" has been to the which amateurs can masochistically poke fun at themselves.

The story of Reiner's entry into show business as a dreadful ham is funny if done with whiplike pace and good Jewish accents — the current production by Little Hills Theatre at the multipurpose room of Petaluma High School has neither.

It does have some amusing moments and a couple of praiseworthy performances, but in the long run it's a rather dreary affair.

DIALECTS FAIL

Director Elizabeth Martin has some likely talent to work with, but has failed to keep it functioning steadily. The result is actors who speak Yiddish dialects one moment, Irish the next, and a strange hodgepodge resembling my impression of Swahili at other times.

I had thought that the days of actors who completely blow lines was gone, but the lack of communication in a couple of scenes last night had me feeling really sorry for the people on stage. Line uncertainty adds to the slow pace.

Stein has many short, choppy scenes, and technical director Troy Wicker has deisgned clever sliding set units to eliminate delays. If they functioned, they would, but they don't. So there are many waits, and the pace suffers still more.

PLAY LACKING

In all fairness to the Little Hills group, which I have not seen before, the play itself is not all that funny.

Jim Adams, who plays the Reiner character, is most uneven, giving the impression at times of a mad puppet seeking asylum.

As for the good things about the show, the best is Dr. Frank Foster's easy, direct playing of the hapless soul who is divested of his dress suit so that David (Reiner) can make his stage debut. Foster shows good timing, gets his laughs and wastes no hand flapping about it. Which is more than can be said for many others in the large cast. Excellent in his role and showing great promise is a young man named Linzy Hudson. Mary Johns has charming moments as David's girl friend, but is allowed to overemote terribly.

Alize Patz doesn't need to try so hard at being cute; she's already a cute girl and destroys her natural appeal by overdoing the Betty Boop routine.

SINCERE MOMENTS

Bob Armbruster, in spite of an accent that roves about the globe, manages some very sincere moments as David's boss. Ann Zodel and Lou Isselin are also spottily good as the parents, and Bill Bergman contributes a small but very believable cameo as a stage manager.

Little Hills Theatre is a class in Adult Education of the Petaluma City Schools.

"Enter Laughing" will be presented tonight and next Friday and Saturday at 8:30 o'clock.

Met Buffs Happy; Unions May Get To Rehearsals

NEW YORK (AP) — Stacks of unused tickets for the 1969-70 Metropolitan Opera season gather dust in a desk drawer of cosmetics maker Charles Revson, one of a legion of opera buffs that has been wondering whether the curtain ever will rise again.

Now, with a contract settlement possible as early as Monday, the Met hopes it may be able to present an abbreviated season beginning around Christmas. The opera company's $45 million house failed to open in mid-September.

The delay was caused by the management's decision not to begin rehearsals until agreement was reached on all labor contracts. The unions, which had not called a strike, termed this decision a "lockout" and stiffened their demands.

The orchestra voted Wednesday night to accept the first three years of a four-year management proposal and the artists' union negotiators followed suit Thursday. The stagehands negotiate today. Choristers and dancers will try to settle on Monday.

The contract now proposed by management would, over three years, raise weekly pay for musicians from $260 to $325; soloists without individual contracts from $325 to $375; choristers $194 to $250; and dancers from $140 to $215.

Pay increase sought at the start of negotiations last summer included 50 per cent raises for musicians, 140 per cent for choristers and 200 per cent for dancers.

Management estimates that the increases offered would double last year's operating deficit of $3.5 million. Much of the deficit is picked up by the opera's approximately 800 private and corporate patrons.

Many patrons, including some who give many times the minimum $1,000, prefer to remain anonymous. More than 115 companies and foundations patronize the opera starting at $500 for foundations, $2,500 for companies.

Whether they are enthusiastic opera buffs or attend only occasionally, the patrons have been upset by the Met's five-month absence.

"I was waiting, hopeful it would be over by now," said patron Mrs. Charles Payson, owner of the Mets baseball team.

Tidal Waterways Proposal Again Before Planners

A new ordinance to control filling and building on all tidal waterways will get another review by the Marin County Planning Commission Monday at 9 a.m. in the Civic Center.

At the last meeting on Nov. 24, Normand H. Traverso, executive manager of the Marin Property Owners Association, charged that the ordinance draft is too wordy and includes too many restrictions against siltation, sedimentation, and destruction of Wildlife habitats.

The second item on the agenda is the proposed Laird's Landing subdivision of 63 lots between Tomales Bay and Pierce Point Road, within the area designated for the Point Reyes National Seashore.

Last Tuesday, the Marin County Board of Supervisors passed a 90-day interim ordinance prohibiting development in the seashore area. This ordinance will expire on March 2, 1970, unless it is extended. County Planning Director Paul C. Zucker will recommend that action on the 319-acre project be put off until March 2.

Bank of America will seek approval for projecting signs on its branch banks at Point Reyes Station and Tomales. The bank seeks signs that project seven feet from the building instead of lying flat against the wall.

At 11 a.m., a hearing will be held on the Roundtree condiminium townhouse project on the south side of Miller Creek Road near Las Gallinas Avenue, Marinwood. U.S. Development Corp. of Walnut Creek plans 150 townhouses on 12.7 acres of land, with homes selling at $19,500 to $24,500.

In the afternoon, the planning commissioners will consider the tentative map of Forest Hills subdivision, a 10-lot project on seven acres at the corner of Homestead Boulevard and Ferndale Avenue, Tamalpais Valley.

ART REVIEW

Tiny Landscapes And Puddles Of Paint

By LAURA DEUENDORF

There are moments when Frances A. McKinney's tiny unpeopled landscapes make a painted place seem a living one.

The overall impression of her work being exhibited through Jan. 3 at Torrance Galleries, 128 Greenfield in San Anselmo, is that the smaller she works the better. The larger oils start falling apart both structurally and in the quality of her technique. But the little canvases usually keep their grip on both and on the viewer as well.

At their best, Miss McKinney's scenes are like remembered private experiences that were once very moving and so remained crystallized in the mind. They have the sort of honesty that evokes recognition of a time and place whether or not you have actually been there.

A sunny Sierra meadow, trees in seasonal stages and several eroding barns have this quality, enhanced by an understated palette that is chill with the lonely grays of weathered wood and dark wet earth.

Even so, these scenes are not stickily sentimental. They are more impersonally observed and methodically put together than that. Which is probably one of the strongest reasons the good ones reach out as convincingly as they do.

Also being shown at Torrance this month are Clyde Barnett's dripping pools of paint. Barnett, rather than having been emancipated from the confines of realism, has been trapped by his uncontrolled experimental technique.

Stringy drools and garish spreading puddles of enamel often take on the look of ogling ostriches. And Barnett doubles the impression by adding black and white dot eyes like those plastic ones that roll around.

In a few cases the mingling trails of paint and dots work out wittily as in the feathery, bug-eyed "Royal Birds." They seem intended to be what they are, supported by the way the paint is applied rather than just content invented after the fact. And it's here that Barnett has a good idea worth developing.

However, most of the others are handicapped by Barnett's hang-up with "how," rather than "what" is being done and his ideas are defeated on the way to making them visual.

In recent years, the world has become somewhat easier for the sizable minority of left-handed people. Manufacturers now turn out left-handed golf clubs, egg beaters, fishing reels, desks, and other articles. Some banks furnish left-handed checkbooks, the stubs to the right of the checks.

A 1970 Goal: More Cultural Youth Events

More cultural programs for youngsters h ave been set as one of the 1970 goals for the Rohnert Park Cultural Arts Commission.

Commissioner Nancy Thiesfeld reported Thursday that 120 elementary aged youngsters have signed up to attend the Dec. 13 performance of "Amahl and the Night Visitors" at Sonoma State College, showing that there is interest for commission-sponsored programs.

She said that two buses will leave city hall at 1 p.m. and each child will pay 25-cents for the ticket with the commission paying the remaining 50-cents of the ticket cost and providing transportation.

Mrs. Thiesfeld said the commission will consider field trips to area museums and other musical programs.

The Rohnert Park Cultural Arts Commission also:

CHAIRMAN — Elected Mrs. Thiesfeld as chairman to replace Dr. William O. Cord, who resigned because he plans to travel in the next year while on sabbatical leave from Sonoma State College.

ADULT CLASSES — Discussed the possibility of working with the adult education division of the Petaluma schools to set up more cultural classes for adults in Rohnert Park.

ART CONTEST — Discussed the possibility of sponsoring an annual children's art festival.

Panel Selects Acting Chairman

Marc W. Tracy of Novato High School was elected acting chairman of the newly created Marin Youth Commission at its first meeting Thursday in the Civic Center.

The youth commissioners set another meeting for 7 p.m. Dec. 15 in the board of supervisors chambers at Civic Center to discuss youth needs and recommendations to be made to the board of supervisors.

The youth commission comprises six youths appointed by the supervisors, a seventh youth to be named by the first six and four adults representing the Marin County Juvenile Delinquency Prevention, Juvenile Justice, Human Rights, and the Parks and Recreation commissions.

If all the coal mined in the United States in one year were used as paving material, it could build 12 superhighways — each 50 feet wide, one foot thick, and almost 3,000 miles long.

City's Librarian Plans To Retire

Mill Valley librarian Dorothy Thomas told the city's library board she plans to retire sometime in early 1970.

Mrs. Thomas on Thursday said she is aiming toward an April retirement date but announced her plans last night to give the trustees time to select a replacement.

She will have been the city's librarian for 20 years on Jan. 1.

Woman's Arm Hurt When Hit By Auto

Danae Douglas, 16, of 500 San Francisco Boulevard, San Anselmo, was treated for a bruised left arm and leg at Kaiser Foundation Hospital Thursday after she was struck by a car in a San Rafael crosswalk, police reported yesterday.

Driver of the car Richard Eagon McMullen, 23, of 68 Brookdale Avenue, San Rafael, according to police, said he was blinded by the sun and did not see the girl at Fifth Avenue and D Street at 2:24 p.m., police said.

Reception For Demo

A public reception for Richard M. Adams of Belvedere, a potential candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fourth Senatorial District, will be held at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday at the Belvedere home of Leonard M. Sperry Jr., of 20 Crest Road. Adams is considering running for the seat held by Republican Sen. John F. McCarthy.

We were pleasantly fascinated by the phenomenal response to our first real sale: brought in more dough in 3 days than we usually see in a month, just because we slashed prices beyond all reason. Therefore, and herewith, let it be known to all those buying presents: the ridiculous low prices on everything in the store—leather, leather accessories, natural skin area rugs, fabrics, garments, jewelry, all of it, not just clearance items.

WHO KNOWS WHAT EVIL LURKS IN THE HEARTS OF USED CARS?

We invite you to compare our cars with others. Because we at Felton's know a used car can be a thing of beauty on the outside and a mass of corruption on the inside. Our 16-point inspection takes us to parts of the car rarely traveled by used car dealers. When we find it pure at heart . . . then it's ready for you.

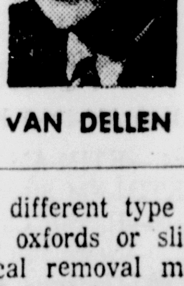
HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

A Danger Sign: Triangle Area Appearing On The Face



VAN DELLEN

A triangular area on the face is regarded as dangerous. Its base is a line extending through both corners of the mouth and the peak is located on the forehead just above the bridge of the nose. The area includes the entire nose, inner part of the eyebrows, and upper lip.

Why is the triangle dangerous? Infections in this area may spread directly to a large vein of the brain (cavernous sinus). This is always a possibility because one of the lesser veins that drains the area makes a connection with this cerebral venous center. In addition, these vessels have no valves and as a result the blood may flow in all directions.

AN INFLAMMATION in this area irritates the walls of the cavernous sinus and shortly thereafter the entire passageway is blocked with clotted blood. Once this develops, the outcome is extremely poor (80 per cent die). On the other hand, most infections in the dangerous triangle respond rapidly to treatment. Never squeeze or scratch a pimple or other infection. See your physician because the infection can be controled with applications of hot, wet dressings and an antibiotic such as penicillin.

Many infections in this area are traced originally to plucking nasal hairs or eyebrows. They may also follow a scratch or injury. The risk of developing a cavernous sinus thrombosis is very small considering how often women pluck these hairs. Cleanliness is of utmost importance. And, should the area become red and swollen, call the physician.

WHEN THE infection spreads via the veins to the brain, the temperature may reach 106 degrees Fahrenheit. The eyelids swell and vision is impaired. Headache, listlessness, and paralysis of certain cranial nerves ensue. Unless the infection can be controled with massive doses of antibiotics and an anticoagulant such as heparin, the victim may lapse into coma and die.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.

KICKS OWN ANKLE

B.P. writes: When I walk, I often kick myself on the ankle. Do you think this could be corrected by wearing special shoes?

REPLY

Yes. Bars on the soles of the shoes would alter the stance and properly distribute the weight on the feet when walking. You must help by learning to walk properly. Our leaflet on this topic may be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

HEEL BUMPS

B.E. writes: How can hard bumps on the heels be removed? They came from wearing pumps.

REPLY

If these represent calluses, relife may be obtained by covering the area with adhesive tape or wearing a different type of shoe, such as oxfords or sling pumps. Surgical removal may be necessary if the defect represents a bony growth or bursitis.

HEATING PAD

N.H. writes: Is it harmful to keep a heating pad on my back all night? I have arthritis at the base of my spine and heat is the only thing that gives me any relief.

REPLY

No, but be sure to keep it on the low setting to avoid a burn.

DON'T WE ALL?

S.G. writes: I feel miserable when I work. So much so, that I must lie down and rest and then I feel better. Have you any advice for me?

REPLY

What a convenient disease. If it's catching, no one in your family will get any work done.

COLD SOOTHES

H.W. writes: Are cold drinks and ice cream bad for a cough or a sore throat? Please advise.

REPLY

Cold liquids have a soothing effect on sore throat. Some physicians also recommend the use of an ice bag over the front of the neck.

Freeway Child's Parents Held Over

BAKERSFIELD (UPI)—The mother of 5-year-old Jody Lansdown and her common-law husband were bound over to superior court yesterday for arraignment on charges of abandoning the child beside a freeway.

Municipal Court Judge Doyle Miller took the action after denying a motion for dismissal on a charge of placing the child in circumstances likely to produce bodily harm. Mrs. Betty Louise Fouquet, 26, and her husband, Ronald Francis Fouquet, 31, also are charged with willful child abandonment.

They are accused of leaving Jody, Mrs. Fouquet's child by a previous marriage, beside U.S. Highway 99 about 25 miles south of Bakersfield last Oct. 24.

Police Arrest Parole Violator

A 30-year-old man from Redlands, San Bernardino County, was arrested in San Rafael yesterday when a routine check disclosed he was wanted for parole violation in Alameda County, police reported.

Alan Arthur Graves was booked into Marin County Jail for Alameda authorities who had issued a felony warrant for his arrest.

Graves was a passenger in a car driven by Robert Louis Guay, 20, of San Francisco, which was stopped by a patrol car at 4:04 a.m. on Lincoln Avenue after it was seen traveling without lights. Guay was cited for having open containers of beer in his car, police said.

Petaluma Council To Eye Bond Date

The timing of a proposed fire department and street improvement bond election will be considered at an adjourned meeting of the Petaluma City Council Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The council is considering a bond election to raise $200,000 for a new fire station and station additions and $800,000 to construct an extension to Caulfield Lane and the widening of Hopper and D Streets. Both February and June have been considered for the election.

The council will also hear a report from Councilman Phillip L. Joerger on a meeting with the Petaluma Sanitary Disposal Service on a rate increase.

The ringneck pheasant may not be a native species, but he's no newcomer either. He landed in New York State first between 1728 and 1731 when Governor James Montgomery stocked several dozen on what is now known as Governor's Island in New York harbor.

Gifts Sought For Children In Hospitals

Gifts for children in the wards at Sonoma and Napa state hospitals will be collected at the third annual Christmas party sponsored by the Marin Co-op and Marin Association for Mental Health on Dec. 13.

Dr. Robert W. Burke of San Rafael, playing Santa Claus, will collect the unwrapped gifts at the party in the Co-op meeting room at 71 Tamal Vista Drive, Corte Madera.

A performance by the Mime Troupe of San Francisco will open the two sessions of the party at 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Group singing of Christmas carols will be accompanied by guitars. Punch and cookies will be served.

Among gifts recommended for children in the hospital are: Art supplies, such as watercolor paints, art paper, crayons, blunt scissors, clay, paint brushes, yarn and burlap; wading pools; indestructible toys; dolls; books; games; cards; various type of balls; food and records for teen-agers.

Information may be obtained from Mrs. Daniel C. Beittel of 1368 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael.

Liver Switch Fatal To Boy

DENVER (AP) — A small Seattle boy died late yesterday, less than 24 hours after surgeons gave him a transplanted chimpanzee liver in a last-chance effort to save his life.

Tests following the 14-hour operation at the University of Colorado Medical Center showed the liver was functioning but the 7-months-old child remained critically ill, surviving as long as he did only with the aid of a respirator.

The child, not identified further by the hospital, grew weaker during the night and died shortly before midnight, a spokesman said.

TOMORROW IS PEARL HARBOR DAY

It was on a Sunday morning Dec. 7, 1941, that Americans learned they were involved in the armed struggle that had been spreading across the world since the late 30s. Striking the most deadly aerial blow ever unleashed up to that time, the Japanese sank the battleship Arizona (above) and others anchored in Pearl Harbor, killing 2,243 officers and men. Today, a simple memorial (below) marks the Arizona's resting place, where tomorrow memorial rites will recall the battle that brought the U.S. into World War II.

Academy Trio In Competition

Three San Rafael Military Academy students have been chosen to represent their school in a competition to select the Outstanding Teen-ager of America for 1970.

They are: Steven J. Appleby of San Rafael, Kevin V. McCloskey of Martinez and Gregory R. Jenny of Dixon, Solano County. The boys, nominated by the Academy, were selected by the Outstanding American Foundation, a nonprofit Chicago foundation whose purpose is to honor and encourage young people.

The three were selected on the basis of ability and achievement and will compete with other teen-agers in California for the Governor's Trophy, presented annually to the most outstanding teen-ager of each state. State winners will compete in a national competition.

Gifted Child's Education Is Topic Of Series

An 11-week course, "Education of the Gifted Child," for parents and teachers will be presented by the Adult Education Committee of the San Rafael Association for Gifted Children at San Rafael High School next month.

The course will be given on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The first five weeks will be devoted to special problems encountered in educating the gifted child such as underachievement, aggression-hostility and discipline. Mental health and social adjustments of gifted children will also be discussed.

The techniques parents and teachers can use in attacking the problems in teaching the children will be discussed during the last six weeks.

Information on registration may be obtained from Dr. A. G. Scottolini at 30 Bret Harte Road, San Rafael.

Peace Rally Set For Greenbrae

A peace rally for the "silent majority" residents of Greenbrae and Kentfield who oppose President Richard M. Nixon's policy will be held at 11 a.m. next Saturday on the Wolfe Grade School field.

Bryce W. Anderson, executive city editor of the Independent-Journal, and Rev. Roswell Gordon of the First Presbyterian Church, San Anselmo, will speak as the rally opens, to begin a discussion among participants, organizers reported.

The Neighborhood Peace Committee working on the project urged residents to walk to the school, joining friends and neighbors along the way.

In case of inclement weather, the rally will be held in the school library.

Las Vegas Visitors Lose Lives In New Mexico Crash

ALBUQUERQUE (UPI)—The lure of Las Vegas frequently tugged the group from the barren west Texas Panhandle.

Usually when they went, they stayed at a plush hotel where the cheapest room is $25 a night. This time they stayed four days.

At midmorning yesterday the 11 funlovers climbed aboard Carroll Thompson's twin-engine Lockheed Lodestar for the three hour 40-minute flight to Dalhart.

Near Albuquerque, Thompson ran into rough weather. When he was just east of the 10,600-foot-high Sandia mountains he decided to return to Albuquerque, nestled at the western foot of the rugged Sandias.

About 500 yards from the runway the plane exploded and crashed, killing all 11.

"I heard the plane and, looked out a window, I saw it was flying awful low. Then it exploded and people began to fall out," said Mrs. Carolyn Corley, who has lived in a neat cream-colored stucco home on the edge of Coronado Airport since 1946.

Wreckage, luggage and bodies were strewn along the plane's path.

Bernalillo county coroner Dr. Gerome Greenblatt said the 11 bodies—eight men and three women—were scattered on the tumbleweed-covered plain.

Scattered amid the wreckage were two partially burned $20 bills.

It was the worst airplane crash in New Mexico since a Trans World Airlines plane crashed into Sandia Peak in February, 1955, killing 11 persons.

Flu Sweeps France

PARIS (UPI) — Drug manufacturers today reported they were unable to keep up with demand for medicine to cope with an Asian influenza epidemic sweeping France.

From the Spanish border across the entire south of the country, 25 per cent of the inhabitants were estimated confined to bed with flu.

HOW TO PLAY BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

It's Frustrating Task To Teach The Art Of A Finesse

Like everybody else who works with bridge players, I have spent thousands of hours teaching beginners to take a simple finesse.

And after they have emerged from their cocoons, I spend more thousands of hours teaching them not to take that same kind of simple finesse. It's all very frustrating.

OPENING LEAD

If you consider only the clubs in the hand shown today, you'll see that the opening lead gives you the chance to take a simple finesse.

You can play a low club from the dummy to make sure of winning a trick with the queen of clubs.

If East has the king of clubs, he can play it; but that makes the queen good for a later trick.

If East doesn't have the king of clubs, South can win the first trick with the queen.

That's what I would point out if you were a beginner.

It isn't a difficult lesson, but most beginners need to have it pointed out.

CHANGED LESSON

The lesson must be changed for an experienced player.

South must not take that simple finesse in clubs at the first trick.

If East has the king of clubs, he will win the first trick and shift to hearts. Then the defenders will easily get three heart tricks in addition to the king of clubs and the ace of diamonds. South will go down one.

TO PROTECT CONTRACT

Declarer can make sure of his contract by playing the ace of clubs at the first trick and then developing the diamonds.

East can take the ace of diamonds and a club, but cannot prevent South from taking four diamonds, three spades, one heart and at least one club.

The beginner concentrates on winning as many tricks as he can in each suit.

The experienced player must think of the hand as a whole before he takes a finesse.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player bids two diamonds.

You hold:
♠ K J 7
♦ Q 10 6 2
♣ A 10 9 4.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Double.

You will probably win two diamond tricks, a club and a spade, and your partner should win about three tricks for his opening bid.

You will thus collect a two-trick penalty if partner has a minimum opening bid.

If partner has more than minimum strength, you should collect a bigger penalty, more than enough to compensate you for not bidding a game of your own.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Dec. 6, the 340th day of 1969 with 25 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Venus and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1917, 1,630 persons died when a Belgian relief ship and a French munitions vessel collided and exploded in the harbor at Halifax, Nova Scotia.

In 1933, Americans crowded into liquor stores and cafes to buy their first legal alcoholic beverages in 13 years.

In 1941, President Franklin Roosevelt sent a note to Tokyo, saying he hoped Emperor Hirohito was giving "thought in this definite emergency of dispelling the dark (war) clouds." Japan attacked Pearl Harbor the next day.

In 1943, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower became commander-in-chief of Operation Overlord, the forthcoming invasion of the continent of Europe.

A thought for the day: President Franklin Roosevelt said, "We, too, born to freedom and believing in freedom, are willing to fight to maintain freedom."

Guest Will Address Church Prayer Forum

Special guest at Holy Innocents' Parish, Corte Madera next week will be Don W. Basham, author of "Face Up to a Miracle." He will address the weekly Wednesday evening Prayer Forum, at 8 p.m.

Dr. Basham has had ministries in Toronto, Canada, and in Pennsylvania, and he has made tours of Europe and the United States and is active in the Charismatic nenewal.

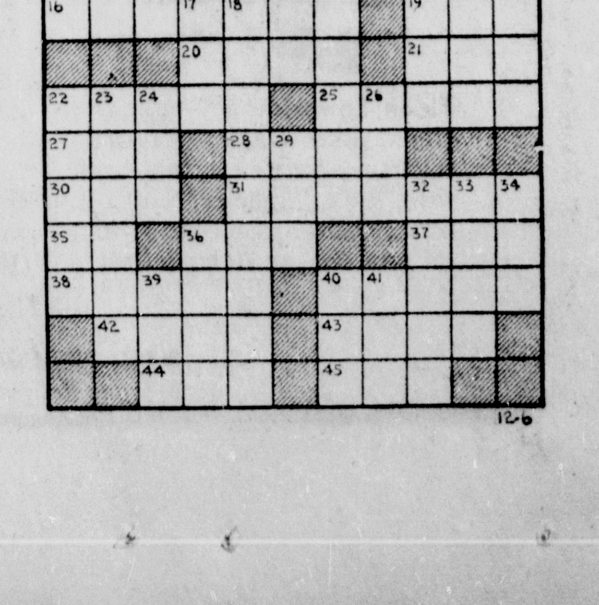
Yesterday's Answer



High Court Picks Ethics Watchdogs

WASHINGTO N(AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger yesterday appointed 10 federal judges to oversee the off-bench activities of all federal judges.

Three of the 10 judges, working together as a review committee, are to receive reports every three months of any payments of more than $100 any federal judge acquires for out-of-court activity.

A second, seven-man committee will function as an advisory panel. This group will pass judgment on teaching, lecturing, writing, work with charitable organizations and service on boards of colleges, churches and other nonprofit institutions.

Burger's announcement, made at the Supreme Court, said this committee will give its opinions "upon request." Presumably this means unless the seven review judges are asked what they think about an off-bench job they will give no advice nor render an opinion.

Burger said the two committees will serve until the American Bar Association completes its current study of revising the canons of judicial ethics and until the new canons are adopted by the judicial conference. This study is headed by Chief Judge Roger Traynor of the California Supreme Court and is expected to take about a year.

The judicial conference asserts no authority over the Supreme Court and its justices evidently will not make the quarterly reports all other federal judges will submit.

12th Night Yule Event Canceled

Tiburon's annual 12th Night Christmas tree burning ceremony has been canceled by Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commission in order to comply with the Jan. 1 ban on backyard and outdoor burning.

Chairman George Ellman said commissioners agreed Thursday that in the interests of clean air and conservation they should not press for a burning permit for the traditional ceremony, scheduled for Jan. 6.

Commissioners F. G. Knight and Donald S. Tayer were named to a committee to develop another civic function to be held later in the spring replacing the tree burning ceremony, Ellman said.

The nation's population may reach 360 million by the year 2000 and unless home construction increases by 50 per cent over current levels, many of them will not be housed.

Trio Hurt When Struck By Truck

Two boys received minor injuries and a third a fractured wrist Thursday when they ran in front of a panel truck driven by Remi Pierre Larrieu, 59, of 215 Orris Terrace, San Rafael, police reported yesterday.

Timothy Cook Kenney, 11, of 276 Fairhills Drive, was treated at Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital for a fractured left wrist after the accident at 4:15 p.m. in front of 5 Fairhills Drive, police said.

Peter Whitney Clifford, 11, of 200 Forbes Street and Walter William Bagley, 12, of 592 Fairhills Drive, received unspecified injuries and did not need medical attention, according to police.

Wheeling, Dealing A's In Four-Player Trade

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Oakland Athletics traded infielder Ted Kubiak and pitcher George Lauzerique to the Seattle Pilots today for shortstop Ray Oyler and relief pitcher Diego Segui, a former Oaklander.

Both of the American League clubs have been busy in the trading mart at baseball's winter meetings.

Kubiak, a second baseman and shortstop, hit .249 in 92 games last season. Lauzerique posted a 5-3 record for Des Moines in the American Association and a 3-4 mark for Oakland last season.

Segui, a Cuban right-hander, had been purchased from Oakland in the expansion draft last year. He had a fine season with a 12-6 won-lost record, 12 saves and a 3.36 earned run average in 66 games.

Oyler, a fine fielding, light-hitting former Detroit Tiger, batted only .165 in 106 games last season.

It was the third trade of the week by the Athletics. Earlier they traded pitcher Jim Nash to Atlanta for outfielder Felipe Alou, and first baseman Danny Cater and shortstop Ossie Chavarria to the New York Yankees for pitcher Al Downing and catcher Frank Fernandez.

Redwood, Sonoma Win Basketball Thrillers

STUNT IN THE SNOW

San Marin, Drake Cop Overtimes

The high and the mighty in Sonoma and Marin counties high school basketball knocked haads on two different courts last night, and Redwood, the Marin County Athletic League favorite, and Sonoma, North Bay League II favorite, came up hair-pin winners in non-league encounters.

Redwood just did squeeze by North Bay I favorite Santa Rosa, 57-55 at Larkspur, while Sonoma nicked a strong Petaluma team, 58-57, behind the scoring of Dan Briggs and Tom Waldron.

Tom Marker scored from the corner with 18 seconds left to give Redwood its third straight win against one loss. Jerry Piro led the scoring with 15 points while 6-foot-6 junior Bill Challender had 16 rebounds and 13 points.

In other games last night, Drake opened its season by catching Vallejo in overtime, 64-58, San Marin did the same overtime job to Piner of Santa Rosa, 61-58, and Tamalpais topped Poly of San Francisco, 64-57 and San Rafael whipped Healdsburg, 58-49.

LOSING LEDGER

On the losing ledger were Terra Linda, which was belted by DeAnza of Richmond, 84-50 and Novato, which dropped a harrowing, 60-59 decision to San Francisco powerhouse Lowell.

Drake, which had trailed by six points at one point, won it in overtime when Glenn Pfaff sank both ends of two one-in-one free throw situations.

Gary Howard, who had scored a bucket to tie the game for San Marin, won it with a clinching pair of free throws in overtime as he scored 32 points to lead the Mustangs.

Tamalpais outscored Poly, 19-8, in the final period, to give Coach Bernie Schneider his first victory over the city school since joining the Indians, almost four years ago.

Golf, Alias Palmer, Is Still Very Alive

We bring you today a medical bulletin direct from the critical ward and intensive care unit of Sports.

You can put away the beads, and hold the flowers, and call off the death watch.

Golf is able to sit up and take nourishment.

For the first time, doctors hold out hope for its complete recovery. Respiration normal, pulse stronger, temperature falling. They've removed the oxygen tent.

You will remember Golf came down with an 82 and a medically baffling disorder of the hip and backswing last summer, and took to its bed. Prognosis was not good. Some thought the case terminal. Others felt a long and painful road back was the best to hope for.

Well, Golf is alive and well and living in Latrobe, Pa. When last seen it was wearing a tan sweater, two-tone shoes, and knocking in 30-foot putts.

Some Typical Signs Of Recovery

Golf's given name is Arnold Palmer. Sometimes, it is little telltale things that indicate to a doctor a patient is on the road to recovery—a movement of a blanket, flutter of an eyelid, spot of color on a cheek. Sometimes, the patient just comes to and asks what day it is.

They knew Golf was on the mend when Palmer jerked a 3-wood out of the bag and asked the caddy to go up and hold the pin. They knew Golf was on the way back when Palmer had a choice of going under a tree or around it — and he went THROUGH. They knew Golf was recuperating when he shot a 68 on a course so tough that — on the last day when only good players were left—no one broke par, two shot 80, and nearly a half-dozen shot 77's. The host pro had trouble breaking 100.

If you think I've got my patients mixed, that the two are not interrelated, that Palmer might be sick but Golf was healthy, don't sell that to Larry Ziegler. During the period when Golf was on the shelf, Larry won his only tournament. And there wasn't enough money to pay off.

You Have To Play Off Someone

Guys who were bidding up the purses to the stratosphere when Palmer and Jack Nicklaus were matching birdies suddenly stopped answering the phone.

HE'S GOING LIKE 60

Cerrudo's Fortune: $617

MIAMI (AP) — There's a definite chance that Ron Cerrudo of Napa will not win the $125,000 Danny Thomas Diplomat Golf Classic, not the way Gay Brewer is shooting.

But Cerrudo has practically nailed down something almost as important for him. He's got almost the No. 60 spot in the 1969 earnings assured simply by qualifying for the final two rounds of the tournament, which guarantees him some kind of earnings for the week's work.

Jack McGowan, who held the No. 60 spot going into the tournament, closed out with a second 75 yesterday, finishing with a 150 total, not good enough to qualify for the final two rounds.

Cerrudo, formerly of San Rafael, had a 72-71-143 total. Now he needs to finish high enough to earn $617 for the tournament in order to overtake McGowan.

The top 60 money-makers on the tour automatically qualify for most major tournaments.

Brewer, meanwhile, had two things going for him, an ancient putter that found new life, and Bobby Nichols.

"I've played with him eight or nine times in our careers," said Nichols, Brewer's playing partner in the first two rounds, "and he's never shot higher than 67."

The magic remained in the second round yesterday, with Brewer taking a six-under-par 66 for the 36-hole lead at 131, 13 under par on the 6,964 yard, par 72 Diplomat — Presidential golf course.

He held a four stroke lead over rebounding Arnold Palmer and rookie Hal Underwood going into today's third round in this, the last stop of the year on the PGA tour.

Palmer, who snapped a year-long slump with a victory last week, and the red-haired Underwood, on the tour only six months, were tied for second at 135s. Each had a second round 67.

"I was scrambling," whispered Brewer, who contracted laryngitis and can barely speak, "but I was putting so well. I hit some bad shots but I got away with it."

Sonoma State Wins Opener Over Fresno

The Sonoma State Cossacks opened their 1969-70 basketball season on a highly successful note last night, trouncing Fresno Pacific, 82-76, at Sonoma State.

The Cossacks almost squandered a fat lead, as Fresno whittled a 44-30 Sonoma lead down to the final margin.

Ramon Soloman, Sonoma's top scorer last season, got right back into the swing of things as he pumped in 31 points while Roy Jones added 15 points.

Mariners Get First Cage Win

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

ROCKLIN (Placer County) — John Panagakis finally got what he wanted.

The College of Marin head basketball coach got his first win in his new job, and it was a victory in the grand style as the Tars bowled over usually tough Sierra College, 98-71, on a devastating fast break last night.

"Our fast break was really going well," Panagakis said. "We just jumped off right away. We had all our kids in there practically the whole game."

The Tars streaked to a 42-31 halftime lead against the Wolverines and never looked back.

It was a rough and sloppy non-league game as 52 fouls were called on an even distribution.

SCHAFER HIGH

Marin's Pat Schafer, the former Tamalpais High School star, pumped in a 11 out of 19 free throws and added nine fielders to lead all scorers with 29 points. He got help from Chip Tyson with 14 points and Bob Tate with 13 as a total 11 Tars got into the scoring act.

Don Davies topped Sierra with 22 points.

"It certainly feels good to win that first one," Panagakis said. "But we actually played well enough to win the other two."

The Tars will try to even out their record at 2-2 when they visit the University of San Francisco frosh at 8 o'clock tonight.

Red Hot Warriors Take A Long Rest

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Warriors have the weekend off, hoping the rest won't cool a hot streak of five vicctories in seven games and a climb to second place in the National Basketball Association's Western Division.

With Jeff Mullins scoring 31 points and Nate Thurmond 30, the Warriors came from behind in the final quarter here last night to defeat the San Diego Rockets 112-107.

That triumph, coupled with Chicago's loss to Phoenix, moved the Warriors a half game ahead of the Bulls into second place in the division. It also gained them a game on the Atlanta Hawks, who lost to Cincinnati.

ATLANTA NEXT

The Warriors play next on Tuesday in Salt Lake City against Atlanta, which now holds the Western Division lead by three games.

San Francisco had a 52-49 halftime lead but fell behind 80-78 in the third quarter. A Warrior spurt in which they outscored San Diego 14-4 in a four-minute stretch provided San Francisco a six-point lead which San Diego whittled to 109-107 with a little more than a minute left.

Don Kojis was the Rockets' leading scorer with 23.

Joe Ellis had 20 points for the Warriors when a hand injury sidelined him midway in the last period.

Raiders Have A Score To Settle

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Raiders play the last team they lost to and the Cincinnati Bengals play the last team they beat when the two collide tomorrow in an American Football League contest before a sellout crowd of more than 53,000.

A 31-17 loss to the Bengals early last month is the only defeat the Raiders have suffered this year. Since then Cincinnati has been winless in four contests.

Assuming Kansas City beats Buffalo, this game will have little bearing on the Raiders' battle with the Chiefs for the AFL's Western Division title. Win or lose, the Raiders will still have to beat the Chiefs here next Saturday.

Greg Cook, the rookie Cincinnati quarterback who threw three scoring passes against the Raiders last time, has been troubled by a sore arm, but is expected to start. Sam Wyche will be ready if Cook falters.

Oakland quarterback Daryle Lamonica needs six touchdown passes in the two remaining regular-season games to tie the AFL record of 36 set by teammate George Blanda in 1961 when he was with Houston.

Wide receivers Fred Biletnikoff and Warren Wells are tied for the league lead in touchdown receptions with 11 each.

Cincinnati got a fine rushing effort in the Buffalo snow last week from Paul Robinson, 1968 rookie of the year. In a losing effort against the Bills, Robinson picked up 117 yards in 24 carries, his best day of the season.

The Bengals' starting defensive tackles, Bill Staley and Andy Rice, have been troubled with injuries, but are considered likely to play.

For the Raiders, tackle Bob Svihus is doubtful with a bruised leg. Center Jim Otto should play despite some bad bruises.

Pride, Prestige And Winning Streaks On Line In Rams-Vikings Explosion

By MIKE BRYSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

It may be only a preview of more important things to come, but you'll get a strong argument from a couple of guys if you think there'll be any "holding back" in tomorrow's slam-bang collision between the Los Angeles Rams and the Minnesota Vikings.

In reality, there's nothing more than prestige, pride and a couple of lengthy winning streaks at stake since both teams already have wrapped up divisional titles, setting up a Dec. 27 showdown between the the two for the National Football League's Western Conference title.

But, from the way both Viking Coach Bud Grant and Ram boss George Allen are talking, tomorrow's meeting sounds like the REAL thing . . . not just a preview.

(The game will be televised by CBS at 1 p.m.)

"We'll play to win and play tough," barked Allen, whose team hasn't been beaten in 11 games this season.

"You don't improve by sitting on the bench or taking things easy. We'll play this game like we've played each one the past four years . . . and I'm sure the Vikings will play the same way."

BEST RECORD

"We anticipate a rugged contest," said Grant. "The Rams have the best record in the league, they're undefeated in 11 games and they're certainly the best team we've played all year."

Los Angeles turned back stubborn Washington 24-13 to clinch the Coastal Division title last Sunday, continuing its hopes of becoming the league's first team to go unbeaten during a regular season since the Chicago Bears turned the trick in 1942, when the campaign was only 11 games long.

Minnesota was upset at New York 24-23 on opening day, but since then the Vikings have carved out 10 consecutive victories, including a 27-0 Thanksgiving Day blanking of Detroit that assured them the Central Division title.

Meanwhile, Dallas, only divisional leader that hasn't sewed up a championship, should claim the Capitol crown easily tomorrow against Pittsburgh, which has lost 10 straight since an opening triumph.

OUTSIDE CHANCE

Second-place Washington, which travels to Philadelphia, has an outside chance of overtaking the Cowboys—but one more Dallas victory, or a Redskin defeat, will send the Cowboys against Cleveland's Century Division champs for the Eastern Conference title Dec. 28.

In other games tomorrow, Green Bay travels to Cleveland, Detroit goes to Baltimore, St. Louis is at New York and Atlanta plays host to New Orleans. San Francisco entertained the Chicago Bears this afternoon.

In the American Football League tomorrow, it's Boston at San Diego, Buffalo at Kansas City, Cincinnati at Oakland and Denver at Miami. The New York Jets were at Houston this afternoon.

TV GAMES TOMORROW

10:15 a.m. — Green Bay-Cleveland, CBS.

10:30 a.m. — Denver-Miami, NBC.

Santa Clara Too Much For Stanford

By STEVE TOOMAJIAN
United Press International

Dick Garibaldi's Santa Clara basketball club is off to another flying start.

With four starters returning from the defending champion West Coast athletic conference team, the Broncos have knocked off their first two opponents and are placed 11th in the nation's college basketball rankings.

The Broncos threw up a fierce defense last night and came away with a 72-60 nonconference win on Stanford's court.

The Indians were unable to penetrate the hawking defense of the Bronco five—center Dennis Awtrey, forwards Ralph Ogden and Bruce Bochte, and guards Kevin Eagleson and Terry O'Brien.

LONG BOMBS

Only the long bombs of gunners Claude Terry and Dennis O'Neill kept the Indians close. Terry was high for Stanford with 19 points and O'Neill fired in 17.

The Broncos' two candidates for All-American acclaim led in scoring for both teams. Awtrey dropped in 21 and Odgen tallied 20.

In another game involving a WCAC team last night, the St. Mary's Gaels were shutout in the last seven minutes and watched Fresno State blast away with a 95-73 win.

Most Pacific-8 Conference schools found their way into the victory column, though the California Bears dropped a 98-79 decision to Brigham Young.

Washington held off a furious Seattle rally to overcome the Chieftains, 86-78, while Washington State was whipping Hawaii, 94-83.

The Trojans of Southern California busted out in the second half for an 88-74 win over sixth-ranked Colorado. Southern Cal is ranked ninth.

A's Get Veteran Hurler Mudcat Grant From Cards

COMBINED A P& UPI

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The St. Louis Cardinals sold veteran righthanded pitcher Jim "Mudcat" Grant to the Oakland Athletics last night.

Grant, 34, was 8-11 in 41 games last season with a 4.42 earned run average pitching for both Montreal and the Cardinals.

Grant, 12-year-veteran, has a career record of 131-113.

SPORTS SHORTS

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The New York Mets announced today the appointment of former major league infielder Chuck Hiller, a former San Francisco Giant, as manager of their Tidewater farm club in the International League.

Hiller, who managed in the Pittsburgh organization last year, replaces Roy McMillan, who is joining the Seattle Pilots as a coach next year.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The Washington Senators announced the conditional purchase of second baseman Bob Schroder from San Francisco's Phoenix farm club in the Pacific Coast League today.

Schroder, who batted .258 for Phoenix last season, goes on the Senators' major league roster.

HOCKEY

MONTREAL — The Montreal Canadiens, currently in a tight race for the National Hockey League's East Division lead, will have to do it — temporarily at least — without the services of defenseman Jacques Laperriere.

He received a three-game suspension last night from league president Clarence Campbell for shoving referee Bill Friday and linesman Pat Shetler in a game here last Saturday night.

PITTSBURGH — Ex-Oakland Seal Bryan Watson, who plays right wing and defense, has been assigned by the Pittsburgh Penguins to their Baltimore farm club in the American Hockey League.

GENERAL

WENHAM, Mass. — A fire which blazed through a three-story barn on the estate of the late socialite Frederick Ayer yesterday destroyed between 12 and 14 thoroughbreds. The barn was valued at more than $70,000.

DETROIT — The Ford Motor Co. announced yesterday that famed auto racing driver A. J. Foyt has signed an agreement to build all Ford Indianapolis-type racing engines starting next year.

BOWLING

Foreign Student Is High

Jameel Rai, a native of India and a student at College of Marin, seems to be getting the hang of bowling in a hurry.

A member of the classes at Greenbrae Lanes, Jameel recently came through with a 245 game that featured seven strikes in a row. Up until then, he'd held a 157 average.

Also shooting well above her average was Dee Dee Flahive, who came through with a 209, 127 pins above her 102 average at Greenbrae.

Also at Greenbrae, Sam Hooten had a 166 triplicate and Mary Brown converted the 4-7-10 split.

At Nave Lanes, Joe Galbreath climbed the ladder in the Friday Nite Leftovers, or rather, came down one, as he had games of 170, 169, and 168 while Carol Galinski, who bowls at a 139 clip, came through with consecutive games of 162, 178, and 162 for a 502 series. Dick Anthony picked up the 6-7 split in the same league.

Jim Miller in the Hawaiian League bowled some 63 pins over his average of 135 with a 198 game.

Tracey Adams topped the San Rafael Country Club Bowl's Pee Wees with a 107 game.

Seals Barrage Nets, Gain Only A Tie With Flyers

By DAVE DIETZ

OAKLAND — The Seals unleashed 43 shots — a team high this season — at Philadelphia goaltender Bernie Parent last night, but earned only a 2-2 tie from the barrage.

Parent, one of the National Hockey League's strongest goal-tenders, was excellent, especially in the first and third periods when the Seals threatened repeatedly.

He stopped 20 shots in the first (when the Flyers got only 8) and 16 in the third, relinquishing goals to Carol Vadnais and Gary Jarrett, whose tally tied the game at 2-2 at 1:25 of the final period.

In the Oakland net, Gary Smith also played well and was left virtually helpless on both Flyer scores.

"He sure could be a boxer," Jarrett said later.

The 4,335 fans taunted Fleming for his pugnacity and a security man had to separate Reggie from an angry fan when the Flyer entered the penalty box for slugging Jarrett.

At the end of the game, Fleming and teammates Simon Nolet and Earl Heiskala swung their sticks savagely at goading, debris-throwing fans, but missed.

Golf is a geme where you have to play off someone's ball. Even in a $2 Nassau, you arrange the match and the bets around the best player.

Golf without Palmer is anarchy. There's no one's ball to play off of.

The encouraging fever chart is not Palmer's alone. For, 1969 was a year the Golden Bear went into hibernation, too. Jack Nicklaus wasn't laid up, but his game was.

In the past month and a half, only a handful of tournaments have been played. But two have been won by Nicklaus, and, now, one has been won by Palmer.

The game is in traction in periods between major matchups. It may even be pronounced dead. But, at the moment, heart massage has worked. The heart is pumping again. This will be good news to motel owners at Augusta, television networks in New York, and even though they may not think of it, to 50 other golfers who not only have something tangible to beat now but an assured payoff of 100 cents on the dollar if they do.

Dan Gurney Is Fastest Qualifier

RIVERSIDE (AP) — Dan Gurney, who turned in the fastest qualifying time yesterday for the 300-mile Rex Mays USAC championship race, might have his California protege, Swede Savage of Santa Ana, breathing down his neck tomorrow.

Savage offered the biggest surprise at the Riverside International Raceway yesterday by pushing his Eagle Ford an average of 113.336 miles per hour on the 2.5-mile course.

Gurney, from nearby Costa Mesa, earned the post position in his Eagle Ford for the $75,000 race, while his former pupil took the sixth berth. Savage is a former motorcycle racer.

Joining Gurney in the top five qualifying positions yesterday were Mark Donohue, Media, Pa., Lola Chevrolet, 116.731 m.p.h.; Al Unser, Albuquerque, N.M., Lola Ford, 116.320 m.p.h.; Mario Andretti, Nazareth, Pa., Hawk Ford, 115.830 m.p.h.; and Bobby Unser, Albuquerque, Eagle Turbo Ford, 113.924 m.p.h.

Qualifiers from yesterday and today compete tomorrow in the conclusion of the 23-race U.S. Auto Club championship circuit for 1969. The winner's purse is about $20,000.

Prep Water Polo Showdown Set

Terra Linda and Redwood high schools flexed their muscles and tuned up for their big Marin County Athletic League match next Tuesday by taking care of lesser opponents in MCAL water polo action yesterday.

Redwood ripped San Marin, 30-5, in Larkspur with Doug Brockbank scoring six goals, while Terra Linda downed San Rafael, 12-5, at San Rafael as Pat Ellington and Bob Bentley scored three goals.

Rich Barclay had three goals for the Bulldogs.

TRUCK CUTS NEW ROAD

A Corte Madera police officer forges through a grove in an attempt to reach a runaway truck that narrowly missed a classroom of children after it jumped a curb and plunged down a 60-foot embankment Thursday. The truck was parked on Robin Drive when it struck off on its own about 12:30 p.m. It missed a Marin Country Day School classroom by about five feet before landing in a grove of trees about 20 feet from the school, police said. No Incidents At Park's Car Lot Opening

I-J Special Report

BERKELEY — The new asphalt parking lot in Berkeley that was once part of "people's park" has opened and only a handful of peaceful pickets were on hand for the unlocking Thursday.

Although there are 60 parking spaces in the university-owned lot, and parking spaces are at a premium in the south campus area, no one used them yesterday.

C. W. Smith, parking manager for the University of California, said parking in the lot is intended for use only by dormitory residents who, he said, haven't been notified yet of the available spaces.

The University Interfraternity council recently voted, with one dissenting vote, to boycott the new soccer field which shares space in the one-time "park" with the parking lot.

By the driveway opening in the cyclone fence around the area are two signs: "Remember People's Park" and, over a university parking sign, "Reserved — J. Rector."

James Rector was rooftop spectator fatally shot by police in the first day of park demonstrating.

WARDS Riverside
WARDS RIVERSIDE 4-SQUARE PASSENGER TIRE GUARANTEE

GUARANTEED AGAINST FAILURE due to road hazards (except repairable punctures) or from defects in materials or workmanship for the life of the original tread. In case of failure, Wards will exchange tire for a new one, charging only that portion of the current price (plus Federal Excise Tax) equivalent to the percent of tread used.

GUARANTEED AGAINST TREAD WEAROUT for months specified or for miles specified. In case tread wears out. Wards will exchange tire for a new one, charging only the difference between the current price (plus Federal Excise Tax) and a specific dollar allowance (Tread wear guarantee does not apply to tires used commercially.)

NATIONWIDE SERVICE. Guarantee honored at any Wards Retail or Catalog store.

It's a fact! Wards Glasbelt gives you up to 40% more mileage than conventional tires without fiber glass belts. Why? Because belts minimize tread squirm — a major cause of wear-out in ordinary tires. Belts keep the tread design open for better traction, resist impact damage with tensile strength greater than steel. Wards Nylon cord body guarantees the tread against wear-out 30 full months.

WALL STREET WEEK

The Worst Low In Three Years

By HOWARD LUXENBERG

NEW YORK (UPI)—The collapse of Wall Street's most widely publicized support area of 1969 sent stocks tumbling this week in moderately active trading.

Once the Dow Jones industrial average fell through the 800 line the rush to sell began. Earlier in the year the 800-level had been the resistance point for numerous setbacks. And, as one analyst commented, when it became apparent that the DJ would stay below 800 "morale soured and everybody latched onto everything unfavorable."

LOWEST SINCE 67

After the dust settled, the DJ, which reflects movement in 30 selected blue chips, was off a whopping 19.27 at 793.03, its lowest level since the 791.14, of Jan. 4, 1967. DJ rails and utilities also pointed lower.

The UPI market indicator, measuring all stocks traded, showed a loss of 3.90 at 99.53. Standard and Poor's index of 500 stocks dropped 2.08 to 91.73.

The New York Stock Exchange index measured a drop of $1.29 to $51.20 in the average common share price.

PSYCHOLOGICAL BLOW

Newton Zinder, analyst for E. F. Hutton, said the drop below

WALL STREET WEEK

The Worst Low In Three Years

800 was a psychological blow to many investors, but he believed the list was deeply oversold and due for a snap back.

Other analysts pointed out that traders also were discouraged by inflation, tight credit, high interest rates, and by prospects for lower than expected corporate profits next year.

EARNINGS FEARS

Henry Kaufman, a partner in Salomon Brothers and Hutzler, said the corporate profit squeeze could be worse than expected and earnings could drop by as much as 15 to 20 per cent in 1970. He addressed the European Institutional Investor Conference in London.

Moreover, a 3.4 per cent drop in unemployment in November was viewed as a major setback in President Richard M. Nixon's war on inflation. He had been warning that a higher jobless rate may be expected as part of the fight to combat inflation.

Monte Gordon, Bache and Co. vice president, said the unemployment figures seemed to indicate that Washington's policy of restraint isn't biting yet.

Andrew F. Brimmer, said after careful study of recent economic trends and the outlook for coming months it is his opinion the battle against inflation still has to be won.

Of the 1,742 issues crossing the tape, 1,353 declined, 282 gained. There were 481 new lows set, 20 highs.

Purchases Firm

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Westinghouse Electric Corp. has bought C. W. Blakeslee & Sons, Inc., a New Haven, Conn., building firm with 1,200 workers, for 145,161 shares of Westinghouse common stock.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

The Editor's Notebook

Narrow Field As You Will, Ada Fusselman Is There

IF ONE WERE TO RESEARCH the efforts and accomplishments of notable women in Marin's history, Ada Fusselman would most assuredly emerge in the top 10.

If the research went into greater detail, she would emerge in the top five.

Narrow the field to three and she would still be there.

She has to have been one of the two top women practitioners of constructive community service in all of the county's history.

THE OBITUARY STORIES earlier this week referred to the Marin County Citizen of the Year award bestowed upon her by the Marin County Real Estate Board in 1954.

There was more to it than that; it was a far greater honor than the obituary references indicated.

Actually, the real estate board had for some years made a "Man of the Year" award. It was prestigeous; it was just about the highest public honor that could be bestowed upon a Marin community leader.

Each year there were numerous nominations. The judging was a tough job.

In 1954, some anonymous, highly perceptive individual observed that Mrs. Fusselman had outshone the leading male community leaders and submitted her nomination.

The judges understandably were nonplussed. They recognized the truth of the nomination's contentions but, after all, it was a "Man of the Year" award.

To their credit, the judges rose to the occasion. Ada Fusselman beat out all the men for the "Man of the Year" award that year.

She was to win other honors later in her long life. But none would ever be more significant than that.

ADA FUSSELMAN WAS an effervescent, energetic person. In her prime she traveled widely through the state speaking to women's groups.

She didn't drive. Her husband, Bill, dutifully handled that chore. Their public lives appeared widely separated. She was deeply involved and committed in her work on the Marin Junior College District board of trustees and in her work among various women's organizations.

He was tough-minded, uncompromising Supervisor William D. Fusselman, who was always on hand wherever the action was, as a supervisor.

But out of public view they were engaged in their own private love affair for more than 55 years. "Billie" was what he called her.

He drove her the length and breadth of the state on her speaking tours and there is no doubt that they mutually enjoyed every minute of those trips, alone together.

Bill Fusselman was not unaware of the blessings he enjoyed in the form of a devoted wife. Starting nearly a quarter of a century ago, on birthdays and wedding anniversaries he reflected privately to friends on the good fortune which permitted him and "Billie" to enjoy so many happy years of good health and happiness together.

They weren't even half done with their happiness together 25 years ago; they were certainly especially blessed.

IF YOU WANT TO BE exposed to contemporary philosophers who most closely approximate the wisdom of the Old Testament, you have to go to the right barber shop.

"I don't think the Man Upstairs takes any orders, but if He did, my order would be to leave this world just after I hooked a big fish and had it played just to the point where I knew I was going to land it. That's the instant I would like to fall over dead, going through eternity with all the excitment of feeling that I was just landing a big one," said the barber.

Ada Fusselman unquestionably was still far too busy living in her eighty-first year to give thought to "putting in her order."

If she had, it would be impossible to think of anything she might have longed for more than going through eternity chatting with a friend on the telephone. She always had a wide circle of friends; she intensely enjoyed her associations with them.

Ada Fusselman's departure from among us is a sorrowful loss, but we can take comfort in the knowledge that she and her Bill did enjoy an extraordinary measure of health and happiness and, when the end came, it was not amidst unpleasantness or pain or suffering — she was at the moment of her death doing something she very much enjoyed doing.

As the philosophic barber would say, that's hard to beat.

Of Raccoons And Garbage Cans

When we try to play games with nature, we usually lose. Take our raccoons. For about four months now we have been feeding at least four. We started out with one pie pan heaped high with dog food. Now we put out two and during the course of an average evening refill them once or twice.

But, as a result of our feeding, we thought we had discouraged these cunning creatures from pulling the lid from our garbage can and spreading the contents around the back yard for detailed inspection.

Not so! They still do it, but not so frequently. Perhaps what we have read is true. Maybe raccoons fool around with garbage out of curiosity, rather than hunger.

After all, Beverly Hills isn't the only place with high class garbage.

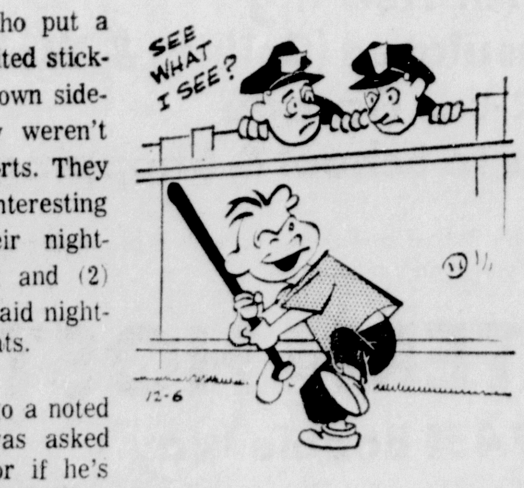
TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF



THE TWO cops who put a sudden stop to a spirited stickball game in a downtown sidestreet the other day weren't just sadistic spoil-sports. They had just made two interesting discoveries: (1) their nightsticks were missing, and (2) the kids were using said nightsticks for stickball bats.

SOME MONTHS ago a noted commercial artist was asked by a magazine editor if he's accept a commission to illustrate the lead story for the upcoming December issue. A price of $3,000 was agreed upon over the phone, and the artist concluded, "Send me the script which Ill return at once and I'll have the drawings done in a week." True to his word, he mailed the script back to the editor in the time specified. Three days later the manuscript was returned to him by the assistant editor — with a rejection slip!

Marin County supervisors said subdivision developers would have to provide sewage disposal facilities before they could proceed with construction.

Jury Call Gives Bad Impression

I just received in this morning's mail a notice that I am selected as a juror for 1970.

If I don't answer the questions truthfully I am guilty of perjury.

If I don't fill out the card I would be in contempt of the Marin County courts.

If I didn't have the six cents I wouldn't be able to mail it.

They don't even furnish a stamped envelope.

Refugee Problem Questions, Answers

Phil Newsom's article on the Palestinian commandos and refugees (Nov. 25) raises a very interesting question among Americans concerned with justice in the Middle East. He states that the U.S. has contributed more than $450 million to UNRWA since 1949. Have we been the major contributor out of a sense of guilt and shame because the U.S. legally became a party to the Balfour Declaration through its signature of the Anglo-American Convention of 1924? . . .

Palestine in 1948 had been among the most advanced areas of the Arab world, especially in terms of general economic growth, an emerging middle class, and literacy. As late as 1954, Don Peretz estimated that 350 of the approxomately 400 Jewish settlements created after 1948 were on refugee property, and that two-thirds of the cultivated land acquired by Israel had been refugee-owned. Although the UN, with the almost unanimous support of its members, has annually reaffirmed that the Palestinian refugees should be repatriated or compensated for their lossess, neither action has been taken, with the result that the number of refugees has grown through natural increase year by year. . .

I seriously the varacity of Mr. Newsom's figures. He states that UNRWA "has had to provide shelter for some 92,000 new refugees on Jordan's east bank "since the June War. According to the former commissioner-general of UNRWA, by December 1967 some 245,000 had already fled into Jordan's east bank.

Newsom's initial question, "When does a refugee become a guerilla and what do you do about it" is not hard to answer if we label things as they are. A refugee becomes a resistance fighter after he waits 20 years to leave a tent and return to his home and land; after he loses faith in the U.N. to carry out justice; and after he realizes that only he can help himself regain what is rightfully his. . .

Reason To Oppose Smog Initiative

Your paper's article on page 14 of the Nov. 25 issue seemed to present only one side of the Peoples Lobby Initiative "A" controversy. The reason that the anti-air pollution bill should be opposed is because it doesn't add to the list of laws protecting our environment, but rather removes many of them.

It is true that the bill would handle air pollution very well, but in the process, it would annul many of the other bills which are also imperative to preserve our ecology, including many dealing with water pollution. If the bill could be added to our environmental laws so as to complement, rather than replace them, it would be very effective, but with its present wording, it would do far more harm than good. . .

Some Things Made Perfectly Clear

President Nixon's favorite phrase, "Let me make one thing perfectly clear", was certainly illustrated by a comment in your editorial on the Song My massacre where you noted that "we are not saviors to the Vietnamese people" (Nov. 25).

Perhaps another point can be made perfectly clear. While the U.S. Army has officially admitted the atrocity killing of women and children, while this same Army is also inquiring as to the cover-up of the story, the Saigon government, has officially denied the whole occurrence! Leaders in the Saigon-based government originally fought on the side of the French imperialists against their own people in the early '50s. Now installed by American military power, they won't even raise a voice to denounce the killing of civilians. Isn't something "perfectly clear" about this government.

LINES ON LIVING

Marriage 'Made In Heaven' Must Be Renewed Here

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

In spite of computer matchmaking, there are still those who believe that "marriage is made in heaven." But even they admit that marriage is not a gift of heaven but an achievement of mature, compatible living on earth.

Heaven grants us the gift of love by which two strangers are attracted to each other and bind their far-flung destinies into a common bond of love, of friendship, the building of a home, and the rearing of children. But those who don't renew their canopy vows daily in a continuous rediscovery of a life-giving relationship, turn into curators of past dreams and fancies instead of creators of present promises and fulfillments.

LOVE, AS LIFE itself, is animated by the constant fresh air of renewal and dies for lack of it. Rejuvenated living and loving, the ever-novel look and appreciative attitude—that too often evaporate with the coffeemaker's vapor in the kitchen — is the blood-life of a good and fulfilling home-life and home-love.

This kind of relationship is not handled by postponement, nor is it marketable at discount price as a commercial arrangement. No, it is not a 50-50 proposition, but a 100 per cent commitment by both husband and wife.

It blossoms forth on the sunshine of mutual affection which deems no sacrifice a burden, on the soil of mutual respect which seeks not to domineer nor to possess, on the tender care of consideration which asks not for the gift but for the glory of sharing — inspiring loyalty and devotion.

LOVE DOES NOT come in a big band like a hurricane, nor does it burst into a flame in a big flash. It is suffused, in no pomp, like sunlight in noiseless atmosphere. It is best expressed not in dramatic gestures but in unspectacular deeds of kindness and affection, in the grace of patience and understanding, in the benevolence of giving and forgiving.

Love, like a liquid, can slip through the fingers and sink to the ground when watered down by contempt, scorn and disdain. Burning anger, flying tempers and moody dispositions form scars in loving hearts, scars that heal slowly and impair the free inflow of the love-life of a healthy circulation.

But since love is a gift of humans and humans are infested with germs of frailty, the sage advice given by one wise mentor to newlyweds might be practical wisdom. He thus counseled them under the canopy: "Try to avoid anger in your home. And if you can't help it, try never to get angry at the same time."

COUNTRY PARSON

"A church that doesn't need at least two services to accommodate its worshippers was built too big — or its leaders too small."

THE DRUMMONDS

Nixon Has Taken The Big Stick From Military-Industrial Complex

By ROSCOE and GEOFFREY DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — The genie of the military-industrial complex is being pushed back into its bottle.

It has suffered serious setbacks in recent weeks, and its potentially overpowerful influence is being contained.

The danger, as former President Eisenhower rightly warned in his farewell address, was that the military-industrial complex would dominate national policy.

For the present the danger is past. National policy is dominating the military industrial complex.

INTERESTINGLY, it is a conservative Republican administration which is taking effective steps to do this. Here is what's been happening:

The Pentagon did not relish the civilian decision against chemical and germ warfare stockpiling. But the President did it.

Under the leadership of Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the military would have preferred to keep the draft law unchanged until after Vietnam. But President Nixon fired General Hershey and got Congress to change the law.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff fear that cutting back the military — particularly new weapons development and fighting strength — will go too fast. But their influence is not stopping it. Spending is being cut $3 billion this year even before we're out of Vietnam, and more reductions are imminent.

THE PENTAGON is not happy over the way Richard Nixon prepared for the critical U.S.-Russian arms talks. It would have preferred firm advance decisions as to just how far we would go, is uneasy at the flexible approach the negotiators are to take, even though the military will have a further voice before agreements are accepted. The wake of military counsel is being reduced. The initiative is with the President and his civilian advisers far more than in recent past.

Former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara established civilian control in the Pentagon, but former President Johnson was more responsive to the military than Mr. Nixon is. The result is that together the President and Defense Secretary Melvin Laird constitute a more powerful shield against overly pervasive Pentagon influence than their predecessors. The unwinding of the Vietnamese war helps make this possible.

There are other factors. Though, in the main, through no fault of its own, the military has lost a great deal of public support. The high costs of the nuclear arms race with the Russians take money away from acute domestic needs. In the frustration over the indecisive Vietnamese war, the military became an easy scapegoat. And past mismanagement in the Pentagon, producing large cost overruns, has made Congress unusually wary and skeptical.

GENERAL EISENHOWER saw the hazard of the military-industrial complex (his phrase) in its combined influence tending to overwhelm the vital civilian control of military policy. He was furious when some industrialists took out big ads demanding appropriations he had just rejected but which the Pentagon still wanted.

Eisenhower was very sensitive to the need and appropriateness of civilian control. When he was chief of staff of the Army in the late '40s and President Truman was proposing the Atomic Energy Commission, there was a great urge in Congress to put it under the military. Dwight Eisenhower opposed this and helped Harry Truman carry the day.

ART BUCHWALD

It's Harder To Get Together If You Fly American Flag

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's promise to bring the country together doesn't seem to be working too well. If anything, people are more polarized than they've ever been before.

A friend of mine, Mrs. Johnston, told me the other day what happened to her when she decided to fly the flag on Veterans' Day. Mrs. Johnston's been flying the American flag every Veterans' Day without receiving much comfort. But this year her effort became the cause celebre on the block.

The first person to mention it was a nieghbor from across the street who congratulated her for flying the flag and asked her to sign a petition to impeach Justice William Douglas of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Mrs. Johnston said she wasn't interested in signing any petitions against the Supreme Court.

"THEN WHY are you flying the American flag" the neighbor demanded.

"Because it's Veterans' Day," she said.

"Would you be willing to go to a rally tomorrow against teaching sex education in the schools" the neighbor demanded.

Mrs. Johnston said she wouldn't.

The neighbor said angrily, "And I believed you were a good American."

A LITTLE LATER the neighbor's son, a college student, said, "Mrs. Johnston, I thought you were sympathetic to our getting out of Vietnam."

"I am," Mrs. Johnston said.

"Then why are you flying the American flag"

"Flying the American flag has nothing to do with my feelings on Vietnam, Bobby. It is our flag and I believe it should be displayed on national holidays."

"What about all the innocent people whose villages have been burned and bombed, and the profiteering South Vietnamese generals who have numbered bank accounts in Switzerland" Bobby said.

"That has nothing to do with the flag."

"Only super-hawks fly the flag," said Bobby, as he walked away in a huff.

A LITTLE LATER Mrs. Johnston received a call from the lady down the street. "Mrs. Johnston, I notice you're flying the American flag. Would you be interested in joining the American Legion Auxiliary"

Mrs. Johnston said, "No, my husband isn't a member of the American Legion so there is no reason for me to join the auxiliary."

"You had us fooled, Mrs. Johnston," the lady said, "I'm sorry I called."

THE DELIVERY BOY from the local market arrived at this moment and he said, "You hate me because I have long hair, don't you, Mrs. Johnston"

"I don't hate you," Mrs. Johnston protested.

"I saw the flag outside," the delivery boy said. "I know how you people think." He slammed the groceries on the table and left.

The plumber arrived to do some work, but when he saw the flag he decided Mrs. Johnston would be interested in how he felt about "people who are on welfare and don't do any work and who are always waiting for handouts, and how the protesters ought to all be put in jail. . . ."

It cost Mrs. Johnston an extra $9 an hour to listen to the plumber's political philosophy.

WHEN MR. JOHNSTON came home from work, Mrs. Johnston told him everything that happened during the day.

"Don't feel bad," he told her. "I was driving without my lights on today and a taxi driver yelled at me, 'If you don't like America, why don't you go back to the Soviet Union where you belong' "

Second Panama Canal Eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Can a fish born and bred in the Pacific find happiness in the Atlantic?

The question is deadly serious and is only one of many facing a presidential commission studying construction of a new sea-level canal across the Isthmus of Panama.

The commission, authorized by Congress four years ago and scheduled to report to the President next year, has farmed out the problem of the displaced fish to the National Academy of Sciences and the Smithsonian Institution.

But it has answered some other fundamental questions. They include:

Q. Is it technically feasible to replace the 55-year-old lock canal in Panama with a new sea-level cut linking the two oceans?

A. Yes—at several possible locations on the Isthmus. Fears that the Pacific, which has a higher sea level, would spill over into the Atlantic and alter both coastlines have been proven groundless.

But opening an unobstructed channel between the two oceans would allow a far greater exchange of marine life than now takes place through the Panama Canal, raising the questions as to whether fish and other marine life might suffer. The Academy of Sciences has been asked to propose a program of long-term studies of the potential biological effects.

OCEANIC COCKTAIL

On the other hand, engineers have concluded there is no reason to worry about the "infinitesmal" exchange of water between the two oceans because of tidal ebb and flow. They explain that the levels of all of the earth's great oceans vary at different locations. If they were going to find a common level, it would have happened a long time ago because the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans all converge around the Antarctic.

Q. How much would it cost?

A. Probably somewhere between $3 and $6 billion, at current estimates (which have a way of escalating before a project is completed.) Costs depend on location—some sites involve more engineering difficulties than others—and the method of excavation to be used. Nuclear energy would cost less than half as much as conventional methods, but poses problems of its own because of the test ban treaty.

Q. Is the canal needed?

A. Yes. At least in the view of the commission. Congress and the Defense Department agree, as do most of the world's maritime nations. traffic frequently backs up for days awaiting passage through the present canal with its old-fashioned locks. It's also too small for most modern ships. (Nearly 1,000 Navy and merchant ships are too wide or too deep for the present canal."

The sea-level canal also would be easier to defend. One nuclear warhead or a salvo of conventional bombs landing on the present locks would put the old canal out of operation almost indefinitely.

Q. Can the political problems be solved?

A. That's a poser. Originally, the Isthmus was a part of Colombia. When the United States decided to undertake the canal construction around the turn of the century, it offered Colombia $10 million for the land plus an annuity of $250,000.

Colombia rejected the offer but the action set off a rebellion in Panama, which declared its independence in 1903. The United States sent a warship to Panama preventing Colombian troops from quelling the outbreak.

QUICK TREATY

The new republic promptly negotiated a treaty which allowed construction of the canal, gave the United States control of it "in perpetuity," and ceded other land necessary for the canal's defense. The construction, which took seven years and cost $350 million, was completed in 1914.

The original treaty provided an annuity of $250,000 to Panama, but this has been increased periodically over the years and now stands at $1.9 million a year.

Nanama also has been demanding increased recognition of its inherent sovereignty over the canal and parity between the wages paid local employees and U.S. employees in the Canal Zone—a 10-mile wide strip of U.S. territory bordering the canal.

The fenced-in zone itself had become a major issue. Inside the barrier, Panamanians lived alongside U.S. citizens in comfortable ease. Outside Panamanians live in crowded slum tenements and hovels.

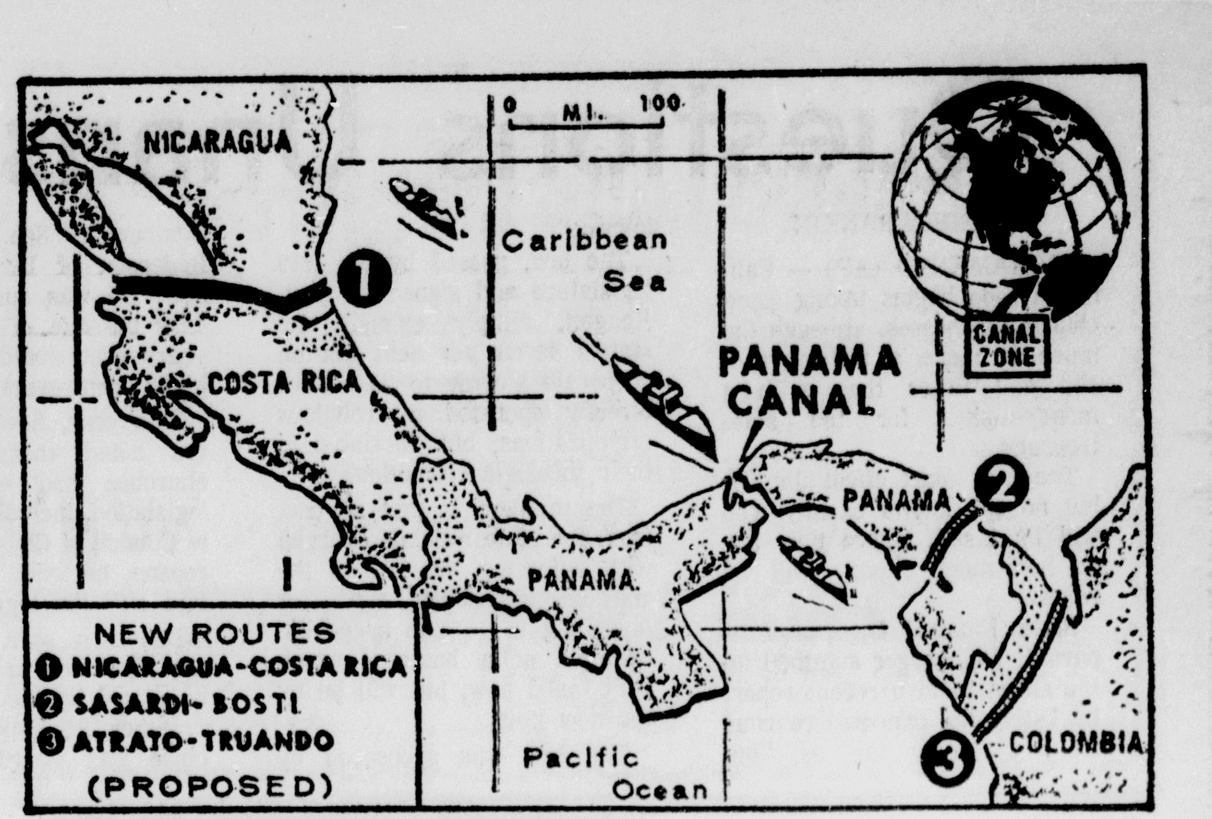
The situation, which had grown increasingly volatile since World War II, culminated in demonstrations and riots in the 1950s.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower moved to meet Panamaian demands in 1959 by authorizing the republic to fly its flag alongside the U.S. flag in the Canal Zone.

But his action—which was opposed by a sizeable bloc in the U.S. Congress—relieved the situation only briefly, and the unrest exploded in major riots soon after President Lyndon Johnson took office in 1963.

Johnson stilled the disturbances with the promise of new treaty negotiations, and these were begun in the following year. The negotiations took three years, and resulted in agreement on not one draft treaty but three.

The first would eliminate sole U.S. sovereignty over the Canal Zone, provide a "significant" increase in the annual payments to Panama, and establish a dual authority with Panama to govern the canal's operations.



But the treaties pleased no one. They prompted an uproar in Congress from members who felt they went too far in ceding sovereignty to Panama, and riots in Panama where political groups felt they did not go far enough in giving control to their country.

Formal signing of the treaties was delayed until after the then-pending Panamanian elections—but 11 days after a pro-American president was elected, he was overthrown by military coup.

Since then, the draft treaties have been in a sort of legal limbo. The new regime in Panama had not, until very recently, pressed the subject, and the State Department was reluctant to negotiate with what it considered to be an illegal government.

Lately, Panama has evinced, informally, an interest in resuming conversations, and the State Department has said it is always glad to talk to anyone about matters of concern.

In the meantime, Congress created the study commission, authorized it to spend $24 million on its field work and feasibility analyses, and is awaiting the results.

A KING 'ON STRIKE'

Constantine Exile In 23rd Month

ROME (UPI) — This month it will be two years since young King Constantine of Greece went "on strike" against the ruling military junta in Athens and chose exile.

Today, living quietly in Rome with his queen, the lovely former Princess Anne Marie of Denmark, and their three children, the 29-year-old Constantine shows no outward signs of being ready to return to his country unless on his own terms.

The terms are said to include free elections and a political climate of open and free debate.

SHUN LIMELIGHT

Though they have been assiduous about shunning the limelight during their self-exile in Rome, the Greek royal couple came briefly back into the headlines on Oct. 1 when the 24-year-old Anne Marie gave birth to her third child, a son whom they have named Nicholas. In addition to the infant Prince Nicholas the children are Crown Prince Paul, 2, and Princess Alexia, 4.

Ever since they fled to Rome on Dec. 14, 1967, after Constantine tried unsuccessfully to overthrow the leaders of the army coup d'etat which took power in April that year, the Greek exiles have sought to attract as little attention to themselves as possible. Constantine wants to do nothing that will make it harder for him to return some day to the throne that is still officially his.

The Athens regime still considers Constantine the king of Greece although it has appointed a regent to discharge royal functions in his place. It put out a cautious feeler to the king earlier this year by sending Foreign Minister Panoyotis Pipinelis to meet Constantine in Switzerland.

There has been no comment on the meeting from members of Constantine's entourage in Rome, but information leaked in London at the time said the king told Pipinelis he was willing to return to Greece only if there were free general elections held after an open political campaign.

The young king has maintained quiet contacts with Athens by means of two courtiers, Court Marshal Leonidas Papagos and Marinos Ieroulanos, who commute regularly between the Greek capital and Rome.

At the same time, Constantine appears to be keeping some lines open to rightwing opposition leaders in exile, such as ex-Premier Constantine Karamanlis in Paris.

Greek political sources said the king and Karamanlis appeared to have agreed to shelve differences dating back to the times of Constantine's father, King Paul.

Constantine made world headlines when he arrived in Rome, haggard and unshaven, in the early hours of a cold December morning two years ago. For several months afterwards, if he merely stepped out on the street to buy a newspaper, photographers mobbed him.

Things have since changed. Now he and the queen live almost as recluses. When occasionally they venture out, perhaps to quiet dinners in out-of-the-way Roman restaurants, they draw little attention.

In the first weeks of their Italian stay, the royal couple lived at the Greek Embassy across the street from the Rome zoo. They then moved to a luxury hotel near the Via Veneto nightlife street and later to a secluded villa off the ancient Via Cassia 12 miles northwest of Rome. Queen Mother Frederika rented the villa from a Mexican millionaire.

ANOTHER MOVE

About a year ago, Constantine and Anne Marie moved to another and less palatial villa on the Via di Porta Latina at the other end of Rome. Its owner is Countess Alice Paolozzi, whose daughter Christine made news several years ago by posing topless for a magazine photograph.

The royal couple share the 10-room villa with their children and a Greek and an Irish nursemaid. Queen Frederika and Constantine's sister, Princess Irene, now live in another villa on the northern outskirts of Rome.

Police assigned by the Italian government to guard the king—one uniformed Carabiniere who stands at the gate of the royal villa and two plainclothesmen who follow Constantine wherever he goes—have most of their trouble with photographers trying to take pictures of the couple.

ROYAL COMPLAINT

Photographers also irritated the king during their summer vacation at Ansedonia, a Tuscan beach resort. Constantine complained to Italian authorities against camera hawks who took long lens pictures of himself and his wife in bathing suits.

Constantine and Anne Marie also spent part of the summer in Denmark with her parents, King Frederik IX and Queen Ingrid. Earlier in the year, Constantine went to Washington for the funeral of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and was received there with full royal honors.

Athens reports say the king's exile has not affected his royal allowance, which amounts to $500,000 annually. The pay is supposed to cover the king's salary, travel expenses and maintenance and operation of the royal palace and gardens. An undisclosed share of the allowance is deducted and retained in Athens to cover palace expenses, but the remainder reportedly is sent to the king in Rome each month by special courier.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The commander of the troops involved in the alleged massacre at My Lai denied this week that he ordered or was aware of any deliberate killing of Vietnamese civilians by U.S. troops.

"No, I did not shoot any child in My Lai, and no, I did not order any massacre in My Lai," Capt. Ernest L. Medina told a Pentagon news conference. "I did not see any massacre in My Lai."

The 33-year-old Army captain's denials—his first public statements on the "massacre" —were in response to charges made by various soldiers and ex-soldiers who seemed to be cropping up everywhere with conflicting accounts of what happened in My Lai on that fateful day 20 months ago.

Attorneys for both the prosecution and the defense in the pending court martial of 1st Lt. William L. Calley Jr., who was a platoon commander in Medina's company, asked for a ban on further pretrial statements, but the request was denied by the Court of Military Appeals as an infringement on freedom of the press.

Medina, with Boston Attorney F. Lee Bailey, talked to newsmen during a recess in the Army's second-round investigation of the massacre reports. They were ruled groundless in an earlier investigation, but the colonel who conducted it has since expressed some doubts.

No charges have been filed against Medina.

Three South Vietnamese Senators who visited My Lai this week said their investigation indicated that a number of civilians there were shot with small arms at closer ange, but that the details remain obscure.

Blood-Chilling 'Southern Hospitality'

By JOHN AITKEN
Toronto Telegram News Service

JACKSON, Miss. (TNS) — The fear of outsiders that many Southerners cling to is covered by a thin and effusive veneer of southern hospitality, but there is something blood-chilling about talking to a true segregationist.

Beneath the friendliness, the polite request that the interview about to take place be tape-recorded by both sides, lies the basic mistrust that is a fact of life in the southern states.

There is no communication at all in a genuine sense; there are two sides, unalterably opposed, impossible for either one to convince the other and little chance for more than a cursory attempt at understanding.

Thus an interview with John C. Satterfield, probably the best-known segregationist lawyer in the country, has to be interesting if not particularly enlightening.

High on a hill overlooking Yazoo City perches the proud white marble office building of the Mississippi Chemical Company, and within a lavish suite of offices on the fourth floor presides Satterfield, lifelong Mississippian, genteel gut fighter and for the past 20 or 30 years one of the most important and most frequently victorious generals in the battle against integration of southern schools.

His tortured syntax and well-practiced generalities and expressions of southern hospitality, create an aura of respectability for the continued holding action against progress of the American blackman.

Satterfield views the Supreme Court as not his enemy but the enemy of the country, in that this "ill-considered" ruling of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, forcing full integration by the end of the year (the very thought of it actually happening is preposterous) is hampering, not helping the cause of the Negro.

"This (integration) is, of course, a gradual process," he says. "It has been announced by Secretary Finch and by President Nixon that they intend to enforce the constitutional guarantees in the field of education throughout the entire United States, not in any particular section.

"My judgment would be that the process will be begun within the next few months but it will actually take several years for it to be extended to all parts of the United States."

The implication, unspoken but there nonetheless, is that in his judgment Mississippi will not be in the forefront of reform, either.

His reaction to the suggestion that segregated black schools in his own Yazoo City make little effort to teach anything of a more academic nature than the importance of turning up to class each day and not getting uppity, is one of near horror.

"I do not know of any instance in my judgment—Io do not believe it to be a fact that any graduate of our high schools attended predominantly by the Negro race, in fact exclusively by the members of the Negro race, has ever received a diploma without being able to read and write."

This was in response to a question about statements made the day before by a black principal of a black high school, a saddened and frustrated man who swore that "social promotion" meant students were regularly advanced without regard for what they had or had not learned.

What, then, of integration, Mr. Satterfield? What of eventual inter-marriage, and what of the future of Mississippi blacks?

"Of course," he answered, "we have more than 900,000 of the finest Negroes in the world in Mississippi. They and their fathers and their grandfathers have been Mississippians just as long as my grandfather and father, whose pictures are there on the wall. . ."

In the lobby of the marble MCC office building is a permanent exhibit of paintings showing various scenes of cotton plantation life during the time of slavery in Mississippi.

Presumably they are there to remind people how far the black man has advanced, but I didn't ask.

"I believe they have an excellent future in my judgment, unless prevented by employed troublemakers (he named Rudy Shielfs, a dedicated young agitator from Chicago who has successfully managed black boycotts, in several Mississippi cities).

"Insofar as intermarriage is concerned," he continued, "it is my judgment that it is not in the best interest of either race and certainly not to the best interest of the United States.

"In other countries, chiefly in other continents, it has been the experience that the intermarriage of races has tended to have a very adverse affect on the citizenship."

Similarly Satterfield bridled at suggestion that segregated housing exists in Mississippi. If it does, he said, it's because members of both races prefer it that way.

"In my judgment," he said, "if a Negro was to move into a white community he would not be assassinated. On the other hand, in my judgment, if a Negro was to move into certain exclusive white areas it would be considered objectionable."

Does he believe, then, in letting the races be separate but equal?

"No, not separate but equal, but on a basis of equality and to whatever extend there may be separateness it would be voluntary on the part of those involved."

What of Mississippi's chances of riot and violence in the months to come, with the Supreme Court ruling for instant integration now upheld by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals despite a vigorous fight by administration officials?

Unlikely, he says, and black spokesman agree with him.

But a final comment on the riots of the past: "The riots to which you refer have been set up and planned by militant Negro organizations where they were involved, or mixed organizations or in some instances by organizations which have very close Communist ties.

"I do not know that many instances have been shown to be true where many of these riots have been instigated and planned by those who have very close Communist ties . . . "

And there you have it, the opinion of a refined and gentlemanly and extremely likeable segregationist who believes that the violence of ghetto life is a Communist plot against America; who believes that schools that do not teach are comparable to scohols that do; a man who believes, simply, that it is unlikely that black and white can ever achieve true equality.

Tax Reforms Spring Up For 1970 Ballots

By CAPITOL NEWS SERVICE

Tax relief for homeowners, renters and senior citizens, a statewide property tax for schools, curbs on the charity property exemption and income tax withholding were proposed by the State Board of Equalization as "elements in any comprehensive tax reform legislation."

The board of equalization, the state's major revenue agency, made its recommendations before a joint meeting of the Assembly and Senate Revenue and Taxation committees meeting in Sacramento.

Seven other changes were proposed by chairman John Lynch.

They included:

Authorization for counties to collect property taxes in four or more installments; end restrictions on review of property tax appeals taken to superior courts; subject public lands leased to private users to full taxation; simplify administration of the 1 per cent local sales and use tax and eliminate special exemptions for utilities and carriers now in the local tax law; provide more equity in the truck transportation tax or eliminate it; eliminate preferred treatment for insurance companies now in the Constitution by removing the principal office deduction not afforded to other business taxpayers; and end the inequity between diesel and gasoline use by trucks by raising diesel fuel 2 cents a gallon because it is 50 per cent more efficient.

Lynch recommended the 1968 homeowner exemption be boosted from $750 to $1,500; raise the qualifying income for senior citizens seeking property tax assistance from $3,350 to $5,000; and grant a minimum 20 per cent tax credit.

Temporary funding of the Cal-Vet Farm and Home Loan Program has been provided through a $13 million loan from the state's General Fund. Gov. Ronald Reagan said the loan will provide financing for about 715 veterans homes, at the present average of $18,000 per home. The state has $200 million in authorized, but unsold, veterans' bonds. A constitutional amendment on the June 1970 ballot will permit the state to accept bids of up to 7 per cent interest on the bonds which now have a 5 per cent ceiling.

Questions Unanswered On State's Church Tax

By JERRY RANKIN

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California soon begins taxing some church businesses, although the move is more a reflection of changing times than a big money-maker for the state treasury.

The tax takes effect Jan. 1, but no one knows exactly who will be taxed, where they are or how much money will be raised.

State Finance Director Caspar W. Weinberger summed up the situation in a recent report by listing the expected revenue from the new tax as "unknown."

The law, passed by the 1969 legislature and signed by Gov. Reagan, simply extends the state's seven per cent tax on corporate income to businesses directly operated by religious organizations, but unrelated to their theological function.

The problem is that no one, from the state officials charged with enforcing the law to the churches themselves, can — or is willing to — give a specific example of a business which isn't taxed now, but will be by the new law.

The law was sponsored by Democratic Sen. Anthony C. Beilenson of Beverly Hills, a Jew. He was surprised at the easy passage of a bill that in years past would have been a highly controversial matter.

This year, however, supporters noted that most major churches had endorsed such legislation, including the National Council of Churches. For that reason, he said, "the churches laid off" the legislation.

Beilenson says "nobody has any idea" how much money will be raised by the measure.

James T. Philbin, a Franchise Tax Board lawyer who will administer the law, remarks "we have absolutely no idea" how much money will come in. He said he is sending information on the law to all the church organizations he can find, and will seek help from the news media next year to publicize the law.

Rev. Glen A. Holman, lobbyist for the Northern and Southern California Councils of Churches, was asked if the revenue might hit $1 million a year.

"I would doubt it would be that high," he answered.

The law does not involve businesses which have a controlling interest held by a church, but which are actually run by lay management. These already are taxed.

Holman explains, "You really find that the big investment churches have is usually more in things they lease out, such as owning a hotel or motel. Or they have it in stocks and bonds. Your mainline denomination don't want to be bothered with operating businesses. Most aren't going to be affected."

He couldn't give an example of a business that will be taxed in the future because of the law, and added that churches which might be, aren't anxious to talk about it.

"Most that do it don't want particularly to advertise it. People might think it's kind of getting away with a special privilege," the Rev. Mr. Holman commented.

He said "there seems to be practically no concern" over the new law. "I haven't had more than two or three inquires from churches."

William R. Burke, legislative counsel for the Roman Catholic bishops of California, said he'd "be surprised if there is a great deal of tax money resulting from this bill."

State officials note that such things as cemeteries, publications, homes for the aged and so on directly related to a church's function won't be considered unrelated income, and thus will remain tax-free.

But if a church ran, for instance, a movie house devoted to family-type films, it would be taxed.

The new law also requires all churches to list their types and sources of income — but not the amounts, unless it was from unrelated businesses.

THOMAS AQUINAS COLLEGE

A New Tack Is Taken On Education

By JOANNE GRANT

Thousands of angry college students complain today that education is not relevant and seek change through demands, demonstrations and destruction.

A handful of college professors, equally convinced of the irrelevancy, have taken a different tack and founded a new college.

It is so new it hasn't opened yet, but a dozen faculty members have been hired, space has been found, students are interested and private contributions are coming in — in time to begin operations next fall.

It is Thomas Aquinas College on the campus of Dominican College of San Rafael.

It will be an unusual school, a radical departure from current educational efforts by private and public schools and its founders are convinced it is one answer to the "crises in education."

At Thomas Aquinas, students will receive a "liberal arts education in the traditional sense" with a curriculum reminescent of that studied at Harvard and Yale as far back as 1750, said Dr. Ronald P. McArthur, president of the college in an interview on the campus.

Included in the demanding course of study, the same for all students, will be four years each of mathematics, science, philosophy and a seminar which will include history, literature and psychology. Greek and Latin will be the only languages taught.

Textbooks in most cases will be the works of the old masters such as Euclid, Aeschylus and Aristotle, working up in the senior year to more modern ones such as Einstein, Freud and Marx.

There will be no electives and no majors, McArthur, a former teacher at St. Mary's in Moraga, explained.

Classes, which will be called tutorials, will be small, with a maximum of 15 students and there will be no more than 300 students in the whole school.

Teachers will be called tutors, with equal rank, and there will be no premium on publishing, he said.

They will be expected to know all parts of the curriculum so they can constantly show the relationship of the parts to the whole.

To this point, the college is not unique. St. John's College in Annapolis, Md., follows a similar plan and some private and state colleges have departments patterned after St. John's 30-year-old experiment.

But Thomas Aquinas will not stop at relating subjects to each other and examining their philosophical implications.

The new Catholic college will also examine and judge in the light of theology.

McArthur believes "Christian revelation not only shows how to live morally, but it also illumines the intelligence."

Philosophers such as Socrates will be compared with Catholic philosophers such as St. Augustine to help students understand revelation and to encourage the central role McArthur believes the church should play in the intellectual life of Catholics.

Catholic colleges require theology courses, but many have reduced the requirements in recent years and none intertwine theology with other subjects, as Thomas Aquinas plans to do.

How can McArthur's plan solve even a portion of the current "crises in education"'

He sees the crises, aside from direct revolution, as part of "an attempt to make every part of life political, including the university which should prepare partisans . . . who can change society."

Traditionally, he contended, education has been free from politics. "To maintain education in that way is to keep it free from the things that make it a battleground."

John W. Newmayr, dean of the new college, maintained that many persons don't understand the ideologies, the foundations of today's politics and therefore are unable to analyze them.

Education has become vocational, superficial, he contended.

However, none of the men involved with the college believe the students who are noisily trying to force change will attend Thomas Aquinas.

"It is not the answer to education in general," McArthur said, but he believes it is a step toward restoring education to its "rightful place." You have to have understanding for change," he said.

"If you change things without understanding, it's madness," added Neumayr.

Obtaining understanding is going to be tough, the men from Thomas Aquinas warned, and along with standard requirements for intellect, students who attend Thomas Aquinas must have a deep desire to learn, Neumayr said.

The new school will be a men's college, but woman students from Dominican may enroll through the latter and will receive their degrees from it.

The two schools will share facilities such as the library and cafeteria and for the first year, Thomas Aquinas will use a Dominican building. By 1972, it hopes to have its own building on the east side of Forest Meadows.

REV. WILLIAM K. HARMAN
To Terra Linda church

New Team Ministry Is Formed

Rev. William K. Harman, who served as part-time youth director at Faith Lutheran Church in Terra Linda while working on a master's degree at the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, begins his duties next week in a new team ministry at the church.

Harman then attended Hartford, Conn., Seminary Foundation, prior to teaching church history at the Lutheran Theological College in Makumira, Tanzania. He held the post until last summer.

The Terra Linda church called Harman last month to join Rev. Bliss W. Bellinger in forming the team ministry under a three-year grant from the Board of American Missions of the Lutheran Church.

Of the new program, Bellinger said this week: "The national church offers this unique form of ministry, called Staff Ministry Program, to certain young congregations with a responsibility in a rapidly growing field. The purpose of the team ministry is to increase the effectiveness of the congregational staff and therefore increase the total ministry of the congregation to its membership and its service to the community."

Harman with his wife, Patti, and sons, Douglas and Derke, arrived this week.

Christmas Cantata Scheduled Tomorrow

"Love Came Down at Christmas," a cantata by Carl W. Van Dre, will be presented at the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at the Bethel Baptist Church, 1929 Novato Boulevard, Novato.

Mrs. Leland Smith will be soprano soloist. A tenor and alto duet will be sung by Leonard Feaster and his daughter, Mary. Mrs. Philip Dickinson will direct.

Two Schools Of Thought On Morality

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

There are two schools of thought about morality.

One holds there are objective standards of right and wrong that apply to all people at all times. This is the traditional view, espoused by most religious bodies since the time of Moses and the Ten Commandments.

The other holds that morality is essentially subjective: a matter of doing what you feel is right under the circumstances which confront you at a particular time. This view—popularly expressed in the maxim, "Let your conscience be your guide"—has acquired a very wide following in recent years.

SOME PITFALLS

Pitfalls of the traditional view have been plainly marked since Jesus engaged in verbal tilts with the Pharisees. A morality based on observance of external rules is forever in danger of becoming legalistic and inflexible, of upholding the letter rather than the spirit of the moral law.

But reliance on "conscience" can also lead to some pretty horrible results.

That easily forgotten truth was brought home to many Americans last week by Paul Meadlo, 22, of West Terre Haute, Ind.

In an interview with Mike Wallace of CBS News, Meadlo said he and other American soldiers killed scores of South Vietnamese civilians—old men, women, children and even babies—by shooting them during an Army raid on a village at Song My in March 1968.

"They didn't put up any fight or anything," Meadlo recalled. "The women huddled against their children and took it. They brought their kids real close to their stomachs and hugged them and put their bodies over them trying to save them."

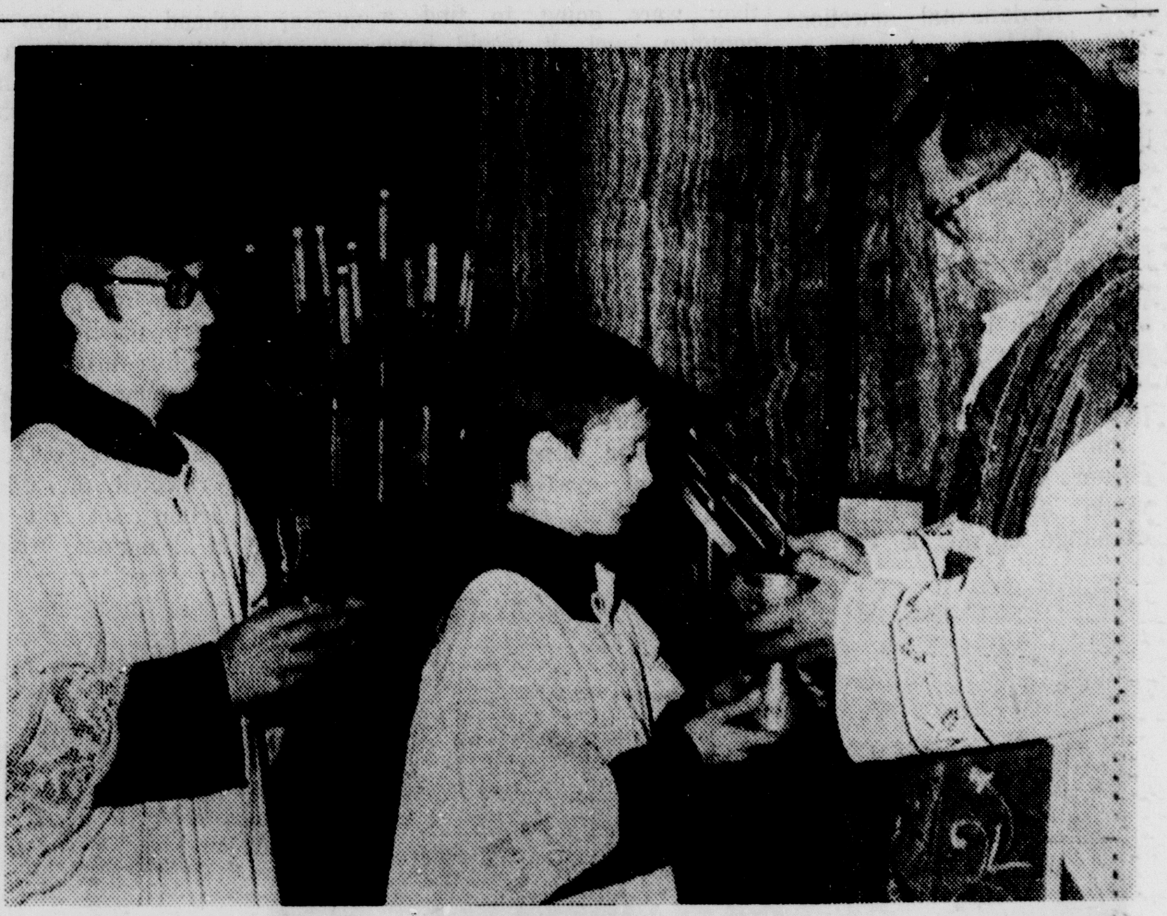
"Why did you do such a thing?" Wallace asked.

"Why did I do it?" Meadlo replied. "Because I felt like I was ordered to do it. And it seemed like I realized...at the time, I felt like I was doing the right thing."

GOOD BUDDY

Meadlo went on to explain that he had "lost a damn good buddy" in combat with Viet Cong guerrillas who had used Song My as a hideout, and "it was on my conscience" to avenge him.

"So after I done it, I felt good. But later on that day, it was getting to me."



NEW FORMAT IN ROME

Under new liturgical reforms in the Catholic Church, altar boys hand chalice and wine cruet to a priest celebrating the new format Mass in Rome's Sant 'Andrea delle Fratte Church. Until the reforms went into effect last Sunday in Italy, only the priest could handle the sacred vessels. Other countries are following the reforms, which will be universal probably within two years.

GUEST — Dr. Stanley E. Linquist, head of the psychology department at Fresno State College, is presenting a series of lectures at the Marin Evangelical Free Church, which meets at the Improvement Club, Fifth and H streets, San Rafael. He will speak at 7:45 p.m. tonight and again at 11 a.m. tomorrow on the general theme, "The Church as a Therapeutic Community."

Meeting Moratorium

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) -- A two-year moratorium on national church meetings is urged by the United Methodist Church's program council, which notes that the denomination has held a total of 19 national conferences or consultations since 1968.

Christmas Festival Is Set Dec. 21

Highlight of the Christmas season for the Marin Covenant Church will be its annual Christmas Festival, Sunday, Dec. 21, at 5:30 p.m. in the Marinwood Community Center.

Activities will include a smorgasbord dinner, Christmas carol singing, music by a guest group, and a brief meditation regarding the meaning of Christmas by the Gary R. Copeland, pastor.

Reservations need to be made early, Copeland said.

Performance Set For 'The Messiah'

Performances of Handel's "The Messiah" will be presented by the San Geronimo Valley Singers at the San Geronimo Valley Presbyterian Church at 8 p.m. Dec. 14 and at St. Columba's Episcopal Church, Inverness, on Dec. 28 at 3 p.m.

Soloists will be Robin Miller, soprano; Florence Bierman, contralto; Kent Weaver, tenor, and Walt MacNally, bass. The singers will be conducted by Darrell Parker with Faye MacNally as accompanist.

Dance Group To Present Program

The Margo Jones dance group will perform a "Celebration of Life during the 9:30 a.m. service tomorrow at the Community Congregational Church of Belvedere-Tiburon.

The sermon by Rev. Frank Evans will be "He Comes That We Might See." A traditional worship service will be held at 11 a.m.

At 5 p.m. the third annual Advent Festival will be held with children of the parish making decorations for the church tree. The festival also will include Christmas caroling.

Novato Church Sets Israel Film Showing

"The Twentieth Century Miracle," a film of Old Testament prophecies, will be shown at 7 p.m. tomorrow at Bethel Baptist Church at 1929 Novato Boulevard, Novato.

The film, made in color in Israel, shows desolate land being reclaimed, Solomon's copper mines on the Red Sea being restored, ruined cities being rebuilt and the deep sea port of Ashod.

Ancient Celts started the Halloween mask tradition. They wore disguises as protection against witches and evil spirits who supposedly emerged from underground lairs to dance and play one night a year.

Church Slates Concert, Show

A chamber music concert will be presented at 7 p.m. Dec. 14 at the Santa Venetia Presbyterian Church.

The concert will include "Mozart's Piano Quintet in E flat," Prokofieff's Sonata for Flute and Piano," one of Handel's trios for two violins and the organ, Soprano Elsie Krinitsky performing a work by Maurice Ravel and two piano solos.

During the intermission, paintings by members and friends of the church will be on display.

The concert is open to the public without charge.

'The Messiah' Is Slated Tomorrow

The combined choirs of First Presbyterian Church, San Anselmo, and First Presbyterian Church, Berkeley, will present "The Messiah," by Georg Friedrich Handel, tomorrow at 7:30 p.m., at the San Anselmo church, 72 Kensington Road.

The presentation will be directed by John Milton Kelly of the Berkeley church, with Wilbur Russell of the San Anselmo church as organist.

Soloists will be Verna Snapper, soprano; Esther Chow Lee, contralto; Ray J. Tilley, tenor, and Byron Jones, baritone.

Novato Priest To Be Leader

A Novato priest has been chosen as spokesman for a group of Catholic priests from eight Western dioceses who favor such church reforms as optional celibacy for the clergy.

Father James M. Purcell, associate pastor of Our Lady of Loretto Church, will be the group's representative to the National Federation of Priest Councils.

He will represent priests from dioceses at Santa Rosa, Oakland, San Francisco, Monterey, Stockton, Salt Lake City, and Reno and the Archdiocese of San Francisco.

Christmas For Pioneer America Was An Occasion For Gratitude

It is startling to know that at one time Christmas was abolished legally in the United States but it is perfectly true.

In 1659, the General Court of Massachusetts, under the stern Puritan influence, forbade the keeping of Christmas. But despite a bitter fight on the part of the Puritans to keep and maintain the law, it was repealed in 1681.

WHAT WE KNOW in the U. S. as the traditional Christmas celebration dates back only about a hundred years.

The pioneers of this country really had what we would term a bleak Christmas. Turkey appeared on the board, true, because men went into the woods and shot wild turkey in order to have a feast of sorts. But in the rude sod houses, log cabins and huts of pioneer America, Christmas was not a gorgeous festival complete with presents, a groaning table and Dickensian cheer.

It was, rather, a prayer of gratitude for having survived yet another rigorous year. What foods were wrested from nature were prepared and stored with prayerful hope to reach the next harvest — a major concern of these self-reliant settlers.

IN THE Midwest, scarcity of wood obliged the homesteaders to gather buffalo chips; these were dried out and hauled by sledge to be stored in lean-tos. To provide against bitter cold winds and snows that heralded the coming of the Christmas season, the entire family worked hard and in harmony to lay in provisions.

Their "soddy" (home) and barn were weather-proofed and measures were taken to keep out small animals, birds and rattlers that sought the warmth of the open hearth that provided heat and cheer for its human inhabitants. Most notable of the problems were birdholes.

After all of the necessities of self-preservation were completed, the pioneer family turned to the holiday preparations. Father fashioned gifts of wood and clay for loved ones; his plucky wife secretly knit mittens, sweaters and scarves while the children slept in the loft.

A PIONEER Christmas was gladness, family cheer and thankfulness for God's benefices.

Candles, then as now, played an important part of Christmas. Each family prepared tallow tapers made of vegetable fibers and animal fats or beeswax to shine radiantly on the tree that lighted the church. Because of the scarcity of trees, the Christmas tree that stood in God's home was the only tree available to the pioneer family in some regions.

Acceptance has always been an obstacle to man's progress, the Christmas tree was no exception.

ON CHRISTMAS Eve in 1851, Rev. Henry Schwan stood before the front door of the little Zion Church in Cleveland, Ohio. As the members of his congregation arrived for the services he heard a child's delighted whisper, "Mother, look — the pastor's got a tree from Heaven!" It was Pastor Schwan's first Christmas with his new congregation, having recently arrived in this country, and the tree which the child thought the pastor had received from Heaven was the first tree to shine at an American Christmas service.

But, instead of heralding cheer it brought a storm of controversy. Objectors were determined it should be the last Christmas tree erected in an American church.

However, on Christmas Eve of the following year, after sadly abandoning his wish of having a tree at his Christmas service, he received the present of a new tree from the pastor of one of Cleveland's older churches. Joyfully, Reverend Schwan realized that the tree meant the acceptance of the custom by churchmen far more influential than himself, and once again a Christmas tree shone in Zion Church. Soon the custom spread all through the land.

The Happily-Married Expert On Divorce

Writer-Lawyer Is Specialist In Domestic Relation Field

A Tiburon man, who both by religious tradition and his own sentiments is a devout believer in the family unit, is, paradoxically, one of the leading authorities on the California divorce laws.

Walter T. Winter, sometimes called "Mr. Divorce," practices law in San Francisco and is one of the few attorneys in the country specializing in divorce and domestic relations problems.

His serious demeanor in a courtroom and behind a desk at the office is in sharp contrast to Walter Winter at home, as both husband and father, where he believes the family should engage in activities together.

JUST HOW many divorces he has handled in the 12 years he has been practicing law in California since graduating from the Golden Gate College Law School, Winter can't say.

"I stopped counting after the first thousand," he tells you.

He has written his third book on divorce which is just off the press and in which he is an outspoken critic of the "New California Divorce Laws." That also is the title of the book.

Indeed, the book almost never reached print, as Winter had many disagreements with the publisher, Sheridan Publishing Inc., because the author says, "the publisher thought I was far too critical of the new laws."

IN HIS BOOK, Winter makes no bones about his disappointment "because it was the first change in almost one hundred years and it was not done well."

"More time should have been taken, for what is really needed is an entirely new concept instead of rushing to change existing laws," Winter declares.

The new California divorce laws will be rougher on women because of the equal division of community property requirement; but, Winter says, it also will give women a license "to cheat" because misconduct cannot be brought up in alimony battles as a result of the new "no fault" amendments in divorce complaint.

WINTER, ALMOST a compulsive writer, published his first book, "Divorce and You," in 1963. It was a book designed to help people prepare for divorce.

He also wrote and published "A Manual of California Domestic Relations Procedures" for attorneys, in addition to having authored numerous articles on the subject of divorce.

The nemesis of the expert, today, is constant interruptions from numerous telephone calls by people wanting information, and Walter T. Winter is no exception.

He is continually besieged by telephone concerning divorce laws. Many of the calls are from fellow attorneys.

INDEED, a majority of his clients are referred to Winter by other lawyers.

"Most attorneys don't like divorce work, but I enjoy helping people with their marital problems," Winter explains.

"Many times you can help a couple in trouble resolve the difficulties before the two really decide to go to the divorce court," he declares. "In other cases, differences are so irreconcilable that dissolution of the marriage is the only course for

THE LIGHTS BURN late in the Tiburon study of attorney Walter Winter, who frequently works at his typewriter till 2 a.m., writing articles and books on divorce and domestic relations problems, or doing his homework for an upcoming legal case.

BUT EARLIER in the evening, Winter has found time for his own wife and children. Here, with the youngsters tucked away in bed, he and wife Linda relax, sometimes discussing family matters, sometimes enjoying music together. (Photos by Don Aron)

the happiness and sanity of both parties."

THE MORE divorce cases he handles, the more Walter Winter realizes he does not know the answer to why people get divorced.

"There are as many reasons for people getting divorced as there are divorces," he explains.

What irritates Walter most, however, are the many platitudes and trite phrases used by so-called experts in explaining why marriages both succeed and fail.

Winter's desire to help people, to become involved in their problems, may have been influenced by his family's religious traditions, for the men in the Winter family have been rabbis and cantors dating back to the 15th Century. His father and two brothers are rabbis, and his nephew is currently attending rabbinical school.

BORN IN Germany, Winter and his family escaped from the country in 1939 when he was 8, and Walter grew up in Oakland.

To support himself while attending college, Winter found work as a private detective and it was this investigative work that actually inspired him to study law.

Equally as dedicated as a family man and father as he is as a hard-working attorney, Walter T. Winter's day begins at 7 a.m. He is generally in his San Francisco office by 8:30 a.m., where he may handle as many as four to five cases in the morning when not in court; he seldom returns home before 7 p.m.

AFTER PLAYING with the family German shepherd, Plato, and his two children, Wendy, 8, and David, 5, along with some assorted pets that include a bird and a turtle, until the youngsters' bedtime, Winter will frequently write or catch up on his legal work until 1 or 2 a.m.

While Walter goes about his busy schedule, his wife Linda follows her own many interests and pursuits, in addition to running a home and looking out after two children and the family menagerie.

Her community activities include active participation in the Sunny Hills School, and, until recently, she was a Blue Bird leader.

LINDA WINTER also bowls once a week, plays duplicate bridge and when her husband is not working, the two play party bridge.

Weekends belong exclusively to Winter's family. All are avid cyclists, equestrians, skiers and sailors.

It is not an uncommon sight to see Linda and Walter bicycling along the Tiburon-Belvedere roads with the two children perched on the seats in back of each pedaler.

WHEN THE weather's right and the mood strikes, the family boards Walter's 30-foot Rawson sailboat, the Sabrina.

Winter's dream is someday to sail leisurely around the world with his family.

In winter, the family packs off to the snows for skiing, and in the spring and summer, it's off to Inverness and horseback riding along the many trails.

ATTORNEY Walter T. Winter may be "Mr. Divorce" in the courtrooms, but he is very much the family man around his own Tiburon home.

And, who can say if the problems of others only magnify his own enjoyment of his home.

HIS WEEKENDS belong to his family, and so it is a common sight for Tiburonites to see Walter Winter with wife Linda, 8-year-old Wendy and 5-year-old David enjoying themselves on their bicycles, or perhaps on board their 30-foot sailboat.

Individually created

A family must pay tribute in its own way — expressing devotion and finding comfort to its own satisfaction. Recognizing this, no two Russell & Gooch funeral services are ever alike. Each service is the beautiful, inspiring fulfillment of the family's wishes alone, selected by them to fit their individual specifications.

- Regular service provides all the facilities of our modern mortuary and attentions of an experienced staff.
- Budget service provides selection of only those facilities and aspects of service desired by the family.
- Minimum service . . . an accommodation for those families holding memberships in various burial associations as well as others desiring this type of service.

All details are fully explained in advance so the family has full understanding of the services provided with each funeral and the total cost.

"Can My Husband's New Silk Tie Be Cleaned?"

Your husband will have to take more careful aim at his mouth when wearing these new wide silk ties. Many of them, like the one your husband has, will bleed when in contact with any liquid, water or cleaning solvent.

There is no way to restore the color and design after the color has bled. The only help is preventive. Perhaps the old-fashioned habit of tucking a napkin under the chin when eating will return to fashion along with sideburns, moustaches and these wide, colorful neckties.

By Robert and Ronald Cassasa, Marin Cleaners, Inc.

BOBBY BURCH, of Corte Madera, and her partner Ken Fishler make up the Bobby and I duo that is one of the fast-rising young acts in the popular music and nightclub field. The two have behind them one recording, an appearance on the Johnny Cash television show, and engagement in such San Francisco clubs as the Hungry I, Mr. D's and the El Matador. They credit their success to date to "good communication, a relationship that works together."

An Act Ready To Spread And Spiral

By GARY TISCHLER

There is an old thing about rare wines, gems and clear notes.

You have to know something about boiled potatoes, open-air vegetable racks, broken drums and 20-year-old hats before you can savor them.

So first, take a trip. Pretend that you haven't been there for a while, even if you have a lot.

SAY IT'S A Friday night in the city, and it's cold enough to almost make you trot up Geary Street, past the bars and grocery stores and freezing, stray hippies. And take a few turns and burst onto Broadway, the place where everything is just a little bit more.

More cops, more tourists, more hustlers, gawkers, beepers, squawkers, per square curbstone and billboard.

There's Lawrence Ferlinghetti's City of Lights bookshop competing with some of the more exotic stuff available, decked out in neat plastic coverings. It is a place of mediocre shadings, touched by something akin to an ugly kind of beauty. There is more of less here, top, bottom, back and front and in-between and the most beautiful girl around may be a man. They're lining up like snakes at Finocchio's, but just sneaking a look at Carol Doda's old place. And suddenly you remember that the topless mother is no longer with us, and you skip the smug scowl, politely, because you're no different.

IT IS A good place for gem-hunting, and when you find it, it is like all the things they left out of the Salem commercial. It is strictly good and groovy without being pompously hip.

It was in the summer, 1969, at a place called the El Matador, next to Finocchio's, close to Carol's place, across the street from the stark Robin Galaxie, surrounded, in fact, by fleshy fantasy. It is small, tucked away, unpretentious, with half-way decent drinks and fully-clothed barmaids.

They called themselves Bobby and I, and if ever a gem or two were on display in a bloated creek of garishness, they were it. Broadway, San Francisco can make you feel any number of ways — ashamed, foolish, hungry, righteous, sick or just like a wet ashtray, but these two can pick you up and make it mellow.

TRUTHFULLY enough, they make you work. You have to be open to a little feeling, not be committed totally to the Rolling Stones, remember a certain amount of joy, be prepared to listen as well as keep your eyes open, be ready to recognize something on the special side.

She (Bobby) sang. He (Ken or I) played the piano and sang like another instrument. Together, they became something else. To call them music-makers isn't enough, and to say that they were fresh is too much like Heidi skating in Central Park; but still, that's what they were.

Their thing, their music and gig, is in nobody's and everybody's bag. There are no off-limit signs for age groups, nothing to scoff at. It is at once unique and recognizable, brand new, with images for most people, even sober ones. If you can still catch a note or a feeling on the fly or on the first bounce.

HER NAME is Bobby Burch

His name is Ken Fishler.

Recognizably young, early 20s maybe more or less, good families, musically trained, formally, by intuition and by need.

She is blonde, missing the All-American look only by having too much character and well-directed energy; long wig-hair, slender, big eyes, she plugs into the microphone like it's a Christmas card and swings into "Take a Message to Michael"; she skips, she zooms, and always the smile, not passed on by your friendly P.R. man, but just there, and then dips ever so quietly into "Miss Otis Regrets," which can grab like a sneaky-punch, a drink without a cherry.

HE COMMANDEERS the piano like it's a toy from a favorite uncle, loving, loose, a wizard of sorts, pebbles and ripples, a slightly boyish grin on his face, looking always surprised that some of these things might sound that good, a little coy, and cool, maybe shy.

Bobby And I: They'll Make You Feel Good, Or Just Feel

But it really doesn't do much good to talk about them that way. Separating Bobby and Ken misses the point. It makes them good, but not clicking like the right key. You can pick up all their separate good things, but it's "Him and Her" that makes the whole thing glow, picks up the depressed guy on his 10th drink, the party-boy in his cups, the gal not trying to act 40 — picks them up out of a buck and a half drink, jingles them dry of admiration and good feelings.

No matter what gig you're doing, jazz, rock, or even Welk in 1910 summertime, that's what makes it happen, communication, a private happening that stirs memories.

THE JOB AT the El Matador, with their own names on top, was brief but it seemed the right kind of job, even though disagreements with the management cut it short. Prior to that they had been through a job in Los Angeles, tapings for a Johnny Cash appearance, repeated appearances at the long-gone old Hungry I, and a memorable and heady debut at the Chez Chou Chou in San Francisco.

They're on the verge, ready to spread and spiral. There's already one album ("Bobby and I," Liberty), an uneven and educational experience for them. There was also an opener for the Don Ellis band this fall at Mr. D's. And from here on in, they can go sideways, or up, quickly or slowly.

Show business, especially the nightclub and pop music scene, is peopled by all kinds of freaky cases, but these two aren't anywhere near the bad story fringe. They seem nice, in the best sense of the word, not square or boring, but sharp, intelligent, sensitive and mostly talented.

YOU CAN even like them, not always an easy thing to do with performers the first time around.

You wonder just what they're doing in this particular pool already crammed full of eager fish. But ask any of the other fish and you come up with the same answer — it's where they've always wanted to be.

That they got together at all is something else again. They weren't exactly rolling down the same skating lane. In fact, until less than two years ago, they never even knew that the other existed.

Bobby, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burch of Corte Madera, had to take a back seat to baseball in her family until recently, which is kind of hard to believe just looking at her; but nevertheless there's a measure of truth in it.

SHE HAS two brothers, Frank and Ben, both Marin Catholic High School graduates who have thrown some mean curves and fast balls for high school and college teams, as well as semi-pro nines. Not suprisingly, the Burches became avid baseball fans.

"Dad came to see me whenever Frank or Ben wasn't pitching," Bobby says, laughing.

But with Bobby, also Roberta, it's always been music.

"I've studied music all my life, " she says. "I've never wanted to do anything else. That was it."

"ALL HER life" has included studying voice at Dominican Upper School for Girls in San Rafael, at the Cape Cod Conservatory and the Boston Conservatory, as well as stints with a rock group called Bluetones of Marin when she was a junior in high school.

Ken's father is a physician in Berkeley and he's been hanging around a piano ever since he can remember.

He had his first job when he was 13 in a dance-jazz combo and has been working in groups ever since.

Both of them went on to college, he to major in history, she in speech, and neither really wanted it.

"I THINK WE both did it because it was sort of expected of us," Bobby says. "It's a thing like you graduate from high school and you go on to college, just like that."

Somewhere in Bobby's senior year at the University of Pacific, a fellow named Ken Fishler was looking for a girl singer for his group and somehow, through a friend, got Bobby's name.

"It was really lucky," he says. "She was the only person in her dorm that night. But it

WHEN, in the living room of her parents' Corte Madera home, Bobby Burch and her pianist-partner Ken Fishler run through one of the numbers they perform as Bobby and I, they draw an attentive and appreciative audience in Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burch. wasn't easy to convince her."

"Well, I'd never heard of him; didn't know him or anything," she explains, "But we finally got together."

THE FIRST time I heard her sing, I knew I had found the girl," he says. "That was it." problems, and a lot of people worked on it."

Eventually, after trying a number of formats and groups, the two settled into some kind of groove and got a booking in the Chez Chou Chou. And a minor kind of lightning struck.

"Herb Caen boosted us," Ken recalls. "We got good reviews all around. Record people came in. It was all very exciting, for six months. But it was really too soon. This was supposed to be our training period. And we wound up being a little confused."

Part if what came out of that job was the record, which both consider a mixed blessing.

"LET'S JUST say it was very educational," Ken says. "We-learned a lot from doing it. We enjoyed it. There were a lot of problems, and people worked on it."

It is a pretty good album, but unless you've seen them perform, it won't help you. They come through, but right behind them seem to be Dimitri Tiomkin's relatives in the production room. Still, some of the charm, some of the bright things, the good songs are there.

Part of the good thing about their particular act is that they seem to dig, know and respect each other. That makes everything else all right. And that's something that is difficult to capture on stereo, to package and bring back through a needle.

BOBBY HAS a certain quality that is at once girlish, mischievous, a little on the prankish side, surprising and quick. But there is nothing flighty there, no Goldie Hawn scatterbrain. She is solid and knows what she wants.

"What she is is a person. The first thing I noticed about her is that she has taste; she is sophisticated, impeccable in manners, graceful and totally feminine. She has a kind of strength that looks very good. Musically, she's unsurpassed in the quality of her voice, how she uses it, in her technical ability. She will and can do anything she sets out to do. She has a very special quality."

That's Ken on Bobby. Now Bobby on Ken or them:

"WE'RE REALLY good friends. We have basically good communication, a relationship that works together. I'm impressed with him personally; he has fantastic technique. He can be straight ahead, business-like, he's most anxious to do something. I've never known a more honest, sincere, intelligent person."

Watch them out from under the fake lights of a set — on the wooded Dominican campus for a picture taking session. They romp a little, delighted with the whole thing, she like the girl coming back to old haunts, he a little bemused, wry. Like a set, they're pretty real.

It's the kind of thing that works even in way-out, out-of-the-way, or right-at-home places. They can make you feel good, or just feel.

Which is what their business is all about. Or should be.

Marin Continues A Ritual From Antiquity

The gathering of the greens is a holiday custom dating back into antiquity.

Members of the Decorations Guild of the Marin Art and Garden Center have been going through that yuletime ritual for only some 15 years. But it is a well established tradition with the women as yearly they collect the materials that will go into the decorative pieces to be offered for purchase at their annual Christmas Greens Sale at the art and garden center in Ross.

Marin
MAGAZINE

COVER PHOTO

FOR THE 1969 Christmas Greens Sale of the Decorations Guild, to be held next weekend at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross, the men of the Garden Society of Marin took over part of the task of pruning and gathering the greens which were then trucked to the center. At work on a pruning jaunt are Alfred H. Dewees, left, and Walter Andersen, both of San Anselmo. Garden society members suggest that home owners delay pruning their evergreens until the holiday season so that they can then use the trimmings in their holiday decor. (Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)

The 1969 sale will be held next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

THIS YEAR the guild women have had the assistance in the gathering and the sorting of the greens from another group taking part in that ritual for the first time — the members of the Garden Society of Marin, one of the founder groups at the art and garden center.

Together, the guild and society memberships were carrying out a tradition that began in primitive times, but not for decorative purposes as it is practiced now. Then, to early man, the vitality he saw in the evergreen leaf in winter time suggested some strange power — as if that leaf somehow contained some magic from the sun.

Also some evergreens, such as holly, ivy and mistletoe, which bear recognizable fruit only in the winter, suggested to the primitive peoples a triumph of fertility over adverse elements.

TO THESE ancients, then, the evergreen loomed as a symbol of some magic hope for a fruitful year to come.

Evergreen garlands were so closely connected with pagan rites that they were forbidden in early Christian church celebrations.

IN 575, Bishop Martin Bracae condemned their use as "another dangerous Calend custom." It wasn't until the 16th Century that Christians began decorating their houses. After that, it became the rage and Thomas Tusser, a sort of "Dear Abby" poet of his day, counseled the ladies of England to:

"Get ivy and hull, woman, deck up thine house."

By "hull," he was talking about what we call "holly." Our word is a derivation of its many early names, including holin, holver, hollin, holm and hull.

OLD TUSSER, who was a veritable storehouse of homey commands and bits of wisdom, had something to say about almost everything. He had such a gift for turning a bit of verse that many of his rhyming wisdoms are still in use today. It was he who first commanded:

"At Christmas, play and make good cheer
For Christmas comes but once a year."

On a more sober note he was the first to observe:

"The stone that is rolling can gather no moss
For master and servant, oft changing is loss."

HOWEVER, long before Mr. Tusser appeared on the couplet circuit, "holly" or "hull" had made its mark on the world. The Druids loved it. They felt it attested to the fact that the sun never deserted them.

Later came the legend that Christ's crown of thorns was made of holly leaves and thus

Evergreens Lend Yule Spirit To Marin Homes

FOUR KEY KINDS of holiday greens available in Marin are shown by Mrs. Walter A. Andersen, left, president of the Garden Society of Marin, who holds branches of arborvitae (in left hand) and fir, and by Mrs. William Millen, former Decorations Guild president serving as coordinator between the guild and garden society in preparations for next weekend's Christmas Greens Sale at the Marin Art and Garden Center. came our popular custom of fashioning it into wreaths. Whether that is true or not, its thorns, together with the redness of its berries, has tended to associate it with the Christ story.

In Denmark, it is known as "Kristdorn" or "Christ Thorn."

IN SOME early legends holly was known as a man's plant, while ivy, the clinger, was the plant of the woman. The two were represented in early carols in a kind of sex battle for mastery of the house.

"Holver and Heivy make a grete party" was a saying of the day.

One old Roman custom included decking the house with branches for the Kalendae of January — a pre-Christian feast day. The same was done in Northern Europe, but fir was used almost exclusively.

In Greek Chios, an old and ancient custom was to take around a pole wreathed with myrtle, olive and orange leaves, while the Circassians carried a young pear tree into their houses, topped by a cheese and covered with candles. From this, it was an easy step to the Christmas tree of the Anglo-Saxon world.

THE TREE, as we know it, is said to have started when Martin Luther, so moved by the brightness of the stars on a winter's night, brought a tree inside and set candles on it, in an effort to re-create the scene. That's a pleasant tale, but not substantiated.

The hard record discloses the first tree, as we know it, showed up in homes in Strasbourg in Alsace in 1605. The custom is not even recorded in England until the end of the 18th Century when the Prince Consort Albert, originally from Germany, introduced it into the royal family of Queen Victoria.

Historians point out that the custom of decorating it was easily enough explained. Most of the early day trees were fir, whose cones were on the dull looking side. Once in the house it was easy to substitute a more colorful decoration — at first paper flowers, gilded nuts and apples. Later came the colored balls and tinsel.

ANOTHER favorite Christmas green is mistletoe whose curious history is both as a killer and a curer. The Druids called it an "all heal." Country tradition has since fed it to sick cattle and also used it as human medicine. Yet, in the old Norse sun god myth, its wood was used to make the dart Loki threw to kill the beautiful god, Balder.

A similar inheritance has passed into Christian lore with the belief that the Cross was made from mistletoe wood, after which the plant shrank with shame to its present size. As such, it was generally banned from Christmas church decorations.

However, its "kissing" myth has made it popular for home and party use. In New York, one famous store sold green mink mistletoe at an exhorbitant price, advertising it "for the man who has nothing — but money!"

AN INTERESTING bit of natural history is the fact that the missel thrush, who some say the plant was named after, runs a mortal race with its favorite food. The bird gorges on the berries and those he misses are collected for use in bird lime.

Nicholas Culpepper, an English writer on astrology and medicine in the early 1600s, recommended it in its powdered form as a cure for the "fallin sickness" (epilepsy). Modern pharmacology warns that the berries are purgative, emetic and even ecbolic, and in large doses, the whole plant is a cardiac depressant.

Even so, mistletoe is the holiday favorite for use in "kissing balls" or "kissing bunches," an ornament many writers feel was actually the real forerunner of the Christmas tree.

IN EARLY days, the "kissing ball" consisted of a circlet or cage of mistletoe hoops, studded with candles and embellished with apples. It hung from the ceiling and often served as a simplified manger scene. Like the Christmas tree, but less accessible to prying small fry fingers, it often served as a safe place to hide small gifts.

The use of clusters of this parasitic plant in today's kissing balls or kissing bunches is easily traceable to the Druids' winter solstice rites. It was said that only the mistletoe that grew on the sacred oak could be used for sacrificial ceremonies. When it was gathered it was divided into small portions for distribution on the first day of the new year, and to be hung over the entrances of houses to please the gods and to offer them shelter.

The "kissing" under it, was actually an innocent and very tame survival from the Saturnalia of the ancients, a celebration billed as a really "swinging happening" at it mildest, and a good deal more at its peak.

ROSEMARY was the most prized of Christmas decorative greens until around the mid-19th Century. Then it lost out to the brightly decorated Christmas tree. Until then, it was used for its scent and its purple prettiness as well as for its sentiment that "rosemary is for remembrance."

It was also the traditional flavoring for the holiday festive boar's head.

Another green no longer used is the Rose of Jericho, whose dried leaves and flowers unfurled when moistened. These were said to symbolize the opening and closing of the womb of Mary.

Today, ivy, laurel, yew and bay are no longer as popular for housegreens as they were once. Writers say this is because each had connotations of either Bacchus, poison or death. As holly became more available, they fell into disfavor.

AS FOR holly, Culpepper felt it was a good deal more than just a decorative green with both pagan and Christian heritage. He recommended holly tea as a cure for measles and whooping cough. The berries, he said, alleviated rheumatism, gout and asthma. He reported that the ripened berries were a "purge for gross and clammy phlegm."

Meanwhile, the Argentinians tango along quite happily on the high caffeine content of mate tea — made from holly leaves.

At this year's Christmas Greens sale at the Marin Art and Garden Center visitors will find wreaths, swags, garlands and "take home" bundles, made from a long list of evergreens that grow here in Marin County, including fir, pine, cedar, deodar, holly, cypress, juniper, huckleberry, boxwood, redwood, cryptomeria and arborvitae. And, yes, the mistletoe.

They will also find other decorations — yule logs, kissing balls, sugar plum tree items, as well as table bouquets, plaques and many kinds of ornaments.

SO WHETHER we follow Mr. Tusser's command: "Get ivy and hull, woman, deck up thine house."

Or heed later rhymes promising:

"With holly and ivy
So green and gay
We deck up our house
As fresh as the day."

Or even prefer a more modern message:

"Deck them halls."

The message transcends time and age. It can be either: "At Christmas, play and make good cheer," or: "Have a real cool Yule, Man."

PRUNED EVERGREENS gathered from Marin gardens are loaded onto a truck bed by two members of the Garden Society of Marin. Col. Todd Salde, left, and Hugh Paterson. The load was then transported to Decorations Guild headquarters at the Marin Art and Garden Center, Ross, to be fashioned into holiday decorations, or to be sorted and bundled for sale.

MRS. ROBERT TUCKEY, a member of both the Decorations Guild and the Garden Society of Marin, was making wreaths for greens even before the guild became a Marin Art and Garden Center affiliate. Now she teaches members how to make them for the sale. Left to right, around the materials-loaded table, are Mrs. Tuckey, Mrs. Travis Devin, Mrs. David Coffman, Mrs. Ralph Kauer, Mrs. John Corson Smith, Mrs. Francis Whisler and Mrs. Harold Bailey.

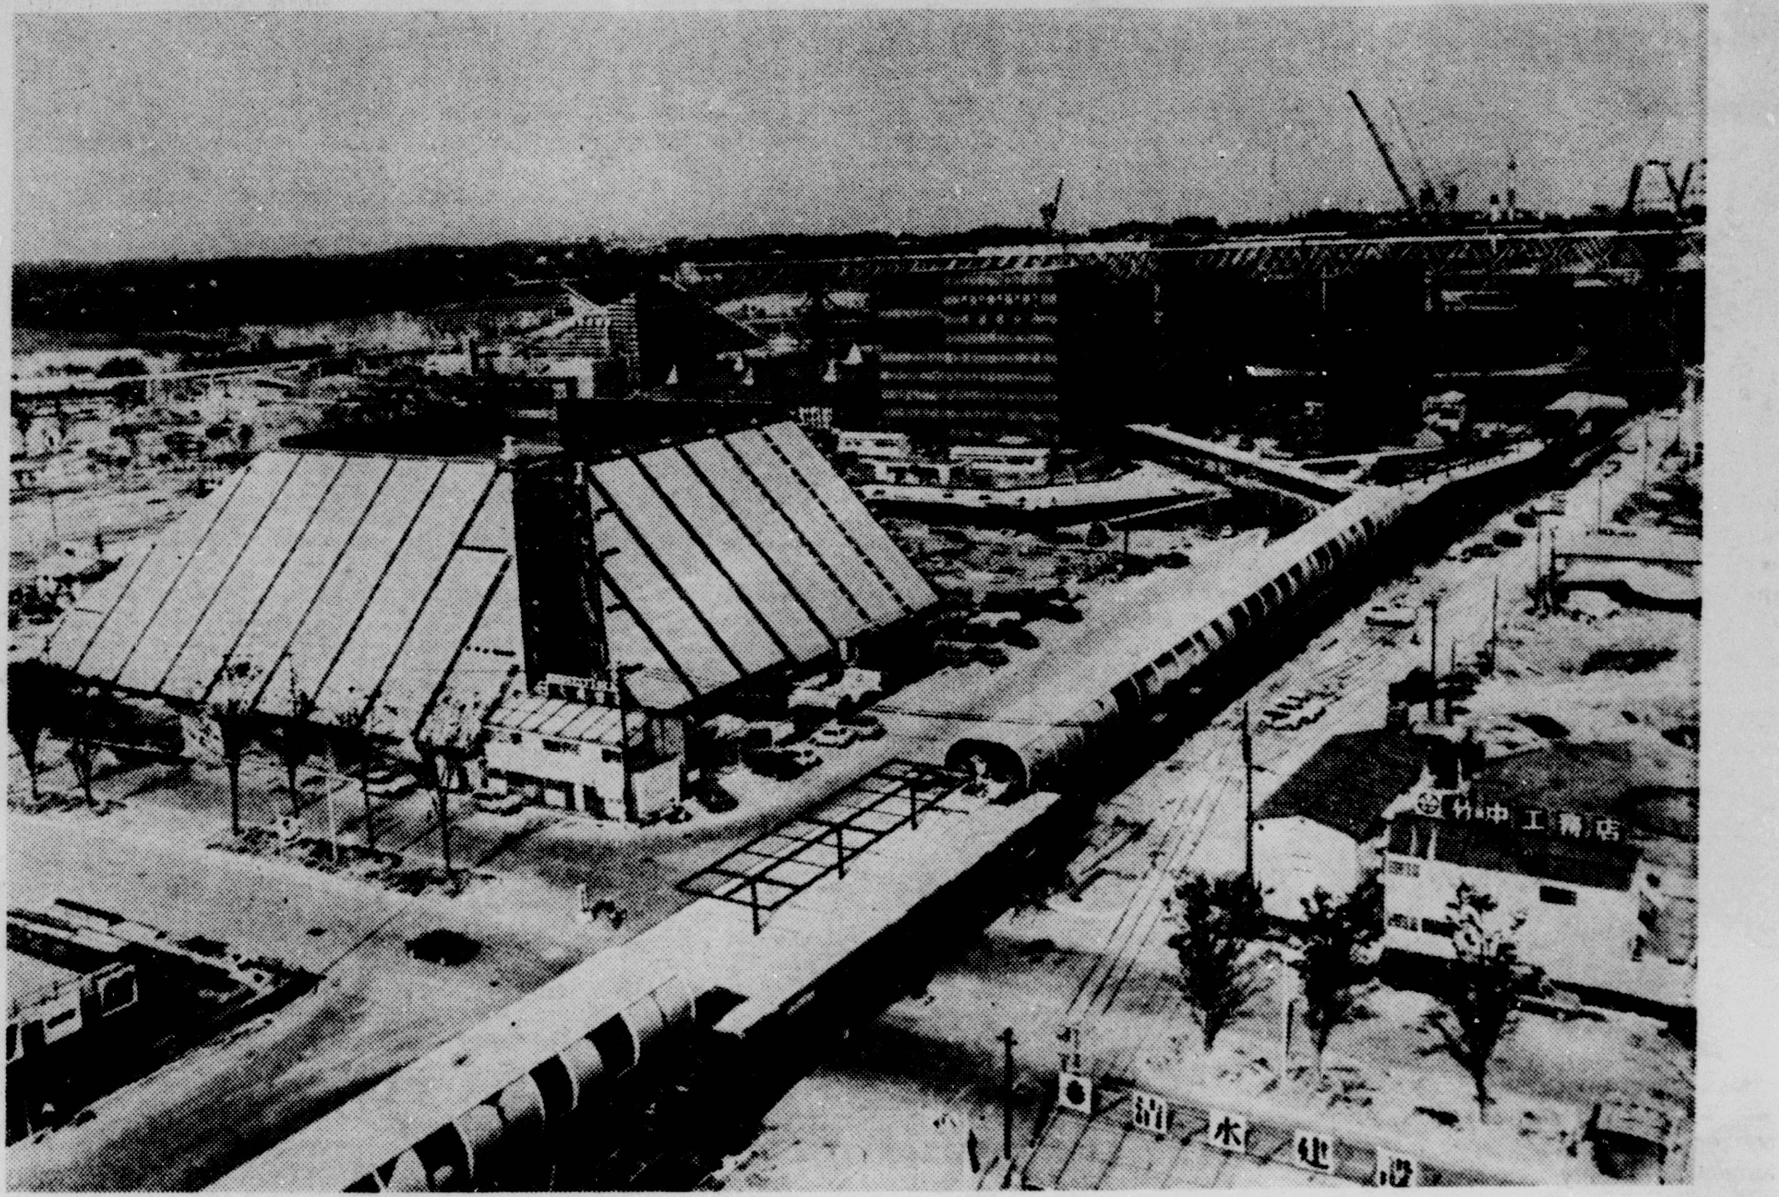
The Travel Pages



CANADA, which played host to the world's fair in Montreal in 1967, will be well represented at the 1970 international exposition at Osaka, Japan, by the pavilion seen at the left of this photo, with its exterior walls of mirrors and with a garden in its center. The novel moving sidewalk is being installed in the center of the photograph. Expo '70 opens next March 15 for a six-months run.

Japan's Expo '70 Is Right On Schedule

All Will Be Ready For The March 15 Grand Opening Date

A little more than a year ago, the Senri Hills outside Osaka, Japan, were still covered with bamboo trees and rice pattys. The surrounding countryside reflected the peaceful organized landscape so typical of the country.

Today, just three months before its scheduled grand opening, the area has been turned into a gigantic 815-acre fantasy land which will be Expo '70.

Expo '70 will be the largest world exposition ever staged, and the first in Asia, with some 77 countries plus a host of cities, states and international organizations showing exhibits in some of the most extravagant pavilions ever seen.

The construction of this Japanese exposition is currently right on schedule. By January, the exteriors of over 75 per cent of the buildings will be complete, and on opening day, March 15, 1970, the interiors will be ready to begin accepting the first of an expected 50 million visitors.

THE FAIR will run for six months, closing on Sept. 13, 1970.

The theme of the fair, "Progress and Harmony for Mankind," already has been put into action. A visitor to the site has to be impressed with the orderly fashion in which the hundreds of Japanese workers go about bringing this spectacle to life.

The roadways are clear and clean. Even now, tourists by the bus load arrive daily to view the progress and stretch their imaginations to visualize the finished products.

AS IN PAST fairs, many of the pavilions will be a mass of surealistic superstructure. Some resemble larger than life tinker toy arrangements, and erector sets, while others are being draped and covered with huge plastic sheets, giving a weird and exciting futuristic look.

The Fiji Islands Pavilion resembles an enormous orange caterpillar.

Dominating the southern area is the USSR Pavilion which looks like a vanilla Dairy Queen with the center scooped out. On the top is a red hammer and sickle.

The USA Pavilion, in contrast, is almost flush to the ground. The entire exhibit will be below ground under a plastic waffle-patterned bubble, filled with compressed air.

IN PREPARATION for Expo '70, the Japanese government sent a number of observers to Montreal to glean ideas and improve upon concepts to insure their own fair's success. As a result, the entire fairgrounds are surrounded by 2.7 miles of monorail tracks. Offered free of charge to all visitors, the monorail will complete the entire circle with seven stops in just 15 minutes.

Perhaps the most exciting innovation and one which will be most appreciated by visitors is the moving sidewalk. Serving six stations throughout the fair, the moving sidewalk is 2.3 miles in length and is completely enclosed in an oversized air conditioned glass tube.

The average person walks about three miles an hour and the sidewalk will move at a comfortable one mile per hour. Capable of carrying a total of 8,750 persons in any given hour, the riders will not only save shoe leather and leg muscles, but will have a continuing view of the fair while in transit. This also is free.

THE FAIR site is divided into two main areas.

The largest and central one has broad avenues lined with pavillions and includes a 64-acre Japanese garden. The smaller area to the north, called "Expoland," is devoted to fun.

The main attraction here is the "Daidarasaurus." This jet coaster ride whisks visitors all around 41 acres of the Expoland. It is actually five rides which operate at different speeds so they can be enjoyed by all ages.

Eating will present no problem, unless it is choosing which of the 145 restaurants you will visit. A leisurely lunch may also be enjoyed in one of the Gondola snackbars. Visitors may take their lunch, step into one of these Gondolas and dine during a 20-minute ride through the air up and over the 102-foot tall tower, giving them a fantastic view of the fair below.

SPEAKING OF towers, the main observation tower, rising 396 feet into the sky, will afford visitors an unrivaled view of the fair, surrounding countryside and the Kita Settsu Mountains which rim the valley.

In order to avoid a housing situation similar to Montreal, the Japanese embarked on a huge hotel building program.

On opening day, there should be some 11,000 Western style rooms with 18,000 beds within a 10-mile radius of Osaka. Individual reservations, even at this date, are impossible to come by. All the space has been booked by wholesalers who are offering them to their clients through travel agents.

For the adventuresome, however, another 13,000 rooms in Japanese style inns within an hour of the site have been registered with the government as tourist hotels. In addition, there are about 500 rooms in nearby homes which have been made available. English is spoken in each of these homes.

OF THE EXPECTED one-half million visitors predicted by fair officials, 550,000 are expected to come from the United States, with another 50,000 coming from Canada. According to American Express Co., which is the exclusive general sales agent for admission tickets in the United States, Canada and Mexico, their bookings for tours to Expo '70 are ahead of projections, indicating a great interest in the fair.

Tickets to the fair are available prior to the opening at a discounted rate of $2 for adults and $1 for children.

Transportation to the fair from Osaka will be by two rapid transit systems. Travel time is about 20 minutes and will cost about 35 cents. The trains leave from stations in downtown Osaka and go directly to the fair.

FOR THOSE driving, a new super highway from Osaka is nearing completion and will connect directly with the expressway to Tokyo. Parking facilities for 21,500 cars next to the site will give easy access.

For those staying in Tokyo, the famous Bullet Train runs down and back twice a day. This ultra-modern train, which reaches speeds of 150 miles per hour, gives the visitor a fine picture of the Japanese countryside as well as comfort and efficiency unrivaled on any train in the United States.

The old Imperial City of Kyoto and the Deer Park at Nara abound with temples and should not be missed. It is here that the Buddhist and Shinto shrines proclaim to the world the very essence of Oriental culture. Both are within easy traveling distance from Osaka.

The Bullet Train also stops in Kyoto and day tours can be easily planned.

'Bed And Breakfast' In Britain

Most overseas-bound vacationers book accommodations in hotels as the simple way to assure themselves of rooms.

It takes a little inside know-how to discover other ways of doing things. Take Britain, for example:

In every town and village, and on the outskirts of big cities, scores of discreetly curtained windows in private homes carry the sign "Bed & Breakfast."

For a cost of around $2.40 you will be given a clean, comfortable bedroom for the night, and a full English breakfast the next day.

Elderly widows, or couples whose children have grown and flown, make an extra bob or two this way.

Bookings rarely are necessary. On a driving tour of Britain you can stop off at a town at 5 p.m. and in a short time find satisfactory lodgings for the night.

A tip: if you need help in finding a good "B & B," ask a policeman. His knowledge will almost certainly point you toward the best choice.

NOTES TO TRAVEL BY

Alpine County's Bear Valley resort is offering new three-day ($35 a person), five-day ($59) and seven-day ($83) packages for skiers that include accommodations in the Mega Bear-Tamarack Lodge, daily breakfast and lift tickets. . . . Danish restaurants and hotels no longer add tips to their bills, and instead the gratuities are included in the prices shown on the rate sheets and the menus. . . . North American tourists without visas can now enter and remain in India for 21 days on temporary landing permits issued upon arrival.

P&O Lines' passenger ships will call at San Francisco a total of 29 times next year, as compared to 17 calls in 1969. . . . Holland-America Line and German Atlantic Line have combined their trans-Atlantic schedules for 1970 and will offer a total fo 15 such sailings. . . . Canadian Pacific Airlines will initiate at Toronto Airport on Jan. 1 its new system by which passengers arriving and staying in C.P.-owned hotels will be able to go directly to their rooms without personally handling their baggage.

Nearly 37,000 tourists visited Singapore last August, a 17 per cent increase over August, 1968, according to latest statistics. Most of the tourists were from the United States, Britain, Australia, Indonesia, Malaysia, Japan and India. More than 90 per cent came by air.

A Eulogy To A First Family

THE BYRDS OF VIRGINIA: An American Dynasty, 1670 to the Present, by Alden Hatch; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 535 pages, $10. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Dynasties are strikingly rare in American history.

Notable individuals we've had aplenty, but great families spawning leaders in diverse fields over many generations are very hard to identify in our short history. Adams, Lowell, Cabot, Roosevelt come to mind. Alden Hatch suggests that "The Byrds of Virginia," completing their third century in the "Old Dominion," deserve to be included in the select circle of American dynasties.

Although the Byrds have been leading citizens of Virginia over most of the time since the first William arrived from England in 1670, their greatest prominence has been achieved at the extremes of the three-century span.

Before the Revolution they were important participants in the political, economic and social oligarchy that shaped and ran the colony of Virginia. Then a combination of loyalty and an understandable inability to anticipate the colossal capacity of England for colonial blundering led them to support the Tory cause.

After this unfortunate choice of allegiance, 150 years passed before an explorer and a politician once again made the Byrd name one to be reckoned with on the American scene.

The first three Williams illustrate the phenomenon described in the cliche "from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves in three generations."

The first American Byrd was an English goldsmith who aspired to a higher station in life. His own acumen and ability, combined with the help of an influential and generous uncle, enabled him to jump from artisan in England to membership in the colonial aristocracy. His son built handsomely on this excellent foundation.

The second William became a huge landowner and political power and was an extremely learned man for his time. He is, incidentally, the only member of the clan whom Hatch makes at all human. Perhaps this is because this worthy kept a secret diary, since published, which catalogs his follies as well as his triumphs. William II fought with his first wife, seduced his servant girls and hated his political opponents with a gusto that even Hatch's pollyannaish tendencies do not camouflage.

His son, pampered in a houseful of women, was of weak character and managed to lose both land and position through self-indulgence, poor investments and loyalty to the Crown past the time of prudence.

The later Byrds, particularly the senator, are more eulogized than presented as interesting and accomplished human beings. Adm. Richard E. Byrd's tenacity in pursuit of the Poles is described, but we are always in the presence of the hero and never of the man. Harry Flood Byrd, who controlled Virginia politics as his personal fief for over 30 years, might as well have done it with mirrors for all of the dynamics of this political tour de force that Hatch exposes to view.

It is no doubt true that Senator Byrd loved his wife and children, cherished his fiscal conservatism and did his economic homework, but political machines are not built and controlled across generations by these admirable acts alone.

Hatch does his subject and his readers a disservice by his surface presentation of men who were not at all superficial.

In sum, this is an uneven book. It is at its best when Hatch is helped by the second William's diary. Without this aid, Hatch tends to present Horatio Alger heroes rather than men of flawed flesh who, along with their real accomplishments, sweat, connive, lose their tempers, think base thoughts and commit base actions on the road to glory.

The Jekyll And Hyde Of The Vegetables

THE WHITE POPPY by J. M. Scott; Funk & Wagnalls, 205 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Shirley Graves.

The "white poppy" is, of course, the opium flower, which the author calls the Jekyll and Hyde of the vegetable world. Compounds manufactured from it have been used in murder and suicide and to lead addicts to degeneration and crime; but at the same time they have also been used by physicians to relieve pain and suffering.

J. M. Scott has covered the story of opium completely in a non-technical manner that is surprisingly enjoyable to read. Opium has been around a long time — 6,000 years ago in the Middle East the Sumerians "wrote" about it in their ideograms.

The historical references are remarkably well-documented. The events surrounding the "Great Opium War" of 1839-42 between the English and the Chinese are related mostly through quotations from the writings of those who had been on the scene.

Attention is drawn to the thoughts of well-known writers who often wrote under the influence of opium. The early writings of such men as DeQuincy, Coleridge and others are contrasted with their later works. The author draws the conclusion that at the beginning of their association with the drug they were too happy and stimulated to settle down and write very often, and as the hold grew on them, their minds were so tortured they could write only of their fears.

It is interesting to find that while through the ages opium was often prescribed by medical men and available without restriction, there is no record of widespread addiction among non-Orientals until the latter part of the 19th Century. The author blames scientific progress for this, specifically the hypodermic injection. While a boon to medical treatment, it also appealed to the Occidental tastes as the opium pipe had not.

The spread of addiction alarmed the public and finally led to the international conferences in the early 1900s which culminated in laws, drafted for participating countries to enact, to control the cultivation and distribution of opium and other drugs. That these laws were of questionable success is discussed in the chapter on smuggling.

While this book contains some information as how to prepare poppies, and lists some tested smuggling techniques, J. M. Scott also gives plenty of valid reasons for not taking up with "The White Poppy."

A Look At The Theater Without Any Sacred Cows

THE SEASON, A CANDID LOOK AT BROADWAY by William Goldman; Harcourt, Brace & World, 432 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by James Williams.

Sacred cows do not exist as far as writer William Goldman is concerned. He tells it like it is.

He opens doors, which are normally closed, in his dissection of a theater season on and off Broadway.

His first look is into the late Judy Garland cult, a chapter worth the price of the entire book. He attempts to pinpoint her tragic success and her devoted — mostly from the homosexual world. From this chapter he wanders through the nation's theatrical city, leaving no corner of Broadway unturned. He is not arrogant in his approach nor biting when personalities are concerned.

Of course he throws some pretty good punches. No doubt Clive Barnes, who is on top of the New York Times drama totem pole, winced a few times along with a few scalpers, show angels and stars.

Goldman's credentials for this undertaking are excellent. He has authored such novels as "Soldier in the Rain," and "No Way to Treat a Lady," which were turned into entertaining films.

Goldman should put out another like this every season or so just to keep Broadway on its toes and alive.

A Rum Lot Is Made Yet Rummer

THE WILD, WILD WEST by Peter Lyon; Funk & Wagnalls, 146 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Debunking the ersatz heroes of the Old West has become a rather common game, but Peter Lyon does it amusingly and well in "The Wild, Wild West."

To make the job easy, he has chosen a rum lot of heroes: Joaquin Murietta, Wild Bill Hickok, Jesse James, Wyatt Earp, Bat Masterson, and Billy the Kid. Except for Earp and Masterson, they died with their boots on, as they richly deserved. Wyatt struck oil and made some money out of mining properties, to survive to the age of 80 in relative quiet and prosperity. Bat finished out his career in the relatively respectable role of sportswriter on a New York newspaper.

To make his rum lot rummer, Lyon has added a few notes about two of the Old West's most notorious females: Belle Starr and Calamity Jane.

What television has done with these names has, of course, no resemblance to either fact or folklore. It seems to gall Lyon.

This, plus utter lack of appreciation of the West's favorite form of humor, the tall tale, somewhat spoils an otherwise enjoyable book. And, like most debunkers, Lyon is guilty of doing even less research than the glamorizers he lambastes. He makes up for it, however, by generally clever if occasionally bitter writing.

Redemption Seeking At The Fat Farm

SING, CHOIRS OF ANGELS by George Cuomo; Doubleday, 214 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Suzanne D. Stamler.

Seraphim and Cherabim are teams of fallen and frustrated fatties who seek redemption through purification and transformation at Wonder Week Lodge, a posh fat farm rating high in Ry-Krisp and low in morale.

Edna Bollington, the dowdy wife of the trim manager of Byrne-Walters, a smart custom clothiers for men, is driven to the depths of depravity when her craving for sweets exceeds her yearning to be sleek. At a mock trial held by the Seraphim — the so-called angels of her slenderizing team — the fallen angel in a tragic comic way falls prey to the unfed appetities of long-wed and unloved women.

"Sing, Choirs of Angels" is one of many loosely connected episodes revolving in and out of a clothing store for men, with characters ranging through executive managers, salesmen, clerks, cashiers, buyers, wives, mistresses, daughters and dads.

Each story catches a glimpse of man's eternal quest for redemption either through love, renewed dignity, recaptured youth, birth, artistic creation, death or self-sacrifice.

Author George Cuomo has a talent for lightly touching on heavy truths about ourselves and deftly pokes fun at our foibles in such a way that the reader is carried from a somewhat bland recounting of a hum-drum marriage in "Oceans Apart" where we first meet Edna and Tom Bollington, into subsequent tales of sparkling wit, well controlled sequences, and ironic twists of fate. Characters cleverly emerge, submerge, and merge again and again, always struggling to survive in a fragmented world of loosely connected ties held together by lies, money and status seekers, mechanized routine and martyred souls.

"Sing, Choirs of Angels" may pierce the skin of the paper thin soul who is sensitive enough to be hurt but often too timid to listen. As for the thick-skinned, there's enough here for laughter until we meet the comedian in the episode of the "Sophisticated Lady" who succeeds in cracking the veneer of the cool, the coy and the punster by confronting his audience with an excruciatingly painful silence . . . a state few of us could endure for long.

Ireland's Petite Patriot

By DON KEOWN

THE PRICE OF MY SOUL by Bernadette Devlin; Alfred A. Knopf, 224 pages, $4.95.

Elected from Northern Ireland to the British Parliament at age 21, the youngest M.P since William Pitt, Bernadette Devlin has become the symbol of the civil rights struggle in Ulster.

Yet this petite and outspoken patriot is not entirely pleased by the recognition and adulation accorded her, both in her own land and elsewhere.

Too often, she believes, such support is based upon an empty-headed misunderstanding or lack of information on her true position. She is most generally pictured as a champion of a Roman Catholic minority. But the contest, as she sees it, is not a religious one at all, but rather a class struggle. And she offers herself as an upholder of the working class, both Catholic and Protestant. Her dearest wish is to heal the ugly breach between these two segments of the Irish population so that they can move together against the common foe.

She is a sworn enemy of partition. But she does not seek union with the Irish Free State to the south, simplistically. A condition of any such merger, she says, must be a major social, economic and political overhaul in both the north and south.

"Economically," she writes in her book, "The Price of My Soul," "I believe the South of Ireland is worse off than we are."

Socialism is the solution she espouses for rescuing both sections of Ireland from stagnation. And, she adds, this movement for the economic rights of an underprivileged people must be carried out on an island-wide basis and without regard to religion.

She is bitterly critical of the wealthy Protestants who have not only lorded it over Ulster, but also worked to keep the Protestant and Catholic working classes at each others throats. And of the extremist Ian Paisley she says: "His hatred is not of the Catholic Church; his hatred is of everything on the left, and his love is his own power."

But she can be equally caustic in her comments upon the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church to which she belongs. Terming the leadership "ultra-conservative," she continues: "Among the best traitors Ireland has ever had, Mother Church ranks at the very top, a massive obstacle in the path of equality and freedom. She has been a force for conservatism, not on the basis of preserving Catholic doctrine or preventing the corruption of her children, but simply to ward off threats to her own security and influence."

While admitting that "it will take a long time to achieve anything," she predicts: "In the end . . . it will come to a clash — for at no time have those in authority relinquished their position without a struggle. But when it comes to that, it must be fought not in the Six Counties by Catholics, but in Ireland as a whole by the working class. Only if it's an all-Ireland working-class revolution, are there enough of us to overthrow the powers that be."

These are the kinds of things this young firebrand has been uttering over and over again. Yet, she notes with frustration, her words go largely unheeded, and audiences judge her instead on her appearance, her youth, her sex, on the basis of nationality and outdated, emotional concepts.

Undoubtedly, she is quite correct. For instance, how many who cheered her and made financial contributions to the cause during her recent trip to the United States were even aware of her insistence that socialism is an absolute requisite for the salvation of her country?

Few of these contributors would have responded with that same enthusiasm to similar radical theories voiced by one of our own shaggy-haired revolutionaries.

But underneath the romanticized Joan of Arc myth that has been created around Bernadette Devlin by press and public is a very real and heroic person. She has far more in common with the New Leftist movement, that is international, than she does with the traditional Irish struggle for independence and reunion. Consistently, the older generations have judged these young activists by their appearance and from isolated incidents, on the basis of past concepts, rather than by their words and objectives and within the framework of today's realities.

It is, however, most difficult for even the most muddleheaded to misunderstand Bernadette Devlin any longer, after reading "The Price of My Soul." Nor is it easy to disagree with most of the points she makes, although one wishes she might have paid greater attention to the price Ireland may be called upon to pay in lost and precious tranquility in claiming its share of late 20th Century affluence and prosperity.

Her book is autobiographical. But its main focus is not upon her person but upon the land in which she has lived and its peculiar problems. It is well-written with her ideas advanced with force and spirit. One finishes its pages with the first real appreciation of just how complex is the Irish question. And with the firm belief that in its Bernadette Devlins Ireland may well have hatched a new kind of patriot capable of achievements of which its old rebels only dreamed.

BERNADETTE DEVLIN, daughter of a working class family, was in the front ranks of the Northern Ireland struggle for civil rights while still in her teens, and was elected to the British Parliament when only 21. She tells her story and outlines the expectations of a new breed of Irish patriot in her book "The Price of My Soul."

A BLOCKBUSTER in size, "The United States Marine Corps in World War II" (Random House, $17.95) is a mosaic of more than 100 pieces telling in great detail the role played by one of the world's most formidable and most colorful military organizations in the defeat of European Fascism and Japanese militarism.

The editor of this 965-page work is S. E. Smith, ex-newsman and television editor, now a freelance writer specializing in military and naval subjects.

"The United States Marine Corps in World War II" is in the pattern of "The United States Navy in World War II," which Smith edited earlier.

Rather than attempt to tell this huge story himself by rewriting the sources, Smith has chosen from among those sources, edited that material, and then reprinted the best of it verbatim. His contributors include men who took part in the action described and discussed, as well as analysts, historians and other after-the-fact experts.The range is from Gen. of the Army Douglas MacArthur to Marine Corps sergeants and privates. From John Hersey to Col. Gregory (Papa) Boyington. From Hanson Baldwin to Ernie Pyle.

For the average layman, it tells a great deal more about the men they call "the leathernecks" than they most probably will be able to digest. But for military buffs, for students of World War II and, no doubt, for ex-Marines, it will be a feast of information, covering as it does actions large and small, and working in a surprising amount of insight into the very human side of these celebrated fighting men.

" HOME & Garden Calendar 1970" from Hearthside Press Inc., 381 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y., 10016, also qualifies as an appointment pad and as a book as well.

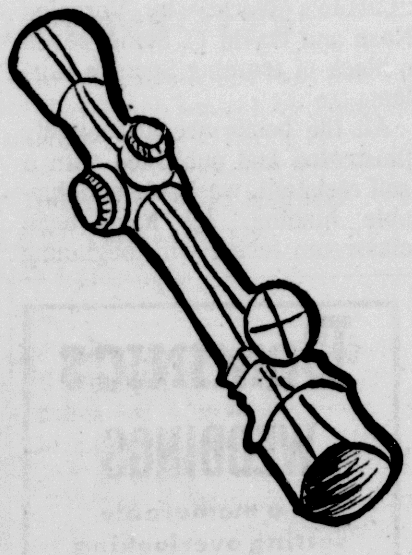
It provides a page for each week of the year, with provision for engagement memoranda morning, afternoon and evening of each day. There's a Christmas card register, space for additional notes, and a listing of 1970 and 1971 holidays as well as other important dates.

But what will catch the eyes of gardeners are the illustrations on the 52 pages facing the weekly calendar pages. Each bears a photograph of an award-winning floral arrangement with a brief description of the materials and how they were assembled. Some are shown in color. And it serves splendidly as a source of ideas and inspiration for other flower arrangers.

No price was listed on the review copy of the compact spiral-bound book-calendar which would make a nice gift for any flower-lover.

Sleuths & Suspense

DIVIDE BY SEVEN by Robert Chambers; Bobbs-Merrill, 244 pages, $5. Reviewed by Donald G. Davis.



Gangsters, narcotics and crooked politicians figure into this fast-paced story that puts detective Hank Moody squarely in the middle of crushing forces.

Assigned through politics to investigate the source of non-Mafia heroin, Moody finds he's working beyond accepted police procedure. Then the political support is yanked away and when he tries to cool it, Cuban exiles force him to work with them on a dangerous mission. At the same time the Mafia has him almost cornered.

There's only one way for Moody to go — down the tubes. But before he's completely cornered an important appointment washes out. From then on, the corpses stack.

Chambers has fashioned a fine mystery and appears to know his subjects well.

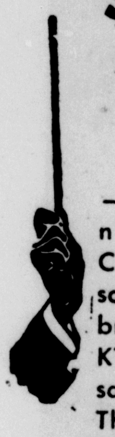
HI-FI STEREO

By C. J. Catanic
Audio Engineer



STEREO BROADCAST —Every Sunday afternoon from 2 to 3, Catania Sound is sponsoring a one hour stereo broadcast over station KTIM FM, and at the same time on KTIM AM. The program is "KEYBOARD IMMORTALS PLAY AGAIN." We are bringing you this musical adventure in cooperation with Sony Superscope.

Keyboard Immortals is a unique listening experience. It allows you to hear piano performances as if the artists themselves were sitting at the piano. In 1904, Edwin Welte, a 20-year-old scientist demonstrated a piano music reproduction mechanism that was far ahead of its time. He created an electrified piano using mercury under each key and a carbon plunger connected to each key that would dip into the mercury to make electrical contact. The circuit measured both duration and dynamics. Welte's electrified piano picked up the pianist's exact interpretation. The electrical impulses were recorded on a seismograph-like instrument, with an inking device for each key and pedal, that would trace the performance onto a paper roll mounted onto a slowly-revolving drum. After the performance, the ink tracings were punched out by hand, thus capturing forever the performances of the great pianists of that time.

To play back these rolls, Welte invented a robot piano player. This is a huge wood box with 80 fingers and two feet for the pedals. He called it a vorsetzer. The vorsetzer sits in front of the piano and its wooden fingers, each the length of a man's finger and felt-tipped, play the piano as if the original pianist himself were sitting there. Thus, this time machine has recorded for all time outstanding piano performances from some of the world's greatest artists.

Mr. Joseph S. Tushinsky, President of Sony Superscope, created "Keyboard Immortals." In 1960 after a long search, Mr. Tushinsky located a vorsetzer. Although it was quite battered, technicians after much work were able to rebuild the time machine. Now at Mr. Tushinsky's home it sits in front of a Bosendorfer Imperial Concert Grand Piano. Mr. Tushinsky, a professional musician himself, made stereo tape recordings of these fabous works using Sony microphones and tape recorders. You can hear them every Sunday from 2 to 3 in the afternoon. Please let us know if you like our program. Tape it off the air and keep it.

Especially For Women

By MAXINE KEOWN

Some new books of special interest to women:

"A FEAST OF FLOWERS" (Funk & Wagnalls, $6.95) by Francesca Tillona and Cynthia Strowbridge is a compilation of recipes with flowers among the ingredients — swordfish steak stuffed with rose or violet petals, marigold rice pudding, violet-periwinkle salad, daylilies Oriental-style, etc. Most of the recipes date back into times when flowers were more commonly used in cookery, but the co-editors have attempted to bring them up to date. There is also some brief discussion of the roles of flowers in medicine and cosmetics. The book will probably be more read than used, but flower gardeners with the non-spray approach may well be tempted to try a number of the suggested delicacies. Anyway, it is fun as a curiosity piece.

"METHODS & MANNERS OF COOKING" (Funk & Wagnalls, $7.95) by Bruce Axler, former editor of The Chef, is not a cookbook in the usual sense of collected recipes, but rather a cooking book in that it discusses techniques and procedures for the kitchen. Braising, for instance, is the subject of a chapter. So are stewing, baking, thickening, broiling, seasoning, etc. Axler then takes up specific foods — gravies, puddings, sweet sauces, beef, fish, etc. — discusses their special qualities at length, and goes into the specifics of their preparation. This is an especially useful book for the beginning cook — one that will help her over those problem spots where the regular cookbooks are to skimpy on details or instructions.

"THE WALDORF ASTORIA COOKBOOK" (Bobbs-Merrill, $12.50) by Ted James and Rosalind Cole is exactly what the title implies. The two authors have worked closely with Eugene R. Scanlon, director of food and beverage operations for the Waldorf-Astoria, in assembling the recipes for some of the dishes for which the New York hotel has long been famous. They tend to be on the gourmet side. Yet they promise to be well worth the special effort involved. And since hotel cooking puts a premium on efficiency, there are a number of dishes with a gourmet flair that are nevertheless quite simple to prepare. Along with a cookbook, you also get a brief history of the Waldorf-Astoria. Persons who have enjoyed a stay or stays there will be particularly appreciative of the book, finding in it, as they will, their favorite specialties of the house.

"THE LUSCHER COLOR TEST" (Random House, $6.95) is a translation from Dr. Max Luscher's German into English by Ian Scott of a book setting forth the fundamentals of color psychology, a somewhat controversial theory more in use professionally in Europe than in America. "It is not a parlor game," the jacket advises emphatically. Yet you can bet it will be used as such by many. With the book you get the color cards to be used in carrying out the intricate procedure developed by the Swiss psychologist in probing the personality. It is a fascinating concept, and, apparently, one with considerable professional acceptance.

"ASTROLOGY FOR ADULTS" (Holt, Rinehart, $7.95) by Joan Quigley, on the other hand, is quite another matter. Few, if any, psychiatrists or psychologists put any stock in astrology. Yet it is a belief that has persisted through centuries, periodically rising to new peaks of interest. Seemingly, we are riding one of those crests now, with astrology very much an "in" thing. Miss Quigley, a San Franciscan, learned her astrology, we are told, "from an elderly Scots lady." And her book purports to instruct you in how to develop and interpret your own horoscope. This one is strictly for believers, but apparently they are legion in numbers. Certainly, Miss Quigley approaches her subject with utmost seriousness.

"THE QUICK & EASY ELECTRIC SKILLET COOKBOOK" (Hawthorn, $5.95) by Ceil Dyer is a first-rate cooking manual that points up the unsuspected versatility of this particular method of cooking. From your electric skillet can come far more than bacon and eggs — dishes as varied as corncakes with blueberry syrup to Jamaican banana fritters and rum puffs with rum ice cream sauce. Mrs. Dyer claims the electric skillet "is the first really new way to cook since the old wood stove," perhaps a bit of an overstatement. But certainly her book is a big selling point for the electric skillet, with its growing popularity.

"BEAUTY AND HEALTH THE SCANDINAVIAN WAY" (Hawthorn, $6.95) is by Gunilla Knutson and Bill Gale, and if you don't recognize Miss Knutson's name, you'll have no difficulty placing the face which is on the book cover. She's the blonde temptress of the "Take it off, take it all off" Noxema television commercials. A teacher of gymnastics in new native Sweden and a representative of that country in the Miss Universe contest, she outlines Scandinavian principles in exercise, diet, grooming and health habits. It is a good book, based upon sound and proven practices of peoples long known for their robust good health. And Miss Knutson herself makes a most fetching model for the illustrations.

JOAN QUIGLEY
Making of a horoscope

Linda Clark is firmly established as one of the favorite writers of the health food and exercise crowd. Her newest book, "SECRETS OF HEALTH AND BEAUTY" (Devin-Adair, $5.95), is largely a restatement of her earlier "Stay Young Longer" and "Get Well Naturally," directed particularly toward the women. The emphasis is upon "natural" materials and techniques with nutrition in the forefront. And if many experts disagree with or minimize her teachings, it remains a fact that she commands a large and loyal following of apparently well-satisfied readers and students. Linda Clark fans will know what to expect. The message is unchanged.

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

There is an abundance of books designed to acquaint children with what other lands and their peoples are like. There are far fewer aimed at illuminating life in differing sections of our own country.

McGraw-Hill has set out to fill that void with a new Our Living Neighborhoods Series.

Four books tell about four American children, their interests, activities and adventures in their own neighborhoods.

There are "Sam's Country" by Frances Priddy, illustrations by Taylor Oughton, set in a small Minnesota town that "smells good . . . of long grass and growing things"; there is "Casey's Cove" by Michael Mason and John Hanna, about a lad in a New England seacoast village who thinks of the ocean as a friend but knows it has its dangerous side; there is "Sandra's View" by Barbara Rinkoff and Ethel Gold, telling of a small apartment-dweller in suburban Riverdale, N.Y.; and "Carlito's World" by Veronica Nash and David K. Stone, set in a block of teeming Spanish Harlem.

All the books are attractively illustrated and published with a soil resistant, washable and durable binding. All have been classroom tested with beginning second or third level readers. And all offer authentic, down-to-earth, yet interesting insights into one particular way-of-life among America's rich diversity.

The series is off to a splendid start.

Some other new books for children:

"Who Will Comfort Toffle?" is a charming story for the young readers, written by Tove Jansson, printed in Great Britain and published by Henry Z. Walck ($14). It is full of Scandinavian creatures of the woods and seashore. In whimsical verse and charming illustration the sad Toffle and his companions tell a sweet story. Perhaps the lonely Toffle can forget his own troubles when he feels compelled to help another creature.

"Apricot ABC," written by Miska Miles, illustrated by Peter Parnall, (Atlantic Monthly Press, $4.95) starts with "A for apricot" but is more than just another alphabet book. The life of a meadow, the tiny creatures, the plant and animal life provide a simple story of their own — including a proper villain, a fat monster of a clucking hen who finds the apricot a delicious meal. The illustrations are outstanding and complement the text, which is delightful.

"The Dirt Book" by Eva Knox Evans is an everything book that should fascinate and inform young readers (10-14). Published by Little Brown and Co., ($3.75) and illustrated by Robert Quakenbush, it is a fund of information on dirt and the many reasons why dirt is so important to us. It tells where dirt came from, how it was formed, the kinds of dirt and what each kind does for people. Included are simple experiments that should intrigue young scientists.

JANIS JOPLIN
She's as electrifying as ever

The Stereo Scene With Sunier

By JOHN SUNIER

Herewith my choices of the cream of the rock crop in recent weeks:

THE BEATLES "ABBEY ROAD" — Apple SO-383:

The boys have done it again. A warm feeling of wit and humanity exudes from the Beatles' latest LP. The foursome have never really lost the good-natured mood which others such as Bob Dylan have recently embraced.

In common with Dylan, they are also charging an additional dollar for this album, which has incensed many of their fans. However, the good feeling of such tracks as "Here Comes the Sun," and "Golden Slumbers," and the groovy changes of the major tune "Because" dissipate any annoyance over opportunist record companies.

Though no printed lyrics are included this time, the words are very clearly heard throughout, and some of them are real mind-bogglers.

JANIS JOPLIN — "I GOT DEM OL' KOSMIC BLUES AGAIN MAMA!" — Columbia KCS-9913:

The long-awaited new Janis LP is out!

Side 2, with "To Love Somebody," and a wild version of the standard "Little Girl Blue" in addition to the title tune, finds rock's top gal vocalist in the best form she's ever evidenced on records. From sexy whisper-breathing to 100-decibel tonsil-terrorizing, Janis is electrifying as ever.

Though her old guitarist, Sam Andrew, is featured in the new group backing her, the musical level of the group is shockingly low. But Janis is the thing, and she makes it easy to tune out the backing.

CROSBY, STILLS & NASH — Atlantic SD-8229:

A real gem of an album with everything going for it! The vocal lines, meaning and blend, is uppermost here. While "Marrakesh Express" has been the big hit, the 10 tunes all feature lyrics of the highest level. "Long Time Gone" strikes me as the best recent protest-type song. Printed lyrics are included for poring over the often wildly-surreal word-pictures of the three composer-performers.

WEST — "BRIDGES" — Epic BN 26433:

West is a soft-spoken, countrified, jazz-tinged rock sextet of great skill and good taste. They are next to impossible to describe, except that I know I dig them. My two favorites on the album were "Funeral on the Beach," and the lovely "Looking Back Johanna." There are no notes on the very individual-sounding group, but at least one of the members is an occasional Marinite.

2 Schools Of Thought On Painting Ceilings

There are strong advocates and equally strong opponents of the method of painting a ceiling while standing on the floor.

Those who favor it say that it is easier, faster and safer. Those who are against it say that it is more likely to cause dripping and that it is more difficult and more tiring.

PAINTING A ceiling in this manner involves the use of a roller attached to a long handle, permitting the user to stand on the floor during the operation except for the careful work necessary at the points where the walls meet the ceiling.

The first time we tried this method, we weren't too enthusiastic about it, especially when an after-job stiff neck developed. The second time, after a professional painter showed us the necessity of keeping the roller well ahead of us, we found it easier and faster.

Regardless of whether you paint a ceiling from the floor or a ladder or whether you use a roller or a brush, there are certain steps that should be taken to produce good results. Possibly the most important is to prepare the surface for the paint by filling all cracks and patching all gaps, using one of the powdery materials that requires only mixing with water, after dirt and dust have been removed.

CEILING SHOULD be painted across the width rather than the length. This is true whether using a roller or brush, a latex, oil or any type of paint.

No matter what you have heard about paints that don't leave lap marks, it's still better to work across the narrow part of the ceiling.

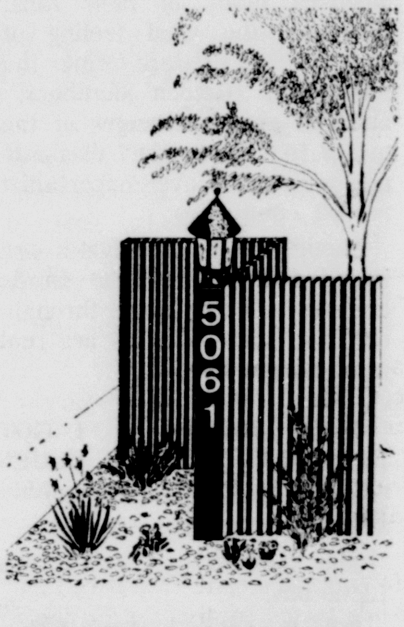
Paint should always be rolled or brushed from a dry area into a wet one, insuring that there won't be an excessive amount of paint where the overlaps occur. When using a roller — and especially with latex paint — apply a narrow strip around the perimeter of the ceiling.

If the walls are not being painted and you want to protect them, use a handy metal strip known as a painter's time saver. Or you can use pieces of cardboard of the type sometimes placed in new men's shirts or those returned from a laundry.

FLAT PAINTS are recommended for most ceilings because they reflect light without a great deal of glare. Gloss or semi-gloss enamels are preferred in kitchens and bathrooms because of their high resistance to moisture, steam, fumes and grease.

Consider carefully whether you want to paint the ceiling of a room without painting the walls. A newly painted ceiling often makes the walls of a room appear dingy unless the walls are in very good shape.

HUNTER'S HELP



ON DARK nights, it is easy to see house numbers, if they are affixed to an attractive lamp post near the street so that they are illuminated by the light. The lamp here is set into a low screen of spaced cedar one-by-fours nailed edge out. The installation also calls attention to the front walk.

LANDSCAPING A sloping lot can be an opportunity as well as a challenge for the home owner because it gives him a chance to showcase a variety of plant materials. By incorporating groundcovers and trailing-type plants with other shrubs and trees, it is possible to overcome the problems of the terrain.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ If you can still find flower bulbs in the nurseries, some of the lesser-known ones, such as sparaxis, watsonias, muscari, snowdrops, will give you a lot of color mileage, planted now in informal drifts or groupings.

✓ Special crabgrass controls should be applied this month.

✓ Don't overlook the traditional and beautiful poinsettia when it comes to decking the halls with holiday decor.

✓ Every garden should have some type of "Christmas berry" shrub. Pyracantha, cotoneaster and holly are some deserving of your consideration.

✓ Peaches and nectarines will be subject to leaf curl next spring if not sprayed now, and again in February or March.

✓ Don't overlook plants when you shop for Christmas gifts.

✓ And pick up that living Christmas tree right away. The rush is on for these beautiful evergreens.

Take Advantage Of Your Sloping Lot

Gardening Page

Its hills and rolling terrain are among the features that make Marin so marvelous.

It also means that more than a few Marin home owners are confronted with the property problem of a sloping lot when they go about their landscaping. Not all of them know how to deal with it.

But fortunately, nurseries offer such a wealth of plant materials suited to dressing up these slopes that it is relatively easy to transform such ground into an attractive asset to your property and your neighborhood.

ONE APPROACH is to terrace the slope and arrange your plantings accordingly.

Low retaining walls built from brick or masonry blocks, redwood, broken concrete or even railroad ties can be constructed along the contours of the slope. Then treat each level in planting as if it were a raised bed.

This is where the variety of plant materials can be used with special advantage — dwarf and trailing plants, choice shrubs, succulents, rock garden specialities, etc.

THERE ARE two important factors to take into consideration in selecting your plants — water and climate.

Unless a sprinkling system is to be installed, drouth-resistant plants should be planted closer to the outdoor living area where their needs can be more easily satisfied.

With both mild summers and mild winters, climate is a less limiting factor in Marin than almost anywhere else in the country. The nurseries literally are crammed with plantings that will flourish under our growing conditions.

IN OUR coastal gardens, ivy geranium is a dependable choice to fill in a hillside and provide color. Dwarf bougainvilleas are also used there, although these do not do as well on Marin slopes as they do at some other places in the state.

Inland a little, either gazanias or ceanothus can be relied upon to decorate a grade or embankment without requiring any great attention from their growers.

Junipers and vincas are tough plantings that will do the job for you anywhere.

BUT THERE are a host of other planting opportunities for hillside gardeners, awaiting them at the nearest nursery. For instance, take a careful look at the larger-growing shrubs that can be used to complement and supplement the lower-growing ones already enumerated.

The thing is to look at that sloping lot, not as an insurmountable obstacle to good landscaping, but as an asset that is going to contribute to your objective.

Flat can be awfully dull. A slope rarely is — unless its gardener has given up too soon.

A Border Calls For Some Creative Gardening

In the East, gardeners plant a traditional perennial border, and enjoy it during the warm months — when the border isn't covered with snow.

In Marin, gardeners can ejoy such a planting every season and have an enviable opportunity to create something extra special — to express themselves in garden terms.

A foundation planting is relatively stable, requiring little more than shaping the permanent shrubs. The perennial border differs, in that it is a workshop for innovations. The border undergoes changes as the gardener seeks to achieve his goal of year-round interest — or color.

NURSERYMEN agree there are many combinations of plants that work well for the border planting.

Beautiful results are achieved in California by combining annuals, perennials, shrubs and bulbs. The various combinations are up to the gardener and offer him a chance to show a creative flair.

No one flower or shrub should dominate the garden border. Group plantings of certain plants can be repeated, if desired, to afford continuity.

FOR INSTANCE, groups of delphinium can be spotted here and there in sunny borders for spring and summer bloom. A Chinese magnolia can be planted nearby to balance the color palette in spring.

Add to this several groups of daffodils, irregularly spaced around the border for an even more spectacular springtime border.

By selecting material and grouping it this way you can arrange to have color in each section of the border on a year-round basis. No one area is completely in bloom or completely out at any given time.

SEASONAL COLOR bearers are plentiful at nurseries. Some, such as roses, provide continual garden color. Marguerites and other perennials are a source of many, many heavy-flowering annuals.

Bulbs, both spring and summer-flowering, are majestic border beauties.

Fall? Rely on dahlias and chrysanthemums — and red-berried pyracanthas for background color. Within the border use scarlet Japanese barberry and crimson heavenly bamboo.

Winter color comes from a surprising number of sources — camellias and azaleas, fragrant daphne, and flowering quince. Winter also gives us heathers, and a gardenful of annuals such as calendulas and Iceland poppies.

When you come right down to it, there are so many possibilities, one's imagaination is the only limiting factor.

MAKE LIKE YOU OWN THE PLACE

There has been a wee little revolution at Bellach's Design Center

Revolution at a furniture store? Yes, indeed, and the best part is that you come out on top.

We have overthrown a system that's been around too long. The system where the furniture store lined up all the furniture in rows and made you try to figure out how it would look in your own room. Our new system makes it easy for you to visualize just how it is going to look in your home. Everything is set up in complete room settings. All you have to do is imagine how it would look in your own room.

The Best Part Is That You Come Out On Top

So from now on when you want to get some ideas for your home, you know where to come. Come to Bellach's and see literally thousands of ideas in the furniture store that has everything for your your home.

That's why we had our little revolution... to make furniture shopping for your home a little nicer for you.

FALSE TEETH
KLUTCH holds them tighter
KLUTCH forms a comfort cushion; holds dental plates so much firmer and snugger that you can eat and talk with greater comfort and security; in many cases almost as well as with natural teeth. Klutch lessens the constant fear of a dropping, rocking, chafing plate . . . If your druggist doesn't have Klutch, don't waste money on substitutes, but send us 10c and we will mail you a generous trial box.

Tribulations Of A TV Producer

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — What does the television producer of a hit show do when one of his stars;

1. —Drops dead
2. —Quits in a rage
3. —Breaks a leg.

"You pray a lot," said producer Don Fedderson of "My Three Sons," "Family Affair" and "The Lawrence Welk Show."

He also buys insurance by the carload lot.

"IT'S VERY expensive insurance because you need at least three quarters of a million dollars by mid season," Fedderson explained. "If something happens to your star and you have no show, you are out of business."

Fedderson added a few gray hairs this season when Anissa Jones, the dimpled 11-year-old blonde of "Family Affair," broke her leg when the show was on hiatus.

The producer considered replacing her, as he did Bill Frawley with Bill Demarest in "My Three Sons," and Sebastian Cabot temporarily with John Williams when the former was hospitalized for nine weeks.

"I KEPT Anissa because the public fell in love with her," Fedderson said. "She broke her leg in May and was supposed to be able to perform without cast or crutches when we began shooting in June.

"The doctors miscalculated so we delayed the start of production. Finally specialists told us it might take longer. So we shot our first four shows with Anissa in a cast, hope it would be all over."

Sure enough, Anissa healed and the CBS-TV series rolled along for another seven shows depicting the little girl without a cast.

UNFORTUNATELY Anissa was not covered by insurance because the accident took place during hiatus when the policies are lifted.

Fedderson bore the loss.

All was well until Aug. 2 when a mended Anissa spent a Saturday at the beach, dashing in and out of the surf.

Fedderson continued with a catch in his throat: "A giant wave crashed onto the beach and turned Anissa upside down. When she came to the surface her leg was broken in exactly the same place as before."

THE PRODUCER stifled what might have been a sob.

He was then stuck with four shows featuring Anissa with a cast on her leg and seven without it. Plans for beaming the first four episodes with the cast were junked and will be tacked on later in the year.

"We'll have 15 segments with Anissa in a cast," Fedderson said. "That's an awfully long time for a broken leg to mend, but we don't have too many options."

Unfortunately, Fedderson can't collect insurance for the second broken bone. Anissa was at the beach and not on the sound stage.

"Ah, well," Fedderson concluded. "Nobody forced me to become a television producer."

SUICIDE

I sit alone with eyes on the bay,
and wonder how it was with you,
before—

White-faced, grief stricken:
Was it that you suddenly knew,
the emptiness as people turn away
leaving only a sick smile,
throat-frozen words and terror?

Would it have made a difference,
had you known,
across cold water, locked in a fortress,
there lived one soul who needed
whatever it was you had to give?

SAN QUENTIN PRISON BOBBY GENE MILLER

SHARK

Fin soup — scimitar in the dusk and sleek-stretched leather.
hammerheads and high heels in the evening cocktails over weekend swimmers —
switchblade in the reefs, prowling stark eyes and soft underbelly.
